City Hall Plot In New York Foiled by Police

Ex-Detective Escapes Cordon; Wiretapper Says Lawyer Hired Him

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP).—A spectacular plot to learn secrets of city officials in New York and other cities by tapping their telephone wires was reported today by Mayor William O'Dwyer.

One of two men taken into custody coolly duped his captors at City Hall and escaped through a window.

Despite a police net around all exits from Manhattan and the activities of scores of detectives, he remained free many hours later.

IN CUSTODY

The other man, allegedly hired to operate the wiretaps, remained in custody.

City Hall authorities said he was talking freely, making "startling revelations, naming prominent names and organizations in public and business affairs."

There was potential political dynamite in the bizarre affair, with a hint from City Hall officials that political foes of O'Dwyer may be involved.

Kenneth Ryan, 45-year-old retired city detective and wiretapping expert, was the man who leaped from a City Hall window.

O'Dwyer announced Ryan had admitted he was hired by an attorney to make the wiretaps on the phones of the mayor himself and about 75 subordinate officials.

Police said his attorney also hired Edward Jones, former Treasury Department agent, the man who allegedly was telling them the story involving prominent persons.

A subpoena was issued for the attorney. Detectives went to his apartment but he was not taken into custody immediately.

The mayor said the wiretaps also were to be placed on lines of officials in Chicago and Detroit.

Sharp British Note Accuses Bulgaria

Declares Attack on Church Violation of Peace Treaty

LONDON, March 13 (Sunday) (AP).—Britain charged today that Bulgaria has no intention of living up to her peace treaty guarantees of political and religious freedom.

The charge was made in a sharp protest note against the trial of 13 Protestant church leaders. It declared the churchmen's confessions that they spied for Britain were "completely false," and added:

"STRONGER STEPS"

An informed source close to the Foreign Office said Britain may "take stronger steps" later.

The peace treaties with Bulgaria and other former Nazi satellite states provide that disputes over violation of the pacts shall be settled by the United Nations if direct negotiations fail.

"Throughout the trial the Bulgarian Government has shown itself clearly more interested in the dissemination of propaganda than in the administration of justice," said the British note made public here by the Foreign Office. "In order to destroy the liberty of these churchmen it has sought to represent constitutional opposition to the Government as criminal; the provision of information implicit in the armistice agreement as treasonable, and normal social contacts between the pastor and members of His Majesty's legation as espionage."

The note said the trial has convinced Britain that the Bulgarian Government "has no intention of giving effect to its solemn obligations under the terms of the treaty of peace to guarantee the fundamental freedoms to its people."

Under the 1944 armistice with Bulgaria Allied missions were sent to the country to see that disarmament and other conditions were carried out. During the armistice period prior to the effectiveness of the peace treaty in 1947, these missions were entitled to collect military and other information.

Warning Sounded For Reds

WINDSOR, Ont., March 12 (CP).—Prime Minister St. Laurent warned tonight that any expressions by Canadian Communists supporting Russia in the event of war will be considered treasonable. The Prime Minister added that such action would be dealt with under existing law.

The Prime Minister was addressing a public meeting and was evidently refering to statements made by some European Communist leaders that they will welcome Russian forces on the soil of their countries.

Mr. St. Laurent said "in Canada, that would be treasonable conduct for which we have laws with plenty of teeth to prevent that going on."

He said the Government does not intend to take steps itself to root out radical elements from labor unions in Canada. The unions were doing a good job themselves in this direction and the Dominion did not need a Taft-Hartley Law, he said.

His stay in Windsor ended the first day of a week-end swing through Southwestern Ontario.

Tomorrow he visits Amherstburg, and is formally welcomed to Windsor.

Reinforcements Ordered To Arab Port by British

LONDON, March 12 (AP).—Britain ordered reinforcements today to Aqaba, Trans-Jordan's tiny Red Sea port. Five miles away, across the Gulf of Aqaba, Jewish armored columns are in possession of the Negev's short Red Sea coastline.

Trans-Jordan, which signed a cease-fire pact for the whole Palestine front yesterday at Rhodes, has informed Britain officially of the Israeli advance to the Red Sea shore. Israel says the territory is hers under the United Nations partition arrangement.

Although Israel disclaimed any intention of attacking or transgressing, Britain obviously is viewing the situation as dangerous. The British and their ally, Trans-Jordan, do not recognize the Israeli claim to the southern wedge of the Negev.

Amman quarters accused the Israelis of trying to grab what they want and present the United Nations with an accomplished fact, as they did with the seizure of Arab Beersheba from the Egyptians last October.

HAS TREATY

Britain has a treaty with Trans-Jordan which would require her to go to the aid of King Abdullah's nation if it should be attacked. About 1,000 British troops were sent to Aqaba in January at Abdullah's request.

U.S. Soldier, Companions Shot to Death

MANILA, March 12 (AP).—A hail of bullets from ambush killed an American soldier and two Filipino girls today. Five other girls were wounded.

The assailants opened fire with rifles and tommyguns on an army bus within 300 yards of the big United States air base at Clark Field, 60 miles north of Manila in Central Luzon.

The bus, driven by an American soldier, was taking a group back home from a dance at the base. The driver and the two girls were killed instantly. Military police rushed the five wounded girls to a hospital at San Fernando in Pampanga Province.

Odd Accident Causes Injury

PORTLAND, March 12 (AP).—One man was burned today when an underground electric oil switch burst into flames and tossed a manhole cover loose at a crowded midtown intersection.

The St. Vincent's Hospital reported Donald Moore, 22, of Auburn, Wash., was burned about the right arm, legs and face by the oil flames. He was not in serious condition, the hospital said.

Operation On King Successful

The nine royal doctors who gathered around an operating table set up in a Buckingham Palace bedroom reported later the Kings condition was "entirely satisfactory."

A later bulletin tonight said the King "had a restful day" and his recovery from the operation is "proceeding smoothly."

The operation was brief but delicate.

The surgeon, Prof. James R. Learmonth, severed a nerve near the spine which controls the tension of the main artery in the King's right leg.

For five months King George has suffered from faulty blood circulation in the legs that might have caused gangrene and loss of the feet.

BULLETINS

Paid Agents

VANCOUVER, March 12 (CP). — Wladimir Kossar, president of the Ukrainian National Federation, charged in Vancouver today that a well-organized fifth column and many paid Russian agents are operating in Canada.

"Most of it," he added, "is being directed at youth."

Calls Settlement

The 12-day talkathon may be at an end.

With his legislative program at an absolute standstill in the Senate, Mr. Truman gave his blessing to a conference called for Sunday to work out a compromise.

English Group Plans Island Dream Colony

A 15-ton sailing yacht, the Cerise, is expected somewhere off Vancouver Island in the near future, its passengers planning to establish a "dream colony" on the Island.

An article in a recent issue of The Glasgow Weekly News, sent The Colonist by Robert McGill, 895 Cormorant Street, tells of the ambition of two young English brothers to establish a new colony on Vancouver Island—but they do not say where or when.

FIFTEEN TONS

"Any day now the 15-ton sailing yacht Cerise will sail from Dartmouth to Vancouver Island, off the West Coast of Canada, to establish a dream colony.

"Behind the scheme are Colin Smith, 27, and his brother Stanley, 29, of Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, Colin, an aircraft fitter, and Stanley, working in his father's boat-building business, were both R.A.F. pilots during the war."

In the article, Colin is quoted as saying:

"We decided on Vancouver Island because land there is comparatively cheap. We shall seed up to 300 acres as the future home for a working community of several hundred youngish people. By that I mean ranging in age from 20 to say, 40, but we will not be particular to a year or two either way if the person is otherwise suitable.

WORK NEEDED

"We want all who join us to be prepared to work for the common good. All resources will be shared, also all burdens. Our aim will be a high standard of social security and an equally high standard of living.

"We shall develop our own land and build our own homes. This will mean living primitively at first, but we are prepared for this. Eventually everything will be modern and up-to-date."

The article says most of the brothers' savings have been used up in purchasing the yacht, which is valued at about £1,500. But lack of money doesn't worry them.

Two other young men, Eric Hamblin and Denny Jones, free-lance journalists, will make the voyage with them, but Jones may not join the settlement.

Recruits, the article said, will be enrolled when they are required. Some may come from Great Britain, but the majority will be Canadians, it stresses.

Airlift Total Breaks Record

BERLIN, March 12 (AP).—The British-American airlift racked up another record tonight. By hauling 7,043 tons of supplies into Berlin over the Soviet blockade in the last 24 hours, airlift pilots piled up a total of 45,883 tons for the week.

Holdup Aftermath

—Central Press Canadian.

After a wild gun battle a few blocks from the White House in Washington, police captured two men who admitted taking part in the holdup of a Baltimore & Ohio train near Martinsburg, W.Va. Luman Ramsdell, 23, of Youngstown, Ohio, wounded in the exchange of fire in a pawnshop, is shown being removed on a stretcher.

Work Seen To Ease Job Lack

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., March 12 (CP).—Federal Works Department officials in New Westminster reported today plans are getting under way for large-scale works projects, drafted during war years and intended to ease unemployment expected with conversion of industry from war to peace.

Kenneth Morton, chief engineer for the Federal Department in British Columbia, said the postwar projects include new harbors, fishermen's floats, dredging and construction of wharves and breakwaters, especially in Northern Coastal waters.

These projects are additional to the public works estimates for British Columbia, for the 1949 fiscal year, to be tabled this month.

Mr. Morton said one of the largest items in the ordinary estimates is a $1,500,000 south jetty at the mouth of the Fraser River.

An additional $800,000 is required for repairs and expansion to the north jetty, originally proposed as a postwar project.

City Boy, Nine, Held for Week In Apartment

A prospective tenant for the suite notified police of the incident.

He told police that when he attempted to move into the apartment he found the landlady had a young boy with her. The boy apparently had not been to school for a week. There had been no heat in the building for the same period, he told police.

The woman was arrested later on a warrant signed by her mother under the Mental Hospitals Act, police said.

The youngster was turned over to the Children's Aid Society.

Greenland Base Problem May Be Solved by Pact

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP).—High United States officials told Denmark's Foreign Minister today the Atlantic Treaty would provide a "framework" to solve the long-pending problem of American air bases on Greenland.

American strategists are known to believe that if United States bases in Greenland, Iceland and the Azores — or use of them — can be arranged under the pact it will permanently strengthen defences of the entire Atlantic area.

But today's talk between State Department leaders and Foreign Minister Gustav Rasmussen provided the first definite information that United States officials do in fact feel the treaty will greatly ease the base situation.

Rasmussen seeks to ascertain the benefits and obligations for Denmark in joining the pact.

When Rasmussen left he said that the group talked about prospects for United States military aid to Western Europe under the treaty. He said they "also discussed several aspects of the Greenland problem."

Actually it was learned that the American representatives emphasized three points.

1. The proposed Atlantic Treaty would provide a "framework" for dealing with the base problem in the future.

2. The treaty will be primarily useful to prevent attack. It would array beforehand powerful forces to strike back at any aggressor, so that the attack might never occur.

3. Under the treaty the member nations in North America and Western Europe will be able to take all the co-operative actions necessary to strengthen the defences of the whole area.

During the World War the United States took defence of Greenland under an agreement which still is in force but which the Danes, two years later, proposed to terminate.

The Danish Government was forced to act mainly by Communist critics in Parliament. The negotiations have been dragging along ever since.

More Intoxicated Drivers Cause Police Concern

Already there have been seven compared with last year's entire total of 16. At the present rate, police expect 1949 convictions to exceed those of 1948.

There were three convictions against motorists for driving while intoxicated between Monday and Saturday of last week. Trial of one other driver is pending.

Statistics compiled by the city police department show there has been an average of about 25 accidents weekly since the start of the year. One week there were 33 accidents. From 232 accidents already this year, 40 persons have been injured and two killed.

"Dull" Edmonton Boom Causes Fear Of Nightmare Invasion by Workers

EDMONTON, March 12 (CP).—An Edmonton newspaper said today that 10,000 workers threaten to invade the city during May, June and July, lured by boomtown prospects.

The story said there will be possibly 20,000 or 25,000 people moving to Edmonton when the "army of 10,000 workers" bring their families.

MAINLY UNSKILLED

"Drawn from the Prairie farms, the British Columbia forests and the growing lists of unemployed in 'flattening off' industrial areas of Vancouver and Ontario, such an invasion, mainly of unskilled labor, threatens to burst completely Edmonton's already-bulging seams and turn the city's 'dull but orderly' boom into a minor nightmare.

"Housing accommodation will be available for none of the invaders and jobs will be available for less than half of them, even if all projects in an $80,000,000 major construction program in and fanning out from Edmonton get early starts.

"This program includes Imperial Oil Limited's $50,000,000 pipeline to Regina, McColl-Frontenac's $10,000,000 refinery, $12,000,000 in hotel construction and at least $8,000,000 in other major building.

"Requiring mainly skilled workers, this program excludes $30,000,000 of general construction.

"Main defences in stemming the invasion will be the Unemployment Insurance Commission, whose National Employment Service offices across Canada are discouraging workers from rushing to Edmonton before they have definite jobs guaranteed them."

No Germ War Super-Weapon Now Says Forrestal, But Gives Warning

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP).—The military establishment said flatly tonight there isn't any "biological super-weapon" which can kill multitudes by germ warfare.

But, said Defence Secretary Forrestal in the first official statement on the subject in three years, "it would be folly to under-estimate the potentialities of biological warfare."

He was backed up in that statement by one of the foremost authorities on bacterial war, Maj.-Gen. Alden H. Waitt, chief of the Army's Chemical Corps.

MISUNDERSTANDING

The department had sought to straighten out some "widespread misunderstanding" in the public mind. Waitt, in a press conference based on Forrestal's formal statement, said:

"This method of warfare has great potentialities—but it is a weapon of the future. . . . I am satisfied that this is a most potentially important weapon."

Forrestal warned that the nation must guard against saboteurs striking with disease weapons before a declaration of war. He said food supplies would be especially vulnerable.

The Government, after an original press release on biological warfare in 1946, had up to now clamped the tightest type of secrecy on the whole project.

It finally was goaded into today's discussion of what Forrestal called "extravagant, inaccurate and unduly spectacular" unofficial discussions of ways to kill or sicken populations or livestock and destroy their crops.

The gist of what Forrestal and Waitt said was this:

1. The use of disease as a weapon is practical.

2. At present, it is possible to produce the most deadly forms of poison, including botulanus toxin. However, most of these super-killers presently live only in laboratory test tubes.

3. So far an absolute means of swift and wide spreading of the agents of biological warfare hasn't been perfected.

Predicts Year Almost Free From Strikes

EDMONTON, March 12 (CP).—A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, today said industry in Canada can look forward to a year comparatively free of strike action according to present indications on the labor front.

Apart from a few gold mining groups in British Columbia, no organization or union affiliated with the C.C.L. has indicated any move toward strike action, said Mr Mosher. The mining groups already have announced their intention to take a strike vote.

He said the C.C.L. is concerned with avoiding strikes rather than fostering them.

The union leader said Communism and Fascism are "twins." He said it was well known that Communists are active in many labor groups and other organizations as well, but added that the C.C.L. is "taking definite steps" to eliminate them in its organization.

Accident Run Proves Low But Two Hurt

Victoria's Saturday run of traffic accidents yesterday was below average, but two persons were slightly injured, city police reports showed.

Injured were Brynmor Gwynne, 58, of 1647 Hampshire Road, shock; and Mrs. Gertrude Chiny, 3000 Carrol Street, head bruises. Mrs. Chiny was discharged from Royal Jubilee Hospital after treatment.

Police said Gwynne was crossing Douglas Street at 8 p.m. from the west to east curb between Princess Street and Queens Avenue when in collision with a car.

Driver of the car was Thomas Armstrong, 3403 Bethune Avenue, police said. His car was impounded.

In the other accident, police said a car going north on Douglas and turning west on Pigard Street, driven by Edna C. Frank, 948 McKenzie Street, was in collision with a car driven south on Douglas by Archibald Chiney, 3000 Carrol Street.

Damage to Frank's car was $40.

Claims Delay By Firemen Aided Blaze

EDMONTON, March 12 (CP). — Walter S. Campbell, an official of a company which suffered heavy loss in a $1,000,000 fire this week, today said formal charges of inefficiency will be laid against the fire department in connection with the blaze.

Mr. Campbell charged there was unnecessary delay in opening a door leading to the packing room on the fourth floor where the fire started.

Fireman failed to open a fire door on the outer east wall that would have given them easy control of the fire soon after it started, he said.

Fire Chief James Macgregor yesterday said he believes the fire was fought "as efficiently as possible." He said he was not instituting any investigation.

He said the same charges were laid 20 years ago when the same building suffered major fire damage.

Chief Macgregor also said yesterday he would welcome an investigation into the fire department's work during the fire which gutted the top storys of the Northern Hardware building in downtown Edmonton.

New Army Town Thrives

It is expected first families will move into permanent married quarters at Shilo early in April.

Rome Parley to Discuss Means To Cut World Building Costs

LAKE SUCCESS, March 12 (AP).—The International Labor Office said today delegates from 21 countries will meet in Rome, Wednesday, to confer on means of reducing house-building costs.

Such costs have risen as much as 125 per cent in Canada and 350 per cent in Holland in eight years, the I.L.O. said.

STABILIZE INDUSTRY

Director-General David A. Morse said the delegates would consider measures intended to stabilize the building industry such as: Use of mass-produced housing parts, new techniques and materials, standardization and modular design, collective bargaining methods, establishment of Government public works reserves, long-range planning and labor-management co-operation.

I.L.O. figures show the rise in house-building costs between 1939 and the end of 1947 were: Australia, 80 to 85 per cent; Canada, 110 to 125 per cent; Britain, 130 per cent; The Netherlands, 350 per cent; Sweden, 153.2 per cent; United States, 106.7 per cent.

OTTAWA, March 12 (CP). — Labor Minister Mitchell today announced the names of Canada's delegates to the second session of the building, civil engineering and public works committee of the International Labor Organization.

Government representative on the Canadian delegation is J. Lorne MacDougall, industrial relations officer of the Labor Department. J. McLeod of Toronto will act as his adviser.

Employer representatives are John N. Flood of Saint John, N.B., and Harold G. MacDonald of Edmonton. Labor delegates are J. Woolsey of Toronto, international representative of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, and Jose Dorion of Quebec City, vice-president of the building confederation, Canadian Confederation of Catholic Workers.

The committee will discuss recruitment and training, industrial relations and instability of employment in the industry.

Helicopter Saves Man From Mud

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP).—A police helicopter today saved a stranded man as he was being swallowed by soft mud in Jamaica Bay.

The helicopter bucked a 58-mile wind for six minutes to reach Frank Vaccaro, 34, of Brooklyn, who was up to his neck in the mud.

Vaccaro's ten-year-old son, John, was rescued from the same mud bank by a human chain, but the father had been out of reach.

The father and son climbed out into the ooze to dislodge a rowboat in which they were fishing after it became stuck against the mud bank 150 feet off firm land.

Vaccaro and his son tonight were reported in "fair" condition, suffering from shock and submersion.

End of Strike Not Sighted

PORTLAND, Ore., March 12 (AP). —There appeared little chance today that Portland's two daily newspapers will get back into operation before late next week—if then.

The shut-down of the papers was in its 23rd day today, and threatened to stretch out much further as publishers and two A.F.L. unions tangled over pay and new working agreements.

Pacifist Group in U.S. Plans to Withhold Tax

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP).—A pacifist Presbyterian minister said today 150 members of a peace-seeking group had decided they would not pay any federal income taxes to be used for financing "war preparations."

The Rev. A. J. Muste, national secretary of The Peacemaker said today he himself was one of "about 15" members of the organization in the New York City area who have launched the tax resistance movement.

Muste described the peacemakers as a "non-violent revolutionary pacifist group engaged in a campaign similar to that of the late Mahatma Gandhi in India." The organization has about 2,000 members, he said.

The 150 persons throughout the country who have joined in the tax resistance movement, Muste said, have either decided "to withhold all their taxes or just that part of them which proportionately would go to war preparations."

In explaining the movement, Muste said:

"The greatest possible evil today is that of atomic and biological war. We must use every possible means, including that of civil disobedience, to stop the possibility of our country waging war."

Election for B.C. Seen in Mid-June

VANCOUVER, March 12 (CP).—A Vancouver newspaper said today that British Columbians can look for a Provincial general election in mid-June.

It forecast polling day would be either June 13 or June 20, saying:

"A favorite election day in British Columbia is Monday, and the Mondays closest to mid-June are the 13th and 20th."

Competition Often Forces Price Changes

VANCOUVER, March 12 (CP). — Competition often forced firms to adopt identical prices, B. M. Coldwell, president of the Master Bakers' Association of Vancouver, said today.

Mr. Coldwell, who also heads Canadian Bakeries Ltd. here, declined to comment directly on Justice Minister Garson's announcement that prosecutions have been ordered on an alleged combine in bread.

Bakeries in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan were alleged to have attempted "to control all bread prices."

The price for bread charged here is 11 cents for a 16-ounce loaf or two for 21 cents.

Mr. Coldwell said, however, that a large volume of bread is being sold at seven to eight cents a loaf.

U.S. Japanese To Address City Audience

John McGilvrey Maki, assistant-professor of Japanese government and politics at the University of Washington, will discuss the struggle between democracy and Communism in the Far East in an address in the Victoria Normal School auditorium at 8:15 p.m. Saturday.

Dr. Maki is Japanese American who was adopted by an American family and took surname of his foster parents as his middle name. The address is being sponsored jointly by the evening division of Victoria College and the Victoria branch of the United Nations Society.

He acted as propaganda analyst with the Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service of the United States Federal Communications Commission during the World War.

Sought Bonus For Children Not Her Own

British Columbia's first prosecution under the Family Allowance Act has been completely in Dawson Creek police court, it was announced yesterday by the regional office of the Family Allowance Branch here.

Mrs. Lillian E. Rennie, also known as Mrs. Willian E. Welch, a waitress, was fined $300 and costs or in default one month in jail.

In 1946 she registered three children for family allowances, claiming she was their mother. Testimony given indicated the children belonged to a United States service man living in town, the announcement said.

Montreal Snow Ties Up Traffic

MONTREAL, March 12 (CP). —Stranded cars littered Montreal streets today after a nine-inch snowfall tied up traffic and interfered with airline operations.

The city roads department sent out 1,400 men and all its equipment on snow-removal jobs after a wet, clinging snow stalled cars and caused a series of minor traffic accidents.

Railway officials said trains were operating on schedule, but airline operations east of Montreal were subject to delay.

May Abandon Animal Shelter S.P.C.A. Says

The Victoria S.P.C.A. will abandon its new animal shelter on the Industrial Reserve if the City Council allows erection of a planing mill on the adjoining property, James Barr, president, said yesterday.

"The noise and dust of the planers near the kennels would amount to cruelty to animals," he said.

It is understood the Atom Lumber Company is seeking permission to build the mill on Wilson Street on the east side of the animal shelter.

Mr. Barr said the S.P.C.A. pioneered this section of the industrial area and before the animal shelter was started, no one appeared to be interested in the property.

"But immediately we started construction, a lumber company applied to lease these same lots," the president said in a written statement.

Young Sheila Quickly Found

Three-year-old Sheila Duggan was found yesterday practically before reported lost.

At 3:35 p.m., Mrs. G. H. Croff, 1023 Hillside Avenue, phoned city police and said a lost girl was at her home and she would keep her there until notified of her home.

Ten minutes later, her father, Jack Duggan, 1148 North Park Street, phoned police and reported his daughter was missing.

Police easily joined father and daughter.

U.S. Railroads Plan Layoffs Due to Two-Week Mine Closing

PHILADELPHIA, March 12 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad announced today it will furlough approximately 20,000 employees because of the two-week shutdown of coal mines.

In Syracuse, N.Y., the New York Central Railroad said it would be forced to lay off 614 men on its Eastern lines.

A Washington dispatch stated that the shutdown will start in the Eastern United States Monday as John L. Lewis' latest protest against President Truman's selection of James Boyd as director of the Bureau of Mines.

Lewis' announcement yesterday stirred swift demands in Congress to ask for a big club against such strikes in the impending United States Labor Law. But it caused little concern over the loss of fuel.

GOOD SUPPLY IN HAND

An abnormal 45-day supply is on hand: About 70,000,000 tons of bituminous coal. A 30-day backlog is considered normal.

Technically, Lewis described the walkout of about 400,000 members of the United Mine Workers as a "memorial" shutdown, or mourning period, permitted under his contract with coal operators.

American miners west of the Mississippi were not called out.

Pope Observes Anniversary

ROME, March 12 (CP).—There was a restrained observance of the tenth anniversary of Pope Pius as head of the Roman Catholic church today as the Pope himself asked for less of an observance than usual.

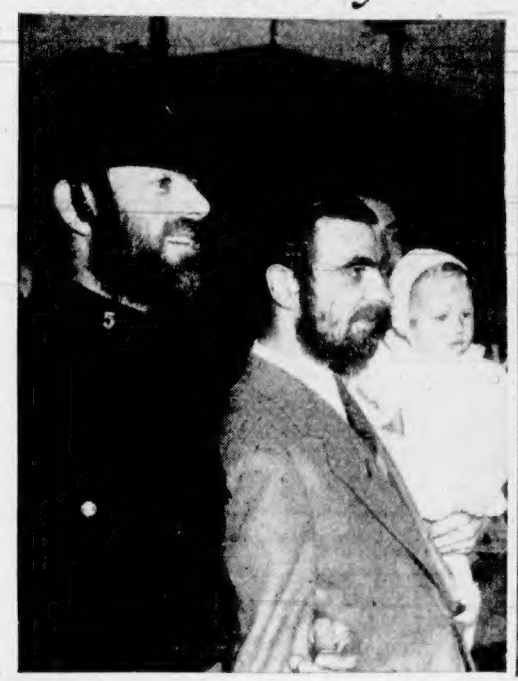
"That's My Rulin'" Declares "Judge" in Passing Sentences Here



ARRESTED on streets, in automobiles, homes and at places of business, hauled into "open" court, Victoria Eagles yesterday had no defence when arraigned on City Hall steps on charges ranging from shaving, no exemption cards, resisting arrest, perjury, contempt of court, etc. It was all part of Eagles 50th anniversary celebration. Members are not to shave until April 9, Eagles 50th birthday. Photo on left shows Derek Elcoate, with baby Johnnie, age nine months, in arms, arrested at home by "Constable" C. P. Smith for failing to have exemption card. Centre photo shows setting up of "Kangaroo Court" on City Hall steps; left to right are Len Andrews, bailiff, and Ray Wainwright, judge. In photo right are Mr. Smith, constable; Mr. Ken Buchanan, constable; Jack Lacey, Walter Johnson and spectators. In foreground, back to camera, can be seen "Judge" Wainwright. There were no defence attorneys. All paid heavy fines.

Fourth Candidate Enters Race Seeking P.C. Nomination Here

Prospects for a lively Progressive Conservative nominating convention in the Victoria Federal riding were increased yesterday when a fourth candidate announced his intentions of entering the race.

Others who have announced their intention of seeking the P.C. nomination are Ald. Waldo Skillings and Mrs. R. D. Harvey, both well-known in political circles. A fifth candidate may be entered later by the Greater Victoria Young Progressive Conservatives.

Date for the nominating convention will probably be set Tuesday evening at a meeting of the Victoria Progressive Conservative Association in Prince Robert House, W. H. M. Haldane, president, said.

REALIZES $60

The Cordova Bay Scout Group Committee realized $60 from its fish pond in the Scout Fair, it was announced yesterday.

On Friday evening the troop, under the direction of Scoutmaster C. Price and Scout C. Howarth, erected a bridge within 20 minutes. Tenderfoot Scout Brian McCoshen demonstrated the art of lighting a fire without the use of matches.

On Saturday afternoon the Cub Pack presented typical Cub games. Handicrafts by both Scouts and Cubs were on display.

Wismer Slated to Open First B.C. Traffic School

Attorney-General Gordon S. Wismer will officiate at opening ceremonies Monday at 9:30 a.m. for the British Columbia Police School's first traffic school.

The three-week course, under the supervision of Inspector Carl Ledoux, is aimed at training more highway patrol officers for the time when more cars are available.

The course is designed to teach officers how to educate the public on driving habits by addressing public organizations. It is aimed at promoting safe driving rather than to teach officers to prosecute.

In addition to about 12 British Columbia Police officers, Greater Victoria forces will be represented. Constable Aldon Appleton will represent the city police, Constable David Shepherd, Saanich, and Constable George W. Patterson, Oak Bay.

Atlin to Get Road Outlet For First Time

First highway outlet for Atlin, mining community in Northwestern British Columbia, is "expected soon."

Plans call for the Federal Government to build the highway from the British Columbia-Yukon border to Jake's Corner on the Alaska Highway, and the Provincial Government to construct the road north from Atlin to the British Columbia-Yukon boundary.

The project would involve the construction of 58 miles of road, 31.3 miles in British Columbia and 26.7 in the Yukon.

Completion of the highway will permit Atlin to get supplies by truck from Edmonton.

W. D. Smith, member of the Legislature for the area, has received word through James Sinclair, M.P., that an appropriation to build the section of the road in the Yukon has been included in this year's Federal estimates and approved by the Treasury Board.

No Beards? No Buttons? Cash on the Line Says Street-Corner Judge, Levying Fine

Charged with "perjury," "resisting arrest," "failure to have proper identification cards," "contempt of court," "attempted mayhem," and "dumb insolence," ten Victorians were arraigned in "court" at City Hall yesterday, found guilty without mercy and sentenced to heavy fines.

Several hundred busy, downtown, Saturday afternoon shoppers watched with amazement when they saw two policemen fighting with a heavy bearded man in front of City Hall. He was subdued, handcuffed and held for arrival of court.

MORE AMAZED

Still more amazed were they when they saw the same policemen halt automobiles, pull victims from cars, snap handcuffs on wrists and lead them to foot of City Hall steps.

Then down Douglas Street, preceded by a uniformed "upholder of the law," and a court bailiff, the tall figure of a heavily bearded man, silken judicial robes flowing to the breeze, walked slowly to City Hall. The trio took up places behind soap boxes, on the steps and without cracking a smile proceeded with court proceedings.

"Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Hear Ye!

"This honorable court is now in session."

"First prisoner," shouted Bailiff Len Andrews.

Policemen" C. P. Smith and Ken Buchanan, led forward the prisoner in handcuffs. He gave his name as Harry Harris.

"Judge" Ray Wainright looked sternly from the bench (soap box).

"On or before March 12, you failed to grow a beard, as laid down by all loyal Eagles. Guilty or not guilty?"

Before the prisoner had an opportunity to reply the Judge rapped:

"Next case," droned "Crown Prosecutor" James V. Proudfoot.

Charles Hunt, wearing false beard, Jack Lacey and Walter Johnson, faced the court.

Hunt, charged with attempt to deceive the court, by wearing a false beard, and Lacey and Johnson with aiding and abetting him, were all fined. Hunt drew a $2.05 fine, Lacey and Johnson, $1.

WANTED HEARING

The trio demanded a hearing in higher court.

They were obliged on the spot. The Judge, the Bailiff and Crown Attorney moved their soap boxes from the lowest step to the highest and continued the case.

"Same sentence, step up and pay your fines—no objections—that's my rulin'."

hen appeared Cecil Trumbley, struggling in the arms of the law.

"Guilty, by Gum," shouted the court, "Twenty-five cents fine—that's my rulin'."

Arrested at his home, during the absence of his wife, Derek Elcoate, appeared with his baby son, Johnnie, age nine months, in his arms.

He was charged with failure to wear Eagle beard button. He was arrested at 2224 Hampshire Terrance.

"But my wife lost the button," claimed the defendant.

"Fined $1 and the baby Johnnie 25 cents. No back talk and that's my rulin'." admonished His Worship.

MANY FINES

Wesley Guille, arrested on the street, was fined $1.21, Pete Beaumont, 81 cents, and James Lewis, 50 cents, all charged with serious Eagle offenses, shaving before April 9, no exemption cards and resisting arrest.

Arrested on the spot, Bailiff Andrews was fined five cents.

"Gotta' protect my court," muttered the judge, "and that's my ruling."

"But Judge, where is your . . ." began another voice from the crowd of more than 200.

"Court adjourned—and that's my rulin'."

It was all part of Eagles' 50th anniversary celebrations.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the chapel of Thomson Funeral Home.

Archdeacon Robert Connell will officiate. Cremation will follow.

TAVISTOCK, Ont. (CP).—Andrew (Pat) Kaufman was appointed by the town council to the public utilities commission to complete the unexpired term of Henry Hitzeroth who died recently.

Self-Medication Is Dangerous

THE HUMAN BODY is the most complicated mechanism ever created. Not all of its processes are thoroughly understood even by those who devote their lives to a study of them. It is not surprising, therefore, that persons without medical training who attempt to diagnose and prescribe for their own serious ills often do themselves irreparable damage. Have respect for your body. You can never get another. When illness comes, consult a physician. He is a specialist in his line, just as we are in the business of filling his prescriptions.

The Stars Still Swing in Their Courses

IT is sometimes a relief to turn from a fevered world with its atomic fidgets, its jangled nerves and its economic headaches, to the quiet and orderly processes of nature; so patient in time, so sure in results. The stars still swing in their ordained courses in the eternal heavens. Modern invention and ingenuity have not changed the universe, but they have widened man's knowledge of it immeasurably. Star-city after star-city has come into sight, the observable portion of space has been deepened to a vast immensity, with the conviction that even that tremendous range is only a very small portion of the universe. The most powerful telescope in the world, that at Mount Palomar, will provoke more questions than it will answer, and it is well that this will be so.

From earliest times when primitive man saw "day" fading, with only instinct to tell him that it would return, the heavens have presented a picture of wonder and glory to human minds. It is not alone the bright jewels of the firmament—the nearby stars, the distant nebulae, the eternal question mark of what is sensed but not seen—though these would hold anyone's attention. It is the calm and peace of the night-time canopy, its order and its precision, its implied and mighty purpose. These things have engaged the human mind since there were eyes to focus on the heavens.

Men know today that the universe is larger, more complex and infinitely more amazing than had been realized in any previous era. They have weighed suns in their courses, measured the Milky Way, and glimpsed distant stellar systems as complex, as diverse and as controlled as our own. Camera, prism and telescope in a decade have brought to the plotting table more data than the world will absorb in a hundred years, and still the questions arise to project themselves into the future. Humility has been the result. Those who labor most patiently over the questions do so humbly, to the glory of God.

City's Slum Conditions Demand Action

THERE is a too common tendency in well-to-do communities to shy away from evidences of human misery where no simple, immediate remedy presents itself. Up to now apparently Victoria has been doing this, but public consciousness at last is being directed to the distress of the city's tenement dwellers by the disclosure of conditions under which some of them are living.

The report made to the City Council by Alderman Mrs. Christie, for the health committee, has shown that Victoria has a housing problem more serious than has been generally realized. Mrs. Christie and the committee confessed themselves shocked by what they saw in a tour of dwellings on the City's "condemned list." It should come as a shock to anyone to be told that there are 29 persons living in one house in the city, sharing a single bathroom; and, by the medical health officer, that unhealthy, substandard living conditions are becoming a pressing problem in the area.

The City has the power to order demolition of unsuitable dwellings if repairs are not made, but such a course could only add to the distress of the tenants displaced thereby, if no other shelter were available. The council is not in a position at present to solve that problem by its own efforts.

Dominion Government housing projects have done nothing to relieve conditions such as those seen by Mrs. Christie. To these people so-called low-rental housing at more than $30 a month is as unattainable as a suite at the Waldorf. In a practical approach to their problems the lead should come from Ottawa, but so far there has been nothing more than talk about convening a conference of Dominion, provincial and municipal authorities to tackle the whole question of housing. It is time for that talk to be translated into action.

Prize Money Should Go Where It Belongs

IT might have been thought that with recruiting at a comparatively low ebb in Canada, as it is in most Western countries where the voluntary system prevails, authorities would take care not to dampen enthusiasm. Yet the diversion, unasked, of naval prize money is something that might easily raise doubt in the mind of any would-be recruit. If a traditional practice which benefits the rating can be so easily set aside, who is to say what other privilege may be withdrawn just as summarily.

That is serious enough. From the standpoint of the men who are being deprived of the prize money, however, the Government is even more at fault. It has reneged on what has hitherto been regarded as a moral obligation endorsed by long custom and expectation. No amount of plausible excuse can alter that fact. Without consulting the officers and men who earned the prize money through arduous risk and toil, the Government has decided they shall donate it to naval and air force benevolent funds. That is compulsion of an obnoxious kind.

The protests that have been voiced by various ex-naval groups, because serving personnel are muzzled by regulation, indicate clearly what former R.C.N. members think about the proposal. They are bitterly opposed to it, and as men who answered the call when the Navy needed them badly they do not deserve to be cheated of their expectations. It is nothing short of amazing that the Minister of Defence should stand up in Parliament to defend such as confiscatory and high-handed action.

CHRISTMAS CARDS

Sir,—I would like to thank all your readers who, in response to Mrs. Wood's letter, have so kindly sent me used Christmas cards. I should like to have thanked them all personally but as the response has been so generous, may I do so through the courtesy of your columns.

Some will be used by children in the East End of London who, I am sure, will be as pleased with them as my own classes, who wish to join with me in saying thank you.

DOGS AND NERVES

Sir,—As one who has kept dogs for many years, I can heartily endorse Major Crickmay's letter in your issue of the 8th inst.

I recall a fight in which my dog was involved soon after I had acquired him, and of how in my inexperience I tried to part the combatants, with the result that I was bitten, as a scar will testify to this day, and by my own dog, the latter unable to distinguish between friend and foe in the melee.

MAINLY ABOUT BOOKS

Sir,—On Wednesday night over CBR there was broadcast a remarkable eulogy of Joyce's notorious book, "Ulysses" a book that has been banned in Canada ever since publication. Might one suggest there is plenty of good, wholesome literature to discuss in these literary talks without reference to books banned for their obscenity, from this country. To make out that the general reading public is losing anything by not being allowed to read this sort of book is, I consider, ridiculous; and the fact that ban has now been lifted in the United States is no reason at all for it being lifted in Canada.

As I happened as a young man to be living in France when "Ulysses" and a variety of other banned books were published in English editions, at high prices, I was curious enough to buy or borrow them all. I can truthfully assert that in no case at all, least of all in the case of "Ulysses," could I feel the British censors had erred in banning these books from England. I was, therefore, delighted when on later becoming a Canadian I found the Canadian censors had the same high standards.

J. BAINES LEWIS.

TRANSIT SERVICE

Sir,—Isn't it about time the bus operators started giving good service in Victoria. I, as a salesman, waste a tremendous amount of time waiting for buses and now we hear talks endorsed by an alderman that we disrupt business (all right in wartime but not during normal times) by staggered hours. All for one company.

What if the company does use extra buses as an excuse for higher rates. Decent service might be worth it.

Let's stop looking on Victoria as merely a tourist attraction and make something of it and attract industries.

From the Prelude

Oh! yet a few short years of useful life,
And all will be complete, thy race be run,
Thy monument of glory will be raised:
Then, though (too weak to tread the ways of truth)
This age fall back to old idolatry,
Though men return to servitude as fast
As the tide ebbs, to ignominy and shame
By nations sink together, we shall still
Find solace—knowing what we have learnt to know,
Rich in true happiness if allowed to be Faithful alike in forwarding a day

Thinking Aloud

". . . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

SHERLOCK Holmes was really only a minor episode in the busy and varied life of Arthur Conan Doyle, yet the brainchild was to far outshine its creator and push his other accomplishments into the background. That is irony's way. Who, for example, remembers that it was a poet's wife who invented the monster personalized nowadays for most people by Boris Karlof.

In so far as Doyle's literary fame is concerned the Baker Street detective was his Frankenstein. Perhaps he had an inkling of what was in store when he caused Professor Moriarity to heave the ubiqitous Holmes over a cliff. Conan Doyle had the prophetic vision.

For instance, in 1900 he wrote an essay pleading for a close understanding between Britain and the United States, and warning that unless this was effected by goodwill "then it might be forced into existence in some future time as a measure of self-preservation against an eventual threat from Russia"—a startling prescience in the light of present-day events.

BAKER STREET DEMON

According to a new biography of Conan Doyle, written by John Dickson Carr, himself a writer of detective stories, Doyle didn't place too high a premium on the Sherlock Holmes tales. He much preferred his historical novel, "The White Company," the Brigadier Gerard books, and others with which many readers of the Sherlock Holmes saga may be quite unacquainted. Once you create a figure that takes the world by storm, however, you can't just drop him like an old coat. Conan Doyle discovered that.

As Mr. Carr puts it, he was "pursued, hounded, worried and encircled by the Baker Street demon." The apparent death of Holmes in 1893 stunned his reading public. Young men went to their offices with crepe bands round their hats. Letters of protest piled high on Doyle's desk. In the end he gave in, and contrived a new series with Sherlock Holmes as miraculous as ever.

The Boer War, in which Doyle served as a medical officer, gave him another chance to forget about Baker Street, but again public demand forced him to start all over again with "The Return of Sherlock Holmes." When this new series began the rush of readers to the bookstalls was like the scenes at a bargain sale.

MEDICAL PROTOTYPE

Yet Conan Doyle was forced to hawk his very first Holmes yarn, "A Study in Scarlet," from publisher to publisher before a discerning eye spotted his particular talents; and the story appeared in a Christmas annual! A few years later Doyle gave up doctoring for writing and contracted for six Holmes stories in The Strand Magazine, then just started. He received an average of £35 for them. The day was to come when he could collect ten shillings a word.

Mr. Carr confirms that Dr. Joseph Bell, a surgeon at Edinburgh Infirmary when Conan Doyle was a medical student, was the prototype of Sherlock Holmes. Bell had the lean figure and long, skilful hands that the reading world recognizes as Holmes', and had a gift for startling deduction. Beyond that Sherlock Holmes was the creature of Conan Doyle's own wit and vivid imagination.

Holmes' Christian name is so familiar that no other seems possible for that moody master of crime detection. Naming characters can be as difficult as describing them, however, and Conan Doyle thought first of Sherringford, which somehow did not just ring the bell. It was his ancestral background that came to the rescue with the Irish name of Sherlock. Sherlock Holmes—a perfect combination! And so it proved.

A QUEER PART

For the narrator's name he harked back to a doctor friend called James Watson, altering the Christian name to John. Doyle was not to know that countless people would some day quote with gusto, "Elementary, my dear Watson," even if they never saw these words in print.

Doyle was a prolific person. He wrote widely in various fields, including a history of the Boer War. He stood twice for Parliament, but was defeated each time. He was a forthright individual and when asked if he favored votes for women, he said: "No, I do not." His reason? "When a man comes home from a day's work, I don't think he wants a politician sitting opposite him at the fireside." He spent years, time and much money winning the freedom of Oscar Slater, sentenced to life imprisonment for murder and robbery, because he thought justice had miscarried. His later life he devoted to spiritualism, in which he thoroughly believed.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle died in 1930, but Sherlock Holmes, of whom he didn't think too much, has outlived him and bids fair to do so for long yet, in spite of a spate of imitators. Authors seldom know what they might be putting their minds and hands to, and certainly Conan Doyle, when he conjured up Baker Street's supersleuth, could not have imagined that he was creating one of the most famous characters in the English language.

And yet Holmes was his Frankenstein; a queer part for Sherlock to play, come to think of it.

FINANCE Minister Anscomb, it seems, has been playing politics with the sales tax—a very touchy subject these days. In circular letters to his Progressive Conservative followers, he has been saying things which do not precisely correspond to his public pronouncements, for example, in the recent by-elections.

Somehow, the Opposition, which enjoys nothing better than baiting Mr Anscomb, got hold of a fairly complete file of these missives. In one of them quoted in the House Friday Mr. Anscomb had advised his followers that the sales tax would never have been necessary if the Liberal Government at Ottawa had fulfilled its promises to British Columbia in the Dominion-Provincial tax agreement.

Premier Johnson, of course, had to get up and explain to the House that it was a good agreement and that the sales tax was necessary notwithstanding anything that might or might not have been done by the Dominion.

The Opposition naturally rose to ask who was enunciating Government policy—the Premier or the Finance Minister. The Premier said he was. Mr. Anscomb simply refused to discuss the matter.

It was an embarrassing afternoon for the Coalition forces. There were some who could not avoid the recollection that in the British system of parliamentary government it is customary for a minister to support the policy of his government, or to withdraw in favor of someone who does.

It is at the least unusual for a responsible minister to leave unexplained on the public record a statement so directly at variance with a controversial part of Government policy—a policy, incidentally, originally outlined by the Minister himself.

Arthur Ash, Member for Saanich, who gave his maiden speech only last year, startled the House Wednesday, by turning in a rip-snorting attack on the C.C.F.

It provided one of the liveliest afternoons of the current session and gave the C.C.F.-ers some uncomfortable moments as he kept dragging up past pronouncements of prominent party members not exactly in line with present policy.

He showed an unexpected skill in parrying interruptions and questions. Attacking the C.C.F. can be a hazardess business. Mr. Winch and Mr. Gargrave are both parliamentary veterans with long experience and considerable skill in trapping the unwary orator.

The House was a little surprised that a new member escaped unscarred. Mr. Ash was looking after himself very well for a newcomer.

* * * * *

Attorney - General Wismer has turned in the most polished performance of the current session. Winding up the budget debate he had to parry C.C.F. attacks on the sales tax. This he did very effectively by demonstrating, unchallenged, that (a) the C.C.F. plan for increasing royalties on minerals and timber would drive the "little fellows" out of business, and (b) that the alternative of going after the big fellows by taxing according to earnings was an income tax, and therefore, beyond the power of the Province.

He had to say "no" on the liquor question, "no" to labor in several different ways, "no" to co-operatives—in short, he had to say "no" to an awful lot of people who wanted to hear "yes." But it was all done so charmingly that one could hardly believe that any other course would be either wise, prudent or kind at the present time.

Reports are that Government House will again be in the news soon because of the refusal of His Honor to receive prominent groups of visitors to Victoria this Summer. It will come up when the House turns to vote money for maintaining Government House.

SOME men are said to be born with silver spoons in their mouths. Many fish die with silver spoons in their mouths . . . The Curse of Modern Speed

By John Gould in The Christian Science Monitor

THE other day I heard about a man who had flown around the world in something like 73 hours and so many minutes, and I should like to ask him how are things in Brookings, S.D. I don't know anything about Brookings, S.D., and it is merely a place I saw on a map, but I think mention of it to this space-speeder might bring home to him the fact that he wasted 73 hours and so many minutes.

We've heard a lot in late years about how the world is getting smaller. This is not so. Man's adroit speeding around it has made it so tremendously large that we no longer know anybody in it, and instead of cementing friendships in a leisurely passage, we are just making people mad because we frighten their hens when we roar by. I'm convinced my ancestors knew more about the world than the man who has a globe-circling airplane.

This brings home to me the fact that 30 or more fine families live between me and our village, and that I drive by in an automobile and never stop in to say hello. I wave my hand, and we are still friends once removed, but the dooryard call is a gone goose.

In the old era it was different. When grandfather went to town visiting was a part of the progress. You not only visited in dooryards, but when you met another buggy on the road, you pulled up to talk. You didn't worry about a truck coming up behind and honking your horse into a runaway. You had nothing to do but sit there and visit and to enjoy all the social and business advantages that came from it.

By the time you had reached the village to do the weekly trading, and I emphasize the word, you had a warm feeling for everybody, knew all their problems and cares and had a full perception of what went on among people to make society—of which you were a contributing and participating part. You can't do that just by waving at folks as you speed by in a pick-up truck. Much less can you do it from the stratosphere.

Which is what I mean about the man who flew over Brookings and never even knew it. The world would be much farther along I think, if he'd never taken that trip, but had spent the 73 hours walking along a back road in Southern Ohio. The chances are he'd have met somebody to remember, and the meeting would do them both good.

Victoria in Beard and Crinoline

From Files of The Daily British Colonist for March, 1862

By G. E. MORTIMORE

WHILE California was trying to drive Chinese immigrants back where they came from, The Daily British Colonist extended them a definite if cautious invitation to settle on Vancouver Island and in Mainland British Columbia.

"We see no reason why these colonies . . . should not provide an asylum for at least 50,000 Chinamen," The Colonist said in an editorial.

"We have an ample field for the employment of Chinese industry. They are expert fishermen, and we have a long coast in which swim excellent fish . . . They are fond of agriculture; and we have a boundless extent of agricultural land which can be rendered productive by their cheap labor.

"In our gold mines there must . . . be districts in which the cheap labor of China could be profitably employed."

There had been trouble over Chinese in California and Australia, The Colonist warned. "They were first welcomed; next jealousy of them was aroused; then they were abused and lastly, resort has been had in both countries to special legislation both for their exclusion and protection."

"As the Chinese increased in numbers and the pay of the white miner decreased in value, the different shades of opinion toward Chinamen have been manifested. With the experience of those countries before us, our policy should be shaped so as to invite a Chinese immigration without being overwhelmed by an excessive number . . .

"Were we to hold out glowing accounts for them to come, and after they had served our purpose, turn them adrift—oppress them, such a course could scarcely be defended."

Fun, Fact and Fiction

"Now, if there's anything you want," said the landlady, "just let me know, and I'll show you how to do without it."

Nature Gives Ontario Last Fling at Winter

—Central Press Canadian.

With Spring beginning officially on March 21, Nature recently gave Ontario heaviest snowfall of the season. Traffic was turned into caterpillar procession and movement on all highways was reduced to danger point. No serious accidents were reported but weather was blamed for several mishaps that occurred in different parts of the province.

Thirty-Nation Pool of Information On Criminals Wiping Out Frontiers

PARIS, March 12 (AP).—International crooks who dodge behind the iron curtain may find it transparent when Interpol gets on their trail.

Interpol (the International Criminal Police Commission with headquarters in Paris) is the organization which gives practical reality to that old saw about "the long arm of the law."

It has no detectives of its own but it helps the police in each of its 30 member nations to put the handcuffs on many a crook. The criminal who heaves a sigh of relief after crossing the frontier often finds he rejoiced too soon.

MONACO'S IDEA

Co-ordination of national police forces through a central clearing house was the idea of the Prince of Monaco, one of Europe's smallest states.

Now, starting its fourth year of postwar operation, Interpol is slowly building up its files. At present they occupy only three rooms of the new Paris headquarters, but they are steadily growing every hour of every day.

Files of international crooks are kept under four main classifications:

By names, alphabetically.

By names, phonetically (to cover the confusion which may arise in some countries over the spelling of foreign names.)

By fingerprint records; and,

CLASSIFIED CRIMES

By branches of crime (whether murderers, hotel thieves, cat burglars, confidence men, counterfeiters, drug smugglers, white slavers etc.).

Each dossier contains, where possible, right profile, full face and three-quarter face photographs of the wanted man or woman.

Printed "description sheets" are circulated to all member countries in both French and English.

Some sheets bear a red tab in the corner. These are the cases where some country has already issued an arrest warrant for the person described.

Never is a criminal forgotten. Even if his dossier becomes yellow with age, it will have its place for as long as he lives.

"Interpol works like a waterpump," declared its president, Florent Elouwage, general inspector of the Belgian Ministry of Justice. "We pump in information from the national bureaus and that information is pumped out again to other national bureaus."

NOT POLITICAL

Interpol is not concerned with political," fiscal, religious or racial cases, but confines itself to criminal offences under common law. It is financed by yearly assessments against its member countries.

The following countries are now members:

Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Chile, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Egypt, Finland, France, Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Holland, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Sweden, South Africa, Switzerland, Turkey, Venezuela and Yugoslavia, besides the Anglo-American and French zones of Germany, the international territory of Tangier, and the French-controlled territory of the Saar.

There are some loopholes, mainly behind the iron curtain. Although Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia, Finland, Hungary, Poland and Yugoslavia are members, the U.S.S.R., the Soviet zones of Germany and Austria, and Romania are gaps in Interpol's net. The Soviet Union was invited to join and replied that it would "study the question." Nothing further has been heard.

NEW SCOW-FERRY

LITTLE BROOK, N.S. (CP).—A scow weighing approximately 45 tons was recently completed here for ferrying automobiles and trucks across the Tiverton-East Ferry route at Petit Passage. The scow took three months to build.

...Oddities...

The sparrow, a female, has been carrying on the battle for 10 days—with intermissions for rest, food-hunting and building a nest with her mate in an exhaust outlet of the truck.

The headlight is none the worse for the repeated attacks, but the sparrow is. Observers thought yesterday they noted a little less fire in the bird's offensive.

The headlight offers slippery footing and about all she can do is to get in a couple of pecks and beat the "enemy" with her wings and then slide off or fly away for another go.

SULLIVAN, Ill., March 12 (AP).—Bernie Freeman's cow, Joie, is ready for entrance into the bovine limelight derby which is sweeping the United States.

The electric lights have been going on in Freeman's barn at night for several weeks. It's been driving Freeman frantic.

Recently, he turned out the barn lights, got into his car, and started for Sullivan. As he stepped into the car, the lights flashed on.

That did it. Freeman dashed for the barn. All he saw was contented cows. He flashed the lights out again and hid in a dark corner. Then the lights flashed on again.

Joie had reached up above her feed box and flicked the switch with her nose or her tongue, Freeman wasn't sure which.

Now Freeman disconnects the power line to douse the lights.

LONDON, March 12 (Reuters)—An invention to be shown at the British Industries Fair next May is an "electric housemaid" which will peel potatoes, scour pots and pans, clean shoes, polish buttons, mince meat, grind coffee; whisk eggs, stir puddings.

Its inventors worked five years on it and now are experimenting to make it wash clothes and dishes.

Defence Zones Under Study During Week

MELBOURNE, March 12 (Reuters). — Establishment of Commonwealth defence zones will be discussed during the next week by British Government envoys and leaders of seven Dominions, it was learned authoritatively here today.

British defence experts will fly to Australia, Canada, South Africa, New Zealand, Pakistan, India and Ceylon this week to discuss defence matters, it was learned.

A source here said that Canada and Britain will be responsible for defence of the North Atlantic zone, in line with the proposed Atlantic Pact linking Canada, Britain and the United States with Western European powers.

OTTAWA, March 12 (CP). — Defence authorities here would not confirm nor deny today's Melbourne story that Canada was entering into talks with a United Kingdom emissary looking toward organization of Commonwealth defence zones within the North Atlantic Security Pact.

C.I.O. Asking Wage Boost, Profits Slash

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP).—The C.I.O. today called for "substantial" fourth-round wage increases, a slash in corporation profits, and an expanded "security program for workers.

"If the country fails to take these corrective steps, a serious depression condition is almost certain to develop," said The C.I.O. News. The labor organization's weekly newspaper summarized the thinking of C.I.O. economists and researchers.

NO PRICE DROP

The C.I.O. said that prices are not dropping, so wages must be lifted. It didn't call it a fourth-round increase (there have been three since the war ended), but it spoke in general terms, saying:

"Substantial wage increases will provide a great reservoir of buying power. They will help relieve the piling up of merchandise and the drop in jobs" in the consumer goods industries.

Corporation profit "must be trimmed for the common good," the C.I.O. said.

"The high rate of profit is throwing the economy out of kilter. It has led to cutting of production, and to limitation of expanded production capacity," the paper said.

THREE-POINT PLAN

The three-pronged program "is obviously called for," the C.I.O. said, because full employment is threatened now for the first time since the war.

"C.I.O. economists believe that the economy is neither in a state of serious illness nor of complete good health," The News said.

"It is displaying symptoms of basic weaknesses which, if not checked soon, can lead to serious complications."

People Will Like Budget Prime Minister "Hints"

By GEORGE KITCHEN

OTTAWA, March 12 (CP).—Prime Minister St. Laurent predicted the other day, as loudly as he could without shouting it from the Parliamentary roof-tops, that you, Mr. Taxpayer, are going to get an awful big bang out of the forthcoming budget.

He dropped the hint, just like somebody dropping a sledge-hammer in a violin recital, during a Commons discussion on which legislation the Government has in mind for the immediate future.

He sort of aided into the thing with the statement that "perhaps it might be of interest to the public" to have Finance Minister Abbott bring down his budget before the end of this month.

Then he added (and you can put your own interpretation on this):

"I think the public would be glad to know the contents of the minister's proposals as soon as they can be made available."

GOING TO BE DANDY

There. Just like that. In fact, some on Parliament Hill say he couldn't have made it plainer if he'd used an axe that this budget was going to be jim-dandy when it comes to cutting taxes.

Of course, everybody figures this is going to be an election year—the Government's mandate runs only until the middle of 1950—and what, they say, could be more natural than that the administration would sort of do something to make the folks feel more friendly towards it. Talk around here is that there'll be an election this June or in October.

Even the Liberal members of the Commons themselves are talking about cutting taxes. There have been lots of suggestions since Parliament opened January 26 that taxes be cut and a surprising number of them have come from Government benches.

BIGGER EXEMPTIONS

Some Liberal members—and maybe they know—suggest that the main cut is going to take the form of a lifting of income tax exemptions. This means that the Government might lift the basic exemptions to, say $1,000 for single persons, and $2,000 for those who are married.

Of course, there are other kinds of taxes—they're what the politicians call the "hidden taxes."

They include the 25-per-cent luxury tax, on things such as compacts and cigarette lighters and silver teapots and baby mugs; the eight per cent sales tax which applies to just about everything you buy except certain canned foods, and the so-called "nuisance" taxes which boost the price of soft drinks and chocolate bars.

Some of these have caused more grumbling than any others and the betting here is that they—or some of them, at least—will go out of the window.

The United States has 45 per cent of the world's coal supply. The Soviet Union has 27 per cent.

Buying Boom In Denmark Comes to End

COPENHAGEN, March 12 (Reuters)—Denmark's post-liberation "money to burn" buying boom has ended. Danes are buying less and are buying more carefully.

"Cigarette-lighter factories"—the nickname given to firms which flooded the domestic market with expensive, shoddy goods after the war—are closing down.

The labor shortage has eased as a result and big industries now are beginning to get some of the skilled labor of which they have been badly in need ever since the end of the war.

PRICES HIGH

Prices although still high, are showing signs of falling here and there.

The greatest single factor in the switch from a sellers' market to a buyers' market is the return to Denmark of British goods imported under the Anglo-Danish trade agreement of last September.

Danes today are saving their money until they can spend it on high-quality imported goods.

The manager of Copenhagen's largest department store said in an interview that there had been a marked decrease in sales in the last few months. Even the Christmas turnover, he added, was not as large in 1948 as in previous post-war years.

There was no doubt, he added, that there was "much less money about now."

But, he continued, there was still a big demand for textiles, especially British. A rumor that British textiles would be on sale on a certain day was sufficient to produce a long queue well before opening time, he said.

INCOME TAX

Danish Prime Minister Hans Hedtoft, warning the country that more taxes would be needed to meet defence expenditures, promised some relief for the lower incomes.

Danish emigration authorities report that a fair proportion of would-be emigrants wanted to know the tax conditions in various countries before making their applications.

Meeting Hits Cost System In Education

ALBERNI, March 12.—Throw the B.N.A. Act out the window if that is necessary to put the onus for education costs where it belongs, on the Federal Government.

That was the opinion expressed by Ald. Don Watson, of Alberni, at a meeting of the Alberni Ratepayers' Association when school board estimates were discussed.

Hans Jonsson declared his agreement with Ald. Watson and said the problem of school costs would never be solved by taxing the individual home owner. Mr. Jonsson described the Junior-Senior High School, located in a former army camp, as comparable to a concentration camp.

James Berry, chairman, deplored the expenditure of money on maintenance and alteration of old buildings. Approximately $30,000 had been expended in this manner during 1948 and there would be more if new buildings were not forthcoming.

Lonely Hearts on Wire

MABEL Jenson, 34, above, New York stenographer, read about bachelor Michael Arneson, who lives alone atop Norwegian mountain and says he wants wife. So she called him in Aardal, Norway, to console him. Arneson was chased into mountains by Nazis and never bothered to come down. Cheered by Mabel's conversation, he asked her to hurry over and visit him.

Norsemen Now Armed To Fight Against East

OSLO, March 12 (CP).—More than 200,000 Norsemen are ready at a moment's notice to defend their country. Their weapons are always in their homes.

Their duty is to defend key ports and airfields that would be Russian objectives if there is an East-West war, and to hold them until help comes from the West.

All male Norwegians between 21 and 60 are liable to military service whenever the Government decrees. Last year each able-bodied man served for ten days during Summer manoeuvres.

Norwegians have no illusion about their ability to defend their rugged country indefinitely. Without help from partners in the projected North Atlantic pact or from Scandinavian neighbors they inevitably must go under.

"But we'll fight," they say simply. "Last time we were taken by surprise and yet we held out 63 days—longest of all on the Continent. This time we won't be caught. We'll be ready—and you'll have time to come."

Russia's conduct last year in Czecho-Slovakia and Finland cost her the respect of the Norse, who before that had regarded her as the liberator of their northern province of Finmark.

But the Norse decline to antagonize her by allowing foreign states to use bases on Norwegian soil. Norway's airport at Stavanger, for instance, with the largest all-weather strip in Europe, would be invaluable to either East or West. Also important are naval and air bases at Trondheim, Narvik and Gardemoend, near Oslo.

New Zealand Popular With Britons

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, March 12 (Reuters)—Postwar British immigrants appear generally to have a favorable impression of their new homeland.

A good place to find out what, if anything, is wrong with New Zealand is the Wellington clubhouse of the New Settlers' Association, an organization fostering the welfare of British immigrants.

The president of the association is F. C. Jones, a former Londoner. He was a salesman for a cash register company, for which he came to New Zealand a year ago.

PRAISES COUNTRY

"My personal experience is that New Zealand has everything and my wife feels the same way about it," he says. "We may not have our particular pleasures of cycling and fishing; but they will come when we get our home established.

As for hospitality, "in London you could live next door to someone for 20 years and never speak to him. Now, when I walk up Willis Street, Wellington, I might speak to 30 people."

Daphne Munday, formerly of Harrow, Middlesex, and Grace Wood, from New Livingston, Hampshire, have visited the homes of many New Zealand families in suburban and farming districts in the course of their work as home helpers.

HELPFUL HUSBANDS

To Mr. Munday and Miss Wood the New Zealand housewife seemed outstandingly capable and they marveled at the way many of the husbands helped about the house.

Entertainment for a young single man in New Zealand was problem No. 1 for Norman Atack, formerly a Leeds blacksmith, and Dave Parker, Wakefield, Yorkshire, a printer.

They were used to a social evening in the "local" (public house) in England and could not understand why bars in New Zealand closed at 6 p.m.

'45 Candidates May Run Again

COURTENAY, March 12.—Forthcoming provincial election will probably see the major Comox Riding candidates of 1945 pitted against each other again. Provincial C.C.F. President Colin Cameron is available for the nomination, it is learned here. Thus far no other C.C.F. candidate has come forward, and local C.C.F. officials say Mr. Cameron will be unopposed when the nominating convention is held at Cumberland March 20.

Present Comox member is H. J. Welch (Coalition), who defeated Mr. Cameron by 67 votes in 1945. Mr. Welch has already indicated his willingness to run again.

Andrew Whiaker, Labor Department official, has stated he will run in Comox Riding under the Liberal banner, but he has not received the endorsement of any Liberal association in the riding.

Officials Who Escaped Iron Curtain In U.S. Planning Future of Europe

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP).—Men who were smuggled to airports, who hid in city sewers, swam rivers at midnight—all to escape the Iron Curtain—are in and out of Washington now to plan the future of Middle Europe when the Iron Curtain lifts.

They are confident it will lift. They are not certain how. But they want programs ready for their homelands when and if they return.

FIVE COMMITTEES

Five national committees have been or are being formed: For Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria.

None of these committees claims to be a "government-in-exile," but each says it is trying to work in such a way that it would represent the voting majority in its homeland if the home folks could cast free votes.

BULGARIA

The Bulgarian National Committee is led by Dr. George Dimitrov, who was leader of the Bulgarian Peasant Union until the iron curtain fell.

He first fled his country when the Germans took over. Through the second World War he broadcast anti - Nazi programs from Turkey and Egypt. Then he went home, only to find the Communists were taking over. (The Bulgarian Communist leader has the same name, George Dimitrov.)

The council for a free Czecho-Slovakia has just been completed. About 100 exile leaders are led by Dr. Peter Zenkl. Zenkl, a national Socialist, was reputy prime minister in the Government of former President Edward Benes, who resigned to protest Communist tactics.

RUMANIA

This committee is not yet completed. But the groups now talking say they think they represent 90 per cent of the home vote. The group is led by Gen. Nicolae Radescu, who was premier when Moscow's trouble-shooter, Andrei Vishinsky, moved in to overthrow King Michael's Government.

The Hungarian National Council is headed by a Roman Catholic priest, Rev. Bela Varga. He was speaker of the Hungarian Parliament after the World War. He was a member of the small holders' party, led by Ferenc Nagy, the prime minister before the Communists took over.

POLAND

This group has not completed its plans. It is led by Stanislav Mikolajcyk, postwar prime minister and leader of the peasant party. He was smuggled out of his country by plane.

Prairie People Praised "Nice Folk"---Wismer

Cheers, not jeers, greet Prairie people who "make good" on the Pacific Coast, Attorney-General Gordon Wismer said yesterday.

He was referring to a statement by Labor Minister C. C. Williams in the Saskatchewan Legislature, Friday, that Coast residents resented the success of Prairie people in British Columbia.

"Prairie people are nice folk," said Mr. Wismer.

"I used to live on the Prairies once myself," he added. "I'd like to have more of them come out and make good.

"They don't have to bring gold with them.

"They can get it after they come here. We won't be resentful of their success. On the other hand—we shall applaud that success."

NANAIMO, March 12.—William James Culligan, born in nearby Wellington 69 years ago, died here today. He was known in sports circles on Vancouver Island, was an engineer by trade but retired as a Crescent Street merchant here several years ago. He went over the "Trail of 98" into the Klondyke with Jack McGregor and the late Hon. William Sloan.

Funeral services will be held in Jenkins Chapel and Requiem Mass in St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church Monday morning.

Surviving relatives include Mrs. Bridget Peppiesse, Nanaimo, and Margaret O'Connell, Victoria.

SASKATOON, March 11 (CP). — Neighbors have started a fund to be offered as a reward for information leading to the solution of the disappearance earlier this week of two-year-old Nora Emily Stone.

The child's mother, Mrs. W. J. Stone, is reported to feel that Nora Emily did not tumble into the nearby South Saskatchewan River as is generally feared. Police said they would investigate the kidnap theory, although they believe it more likely the youngster fell into the water.

Lived in City During Turn Of Century

One of Victoria's former residents, Andrew C. Martin, 81, died March 4 at the home of his son in La Habra, Calif., it was learned here yesterday.

He came to Victoria from Glasgow in 1889 and lived here until the Great War when he served with the Seaforth Highlanders.

Included in the group were Frank A. Bennett, Herbert Carmichael, George R. Jackson, John Fraser, W. M. Allan, Norman and Alfred Carmichael and David Miller.

Mr. Martin is survived by two sons and two daughters.

June Stratton, A. Burton Win Drama Scholarships

June Stratton, Ladysmith High School student, and Alex Burton of Mount View High School today are winners of scholarships to either the University of British Columbia School of the Theatre in Vancouver or the School of Fine Arts in Banff, Alberta.

Sidney Risk, adjudicator of the ninth Greater Victoria School Drama Festival, made the announcement last night at the final session at Victoria High School.

Miss Stratton won her award for her interpretation of Madelaine in "Miracle at Blais."

RUNNERS-UP

Runners-up were June Hedblom of North Saanich High School, who played Caroline in "Mr. Sampson," and Margaret Lewis of Ladysmith High, for her work as Edith, the maid, in "Sing a Song of Sixpence."

Bill Wolf, North Saanich High, who played the role of Mr. Sampson in the play of that name, won second honors among the boys.

Mr. Risk said in event the winner could not take advantage of the scholarships, the runners-up would be given the opportunity.

Some of the best work in drama being done in schools of Western Canada was undoubtedly seen in the Victoria festival from the elementary grades, Mr. Risk said. He deplored the fact that drama was not included in the curriculum in Grades IX and X, since the seeds of a national theatre for Canada were being sown and cultivated in the junior grades.

NATIONAL THEATRE

"A national theatre for Canada does not mean a few imported road shows sent across the country, but a theatre of the people, created and directed by them. We have the excellent beginnings of it with these young people you have seen during the week. It does not make sense to cut them off from active participation in the drama, except as one more extra-curricular activity, during the first two years of their high school life, and expect them to be as intelligently keen in Grades XI and XII as they were in the lower school," said Mr. Risk.

He felt greatly encouraged by the steady improvement shown in the type of plays chosen for festival presentation. He spoke of the research necessary for the successful performance of such plays as "Clipper Ships" and "A Room in the Tower," to name only two of the good plays given during the week. He said that the week, while being very busy, had been most interesting, and for him a thrilling experience.

THANKS-BACKERS

Miss Christine F. M. MacNab, chairman of the Festival Committee, presided and, on behalf of the committee, thanked the Provincial Department of School and Community Drama for sponsoring the festival. Miss Anna Adamson, for her untiring work as the festival secretary, was highly praised.

Mayor Percy George, who opened the honor performance, paid tribute to the work being done by the school and community drama branch of the Department of Education in making the festivals possible, and stressed the value of drama in education.

Pitzer & Nex Celebrate 20th Anniversary

20th Anniversary for Local Service Garage

Early in March, 1929, two Victoria men started a small service station that was to grow into one of the city's largest automotive repair centres. These two local businessmen, Roy Pitzer and Bert Nex, today own and operate commanding premises between Douglas and Government Streets near Hillside, the location they have had for the past sixteen years. Advancing with modern science to give their clients the very latest and best in repair service, Pitzer & Nex added in 1946 a large mechanical and tire department together with extra gas pumps to meet growing demands. The staff now comprises 14 men, including 4 qualified mechanics under Ron Storrs, a well-known local man who has been with the firm 11 years. These mechanics, together with other staff, have an up-to-date repair shop equipped with 4 pits, 3 hoists and the latest appliances. Other members of the staff include Mr. Percy Noel (accountant) and Art Fleming (foreman, lubrication department) with the firm 12 and 10 years, respectively. To local sports enthusiasts Pitzer & Nex will be known for their sponsorship of baseball teams in both the senior and junior leagues, with the senior team winning the city championship in 1941. •••

Expect River Open Earlier This Spring

CHARLOTTETOWN, March 12 (CP).—Navigation of the St. Lawrence River should open earlier this year if present ice conditions in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and favorable northwest winds prevail.

That was the prediction of Chief Officer Angus Brown, official ice observer for the Department of Transport, after the initial ice survey of the year last week. Originated nine years ago, the flights are intended to aid navigation by providing information on clear courses during the Spring break-up. ways under Government commission, they are made when necessary until April 1. Then they begin a daily schedule and diminish as the ice flows south and east out of the gulf.

An 800-mile, five-hour flight revealed that although ice was heavy in certain areas, there was not as much and as thick ice in the gulf as there was last year at the time of the first flight.

Spotting positions of ice packs and icebergs, the reports compiled by the survey flights assist ships sailing up to Quebec and Montreal when the St. Lawrence opens. The vessels sail through narrow channels in the ice sheet as the reports give them accurate location of open passages and ice boundaries.

Between The Book-Ends

By Jim O'Connor

Thomas K. Willis, 263 Niagara Street, has been shocked by the "immature, hastily-typed" contribution of this department last Sunday discussing a recent speech by Will R. Bird, president of the Canadian Authors' Association before the Victoria branch.

"From the smart Alec prose which is altogether distasteful in a 'book' column, to the pet conclusions, which are abhorred among mature thinkers, I would conclude that Mr. O'Connor is yet in his teens, if not mentally, and for that reason no fit person to pretend to discover the ills of so great a profession as the writing of Canadian literature," Mr. Willis writes.

"Going down the column we find that Mr. Bird would like each Canadian family to purchase two Canadian books per year, and thus support Canadian writers in their effort to be heard. It is not a very exciting proposal, to be sure, but it is a kind thought from a well-meaning man and should at least deserve kindly criticism."

Mr. O'Connor turns it aside with the delicate ——"My pickles are British subjects, buy some!" We are fairly staggered by this prospect of a dill pickle in the face when we are discussing literature, and then flattened by . . . "they may be inferior (pickles), but you must buy them to encourage Canadian cucumbers . . ." an ugly, ignorant illustration.

BEHEADED

"I will admit that no man should be punished for ignorance, but may be beheaded for trying to impose ignorance upon others.

"Another phrase states . . . Canadian authors will begin to sell books they want as soon as they start writing . . . to a . . . high enough standard. . . . After all, authors have to cater to public taste, and if the public doesn't want their wares the fault is probably in the wares.

"Here Mr. O'Connor is trying to scratch his left ear with his right hand. The taste of the general public does not justify quality in reading material. Popularity is success. Success means that a great number of copies have been sold. To sell the greatest number of copies one caters to the greatest mass of the reading public. This greatest mass is located in the population group which did not graduate from grade school. It follows, then, that to be successful an author turns his work down as low as possible or as poor as possible.

"In other words, get right down to rudiments. The blood shall be as red as possible, jealousy shall be green and let's have plenty of purple sex.

MISCONCEPTION

"In the paragraph on copy cats, Mr. O'Connor repeats, 'If a book is good enough it will sell.' This is a misconception which is worse than the rack for a young author. There can be no writing good enough to sell. It must conform to the editorial market to which it is submitted.

"I wish personally to take Mr. O'Connor severely to task for these flip words. They show his astonishing lack of background and his overwhelming ignorance on the subject.

"Further proof of this same can be found in his words, 'no one is going to buy a book because the word Canadian is embossed . . . on the cover.' Right. But remove the word Canadian and replace it with a feminine plunging neckline and watch the copies roll out to the discriminating 'Canadian public!

"Canadian publishers will give every assistance to Canadian work, but we must consider the bank roll of the Canadian publisher as against the fabulous possibilities of any book-of-the-month club. The great rewards of the latter tend to funnel all work to their desks. This makes for a better choice for the publisher, a better choice as to what the reader wants and a one hoog fortune for the author, if he 'wins.'

NEEDS MONEY

"The Canadian author is in need mostly of a sustaining outlet for his work. He needs a place where he can earn a little money by his wit until he makes a name for himself nationally.

"Both Mr. O'Connor and his victim, Mr. Bird, may be going too far in assuming that Canadian talent wishes to be force-fed. Most Canadian writers I have known feature Canadian independence in their personal make-up, and harbor stern opinions about anything resembling charity. After all, they must be trail blazers or they wouldn't choose writing as their life work.

"As far as 'book-buying Canadians' (Mr. O'Connor's term) are concerned, there are very few of these hardy old-fashioned perennials now growing in the garden of Canadian literature. They have been crowded out by the book club member, a prolific and useful annual, of very small individuality, no great beauty and very great use.

"Lastly, I would advise both the sniper and the sniped to examine more closely the position of the Canadian author before making another venture expanding on his paucity of wealth or thought. His rewards are not on par with his United States contemporary per dollar received, but they are 'fair to middlin' in comparison to the index of population income per country. Even as is the bricklayer."

"Enjoyed your column March 6 very much and think you came out with a dandy mouthful. Would like to hear Mr. Bird's defence, if any."

Prime Minister Accepts Scout Book

Early Greek Lyrics Delightfully Modern

"Swans and Amber," by Dorothy Burr Thompson (University of Toronto Press-Saunders, $2.75).

Former acting director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology, Miss Thompson has gathered in this volume her delightful translations of early Greek lyric poetry.

To those who know Greek these verses will have the charm of new renderings; the majority who do not, should find appealing wit and simplicity. The selection is written in the English lyric style, regardless of the original Greek metre.

For those who are frightened off by the mere word "Greek" it should be interjected that the verse is not so remote fro mpresent-day spirit as it is in measurement of time. Early Greek poets were not only verse-makers, but teachers and philosophers and the "thought behind the thought," though it may be satirical, is lucidly simple.

SENTIMENT

Here is a poem called the "Feast," by Xenophanes, which might well express modern sentiment:

"Now is the floor clean and our hands and cups;
The boys fair garlands round our heads entwine;
Another carries round the perfume dish;
The mixing-bowl awaits sweet-smelling wine.

"Then let me praise the man who drinks and tells
No silly tales, but his adventures
bold,
Who will not need a slave to help him home,
Unless he happens to be very old."

Many of the single verse poems in "Swans and Amber" are not unlike the Japanese "Sword and Blossom Songs," taken from the Kokinshiu. This is not too surprising as the most exciting and productive period in Greek history was the sixth or seventh centuries before Christ.

There are also poems by Alcaeus, Sappho's brilliant contemporary on the Island of Lesbos who shared her immortality.

Not the least of the charms of this volume are the black and white sketches by Winifred McCulloch copied from Greek vase paintings of the same period as the poems. The author states they are not intended as illustrations, but rather to suggest ideas and preoccupations of the courts in which the poets moved.—E.L.

Author's Scope Too Wide

"Wine of Satan," by Laverne Gay. (S. J. Reginald Saunders & Co. Ltd., $3.50).

Laverne Gay is a talented young historical novelist, who, to some extent, met her match in writing a story about the First Crusade of the 11th century. For a 300-page book, the history and large group of characters provided too much material for the author.

Miss Gay's prose is excellent and easy to read. Her characterization is outstanding, and she can tell a story engagingly. In all these respects, the novel is enjoyable.

Tut this is too much vivid history—the Twelve Norman Counts; the lifetime of the greatest of the Twelve, Count Robert de Hauteville; the conquest of Southern Italy, and the campaigns on land and sea by Guiscard the Wary; the lifetime of his son, Bohemond, as colorful a figure as these high years of the Middle Age produced; the history of the First Crusade against the vivid backdrop of Syria; a host of famous figures from popes to the fabulous Greek emperor, Alexius, and a myriad of knights and rogues.

TOO MUCH

All this proved too much to cram into one book, small as historical novels go.

It was probably disappointment at the paucity of this fascinating history that soured the reviewer. Technically, there are few other flaws.

Guiscard and Robert emerge from the pages as a lusty duo which would do any historical novel proud. Zoe, the principal love interest, is all that anyone could ask—beautiful, proud, full of guile and surprises. High Falloc, the huge Saxon count; Geoffrey Ridelle, fighter and minstrel; the Jewish merchant Maurus; the knight-turned seafaring merchant Mihera, are but a few of the characters who would have been gems if space had been allowed to develop them.

Normally this reviewer inveighs against historical novels that run anywhere from 800 to 1,700 pages, but if Miss Gay is going to introduce such a wealth of history and characters into a later book, a plea here for more complete development.—F.C.B.

WELL-FED NATIONS

The Odd Corner

The newest literary landmark in America is a stone apartment house in Brooklyn. Here, at the same time, Arthur Miller wrote his prize-winning play, "All My Sons," and, one flight up, on the third floor, Norman Mailer wrote his best-selling war book, "The Naked and the Dead."

Both writers have since moved and continued their writing, showing that the building was not a source of inspiration. Miller's latest is the Broadway hit, "Death of a Salesman," while Mailer is working on a new book in Jamaica, Vt.

But making their past Brooklyn efforts possible—at least to some degree—is a 106-year-old deed for the property on which the apartment house stands. Recorded in 1843, this document stipulated that no "dangerous, noxious or offensive establishment" could be erected on the site. Thus the apartment building stands there today instead of a brewery, slaughterhouse or glue factory.

Reds Prefer War Novels Aimed at "Inspiration"

MOSCOW, March 12 (AP).—The three best-selling books in the Soviet Union last year were war novels.

Two of them deal exclusively with war events while the third treats both the war and problems of post-war reconstruction. The hero in all three is a soldier and a Communist.

The first part of one novel, "The White Birch," sold 595,000 copies in the first nine months of 1948. The second part has not yet been published.

"The White Birch" is the story of how Andrei Lopukhov, a young collective farmer, becomes a soldier and a hero, how he overcomes his hesitation and fears and frights valiantly at the front. The story also deals with Lopukhov's family in a village occupied by the Germans and of the family conflicts that arise out of the war and the occupation. Lopukhov's character is contrasted with that of his former officer who traitorously surrenders to the Germans.

"The Tale of a Real Person" was distributed by 20 publishing houses and sold 560,000 copies in the first nine months of 1948. The hero of this story is Aleksei Meresev, a flyer shot down over German lines. Meresev, his legs injured, crawls, rolls and struggles his way, mostly on hands and knees, back to the Soviet lines. In a funk of despair in a hospital after his legs were amputated, Meresev is inspired by an elderly Communist in the next bed to hope he can fly again.

OVERCOMES HANDICAP

Meresev teaches himself to use his artificial legs with such skill by virture of almost inhuman persistence that he eventually gets back to the front and proves himself in battle. The hero, incidentally, is a real person and his story is not fiction, although novelized by Boris Polevoe.

"Happiness" deals with parallel stories of a demobilized colonel who has been crippled in the war and with a skilled woman surgeon with whom he fell in love at the front. Colonel Voropaev goes to the Crimea and settles in a small village, but he is a Communist and cannot remain inactive. He takes to reorganizing collective farm life and soon attains great successes. One scene pictures Voropaev talking to Generalissimo Stalin who visits the area while at Yalta.

All three stories dwell strongly on the theme that character in a person is something which is "educated" and "taught." They picture men who by force of will have become heroes, who put social good ahead of personal advantage and who find their happiness struggling for the benefit of the nation.

Each of the books received enthusiastic reviews in the Soviet press. They are regarded as fulfilling the demands which Andrei Zhdanov put before Soviet writers two years ago to inspire Soviet youth to great deeds and sacrifices in the name of Communism. They are only three from a long list of dozens of such novels which deal with varying themes, most often the war, in similar manner.

Book production in the U.S.S.R. now is claimed to be above prewar figures by a wide margin and growing each year. In the first nine months of 1948 alone Soviet publishing houses issued 76,000,000 copies of novels and collections of poems.

Welsh Mining Country Background for Novel

"Some Trust in Chariots," by Jack Jones (The Musson Book Company, Ltd., $3).

This is the story of the Tewdwrs—not the plebian Tewdwrs, but the Royal Tewdwrs—as they would be quick to tell you, of Pontyglo, Wales.

In this chronicle of four generations in Welsh history, Mr. Jones gives a most vivid picture of life in Rhondda Valley, where for more than half a century men have hewn coal from the earth.

The narrator knows the Tewdwrs well, for he has lived among them and worked with them. In a gossipy, yet exact manner he tells his tale of how Harry and his uncle Rhys, who was two years younger than Harry, left the farm to go to the growing village of Pantyglo to seek fame and fortune.

SAGA TOLD

In lilting Welsh dialect the saga of these two men is unfolded. Into the hills of coal they went with one cart and a donkey to become in a short space of tiwe Tewdwrs Haulage. Soon it was 12 horses and 12 carts, and shortly after that 100. With the added income wealth as well as fame became theirs.

Throughout their climb through the social strata, the ever-present influence of the old patriarch Elizabeth Tewdwr remained with Harry and Rhys. Buses replaced coaches, trucks took the place of carts. Tewdwrs Haulage spread with branch offices in Aberdare, Tonypandy and the key mining towns of the Rhondda.

Throughout the progress of the Tewdwrs, the author has instilled his novel with the fierce nationalism of the Welsh miners.

Mr. Jones has scored a triumph in presenting a clear and concise brief for the Welsh miners. Not without bitterness does he point out through his story-teller, that the mistakes learned in the Great War, when the mines were milked of their strongest and fittest young men, with the result that eventually the output of coal sank to a level where it threatened the very lifeblood of Britain.

However, fairness and common sense prevails and Mr. Jones has made a valuable contribution to the world of literature in relating the story of a class of men so often taken for granted.—J.R.A.

American railroads carried 700,000,000 passengers in 1948 for a total distance of 40,000,000,000 miles.

Canadian Maple Syrup Delicacy for Most Discriminating Palate

—Central Press Canadian

What thrills can life of today offer to compare with old-time maple sugaring in Canada's rural section? Canadian maple syrup is delicacy for most discriminating palate, but just as delicious is fresh sap from trees. It comes from tree crystal clear and not noticeably sweet. It takes 40 gallons of it to make one gallon of maple syrup after long boiling process. Above photo at left shows farmer explaining to young lady how to go about tapping sugar maple. Little boy at right, like so many people these days, is sugar hungry and can't wait for the finished product so tastes some while carrying a pail of it from sugar bush to evaporating pan.

McNaughton Urges Prohibition Of Atomic Energy for Conflict

TORONTO, March 12 (CP).—Prohibition of atomic energy for destructive purposes and international control to ensure universal enforcement of this prohibition were urged today by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canada's permanent representative to the United Nations and Security Council representative.

"Atomic weapons don't replace convention armaments and by themselves can't win a war," he told the Toronto branch of the United Nations Association in Canada.

GREAT MENACE

"What we have to dread is secret accumulation in hostile lands of stocks of atom bombs, because even a very small stock is a very great menace."

"Requirements of national defence must take precedence in all matters pertaining to atomic energy," he said.

"There can be no compromise of security until the position is made safe by international agreement for the control of atomic energy."

Gen. McNaughton pointed to the East-West strife as the principle problem of politics and security.

NO ASSURANCE

He said the Soviet and its satellites insisted on simultaneous prohibition of atomic energy and destruction of existing stocks, but gave no assurance that a nation could not secretly plot an atomic war.

He said he held the "hopeful view we are advancing toward a state when the rule of law will prevail."

Evatt Defends Term "British"

LONDON, March 12 (CP).—Dr. H. V. Evatt, Deputy Prime Minister of Australia, said today in an article in The Times that the term "British Commonwealth of Nations" should be retained.

The name "British" did not mean all Commonwealth people came from the same stock or that Great Britain claimed supremacy.

COMMON BOND

"But the name does refer to a common bond which united very adverse members of a group and no other name could encompass this or indeed accurately describe the unique association," he says. "The bond is composed of many strands—history, nationality, common ideals in political life, common inheritance of the tradition of British liberty in government and society, the common objectives of human welfare.

"The is the light in which the term 'British' must be interpreted and it should always remain unaltered."

Evatt says an official communique from the meeting last October of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers had referred to "The Commonwealth" for the sake of brevity but the change to omit "British" was "never suggested by anyone."

In a review of Commonwealth development, he says "we should not be alarmed by change and development or by independent initiative on the part of one or more member nations of the Commonwealth.

Says Hypnotism Caused Mindszenty Confession

NEW YORK, March 12 (NANA) — Granted preliminary brutality, it would have been a "mere chore" to hypnotize Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty and the Bulgarian Protestant churchmen who "confessed" recently, Dr. George H. Estabrooks, head of the psychology department of Colgate University and a recognized scientific authority on hypnotism, said today.

"Although there is a popular belief that no man can be hypnotized against his will," Estabrooks told this reporter, "men certainly can be hypnotized without their consent—which amounts to the same thing in most cases. Furthermore, there is every reason to believe that men actually can be hypnotized against their will with the use of drugs and a general breakdown of morale by strain and prolonged loss of sleep."

CAN PROVE POINT

Another illusion about hypnotism, Estabrook said, is that a hypnotized person will do nothing he would do in his normal condition. "This is sheer nonsense, and I can quote chapter and verse from experimental literature to prove my point. An additional point is that a good hypnotic subject, properly trained, can act in such a way that I would defy the best hypnotist to tell whether he is hypnotized or not.

"For example, I frequently have used a hypnotic subject as partner in bridge, having him play one hand in the trance and the next hand out. I defy any one to tell when he is in and when he is out or when I change the control. The whole thing is regulated by post-hypnotic cues. For instance, I scratch my ear and he is hypnotized. I rub my nose and he is no longer hypnotized."

AGAINST WILL

As to the many indications that this can be extended to what a strictly technical definition would call hypnotism "against the will," Estabrooks says "there is virtually no experimental literature in the English language, because we do not have the background of brutality necessary to prove this special point" beyond question.

He points out, however, that in military service, prolonged strain "produces what is known as combat fatigue, a neurosis which can hit the most stable of human beings," and that "individuals in this state generally are hypnotized easily."

Psychiatrists have emphasized that no one can remember "confessions" made under the influence of any drug known here, and that after regaining full conciousness any victim can repudiate a "confession" which outrages his sense of truth. A combination of drugs or brutality with hypnotism would seem to solve this problem.

"It is simple in hypnotism to remove from the subject all knowledge that he has been hypnotized," Estabrooks said.

He cites "one of the best subjects" he knows, a keen student of hypnotism, whom he had hypnotized repeatedly, removing remembrance. Estabrook said the man once expressed doubt of this possibility, declaring he never had been hypnotized and that he didn't believe Estabrooks could hypnotize him.

"In literally one second he was hypnotized again," the Colgate psychologist added.

PSYCHIC BATTERING

"Granting the brutality which would make it a mere chore to hypnotize, let us say, Cardinal Mindszenty," Estabrooks continued, "it would be a further mere chore to get the quick, rapid control familiar to any operator who has dealt with the military application. It then would be easily possible to hypnotize the cardinal ten times or more in one hour—or as often as desired—and begin a psychic battering which I firmly believe no human mind could stand.

"If I were the operator and were without scruple, I would throw in everything to induce confusion, doubt and uncertainty as to the past—and I'll venture to say that within 24 hours I could have him reduced to a state of disintegration. Then I would proceed to reintegrate his personality along my own lines, driving home conviction that he was guilty of all I wished him to confess, and finally would turn out that curious contradiction we saw in these recent trials."

Meanwhile, a dispatch reached New York today from Gault MacGowan, North American Newspaper Alliance correspondent in Germany, quoting the opinion of a highly authoritative Russian on the Russian zone border that Cardinal Mindszenty's partial confession of guilt was obtained by mental suggestion in a "psychologic treatment," without drugs. The authority, who was not albe to disclose his name for obvious reasons, is a representative of one of the Russian churches who was in Soviet prison cells and concentration camps, experienced such treatments, and saw others to whom they were given.

TRAINED QUESTIONERS

"Cardinal Mindszenty's interogators were operators of the highest level," the Russian churchman said. "He was not shouted at or bullied. But he was faced on a diplomatic basis with the greatest problem that ever can face a national leader of a church.

"I believe the cardinal was told that if he did not 'co-operate,' some of the bishops, abbots or young priests of whom the world has never heard would be shot, or sent to Siberia. Then they left him alone to think it over, with a powerful electric light shining on him night and day, and accusing eyes constantly peering through the cell door."

Condition Critical

—Central Press Canadian.

Pearl Polishchuk, above, who went from Hawkeye, Sask., to work in Toronto, is still in critical condition after being found in her rooming house with both her legs nearly severed above knees. Doctors had to amputate the right one. Described as "religious fanatic," ambulance attendants said she prayed continuously while being taken to hospital.

Young Pianist Of Winnipeg Will Play Here

Vera Sopuck, young Winnipeg pianist, will be the next artist to appear on the "Young Artists Series," here.

Miss Sopuck will give her recital in the Newstead Hall, at 8:15 p.m., March 18.

An advance notice says that she is an Aiken Memorial Trophy winner at the Manitoba Musical Festival and the outstanding instrumentalist of "the current year."

She was the pianist in the film, "A City Sings," and passed her L.R.S.M. diploma examination in 1948. She is also well known for her radio and concert work.

In announcing the presentation of Miss Sopuck at the Spring recital of the series, members emphasize that the recitals are staged to bring young instrumental and vocal artists of ability and promise before a wider public.

Cod Fisheries Basic Industry, Huge Newfoundland Investment

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 12 (CP).—Joe Moore, 26, bronzed and tough, is a cod fisherman. As such, he's working part of Newfoundland's basic industry.

Joe's shanty lies at the foot of Signal Hill, the towering rock that looms over this ancient port and the Narrows through which ships pass to and fro from the sea.

At night, from the door of his shanty one can see the little fishing boats bobbing in the swell below, the fishing light on Chain Rock near the Narrows, the big revolving beam on the far side, the riding beacons of freighters docked in the harbor and the thousand twinkling lights of the city itself.

SCORES OF SHANTIES

One can smell the salt drying on the flakes—or stagings—around Joe's shanty and the scores of other shanties that twine around the foot of the hill. Always there is the lap of the sea at the pilings.

Joe is owner and skipper of his own boat and has a crew of five. Some of them have their tiny homes behind the stagings, but those who are not married spend most of their time, when not fishing, in the shanty.

The shanty is on the second story, so to speak. Below it is the heavily-planked wharf where the cod is salted down and stacked to dry. Under that again is the water. The fish are thrown out of the boats at the end of the wharf and cleaned and hosed down on rough wooden tables.

The shanty consists of three rooms, one of them open to the weather. Fish are stacked in one, gear is kept in another and the crew makes its home in a third. In this last room are two double bunks, a small table and bench and a stove and cupboard. The men do their own cooking and are partial to bacon and eggs.

UP EARLY

When working the cod traps Joe and his men roll out about 5 a.m. for their first trip of the day. The boat is about 25 feet long and carries an eight horsepower engine.

In the Summer Joe and his crew trap-fish. The traps are square and buoyed at the four corners. A "leader" is used to guide the cod into the nets.

Hauling the nets in, dumping their contents and setting them out again is back-breaking work. Joe's nets are about four miles outside the harbor near Blackhead. A trip may take three or four hours and the second is made about nightfall. After that comes the cleaning and salting. One day's work may be as short as ten hours. Usually, however, a working day runs to 16 or 18 hours.

Joe Moore began to fish when he was 11 after his father was drowned. Before the war he could make only $300 a year (in 1936, 25 per cent of the working population made less than $100 a year), but he's doing about five times better than that now.

QUARTER OF PRODUCTS

Dried cod brings Newfoundland around $17,000,000 a year and fresh and frozen cod more than $6,000,000. This represents about one-quarter of Newfoundland's total exports.

The cod industry can be classified into three groups—inshore, deep-sea and Labrador.

Most fisherman in Newfoundland—there are about 30,000—work inshore. They use trawl lines early in the season and switch to cod traps later on. One of Joe Moore's cod nets may bring up 60,000 pounds in a single haul, so that fish slop over the sides of the boat. The traps usually are set on shoals near headlands and the take is big when the cod is "running."

Deepsea fishing is done almost exclusively from the south coast by schooners up to 150 tons. They fish the banks, great shoals lying far off the southeast coast. In Winter schooners sometimes ice up so badly that they turn turtle.

TWO GROUPS

Two groups operate in Labrador waters—"stationers," who have their fishing "rooms" based on shore and schooners who carry their crews and gear with them from Newfoundland. They move about with the runs and split and salt their cod on board.

In recent years particularly since the war, development of refrigeration plants for production of cod fillets and processed fish has gone ahead by leaps and bounds.

These plants now have a daily capacity of about 700,000 pounds and a holding capacity of more than 10,000,000 pounds. Commission government poured more than $4,000,000 into new plants and set up about 20 small bait refrigeration plants which distribute bait to fishermen.

This has meant a new deal for Newfoundland fishermen. It is taking the emphasis off dried cod and boosting production of fresh and frozen cod fillets.

This diversifies fishing. Joe Moore, for instance, now spends about as much time cleaning and salting his cod as he does catching it. But if he sells it to a processing plant he has more time for fishing. Besides, he gets cash instead of kind. For it is usually the rule for merchants to pay for a fisherman's season's catch in food and clothing.

Fights Leprosy on A-Bomb Base

—Central Press Canadian

ON Tinian Island, site of wartime B-29 atomic base, where United States planes were loaded for destruction of Hiroshima, young navy doctor now wages peacetime war on leprosy—one of man's most dreaded enemies. He is Dr. Jack William Millar, 26, Palo Alto, Calif., shown at top with wife, Jane, a trained nurse. They answered call for volunteers, believing leprosy can be controlled. Dr. Millar considers the assignment realization of old ambition. At bottom, he is directing gardening work of patients. Tinian is one of the navy-administered Pacific isles under U.N. trusteeship.

To Experiment With Letters On Broadcasts

MONTREAL, March 12 (CP).—A. D. Dunton, chairman of the C.B.C. board of governors, said today that the C.B.C. will investigate a suggested period on the air, similar to a newspaper's letters-to-the-editor column, carrying replies to previously-broadcast criticism.

S. Morgan-Powell, The Montreal Star's drama editor, in a recent article, had suggested such a period weekly.

"The principle that both sides in a controversial matter must have fair opportunity, is well established for Canadian broadcasting . . . I think you have suggested another method which might be useful at times . . . This might be a useful means of meeting the basic principle in cases where a full-blown counter-broadcast is not needed. The C.B.C., for one, is going to investigate the idea further."

Tailor Suffers Shock at Fire

VANCOUVER, March 12 (CP). — John Zaschuk, a tailor, collapsed today as he watched his recently-purchased shop swept by flames.

Friends said he had worked a lifetime to save enough money to go into business for himself.

Taken to hospital, it was found he was suffering from nervous shock.

The fire damage was estimated at between $7,000 to $9,000.

A friend, Bill Cartier, suffered minor burns while attempting to rescue the pattern for a new type of trousers he had designed.

NEW DRUG FOUND

LONDON, March 12 (AP).—British researchers have discovered a new drug, Nisin, similar to penicillin but more effective in treating a cow disease which costs Britain an estimated loss of 40,000,000 gallons of milk a year.

The National Institute for Research in Dairying announced the discovery today.

Cold Weather Fails to Halt Plane Record

EDMONTON, March 12 (CP). — A four-engine jet bomber of the United States Air Force arrived in Edmonton yesterday after setting a new speed record for that type of craft during cold weather tests in Alaska.

Capt. Louis Stokes of Chicago piloted the big ship at 675 miles an hour on a 2,875-mile flight between Fairbanks and Anchorage. The trip took 21 minutes.

The aircraft was flown on its speed course at a height of 16,000 feet. Its ceiling is estimated at higher than 50,000 feet.

Russian Women's Silence Causes Stir in London

By JOAN CAPREOL

LONDON, March 13 (Reuters) — Six Russian housewives, who are on a two-week visit to Britain, have probably received more space in London's newspapers since their arrival three days ago by refusing to talk than if they had granted long interviews.

Their present reticence about themselves or their plans has led to their being dubbed the "six silent" women, and has evoked not only the familiar phrase "iron curtain" but the "red flannel" curtain as well

The London Star yesterday devoted its entire editorial column to them.

Entitled "Let Them Talk," it said:

"It seems that once again, the most ordinary and unpolitical of human activities is enveloped by the Soviet Government with some highly charged significance.

"It was the same with the Dynamos (the Russian soccer team which visited Britain four years ago). Playing football or running a kitchen seems to have taken on some mysterious political importance quite incomprehensible to us."

The deputation arrived Wednesday night by air, a day late for celebrations of International Women's Day, the committee of which is playing hostess Yesterday they visited a cigarette factory in London where workers found their questions intelligent and their manner "very friendly."

A committee spokesman denied the housewives were under orders from Moscow to say nothing. Tiredness after their two days flying in bad weather was the reason given for their silence.

Asked whether a press conference would be held, the spokesman said, "We do not know yet, but in any case there will be a prepared statement to the press later giving their schedule."

Paris Is Next Move for Well-Known Artist

Colonist Photos

Upper left, Mr. and Mrs. Marcal Godfrey posed with "Laddie" in the living-room of the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Elias, 1532 Prospect Place, where they are staying at present. Portrait of Mrs. Elias over the mantelpiece, is one of Godfrey's canvases. Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey will shortly be leaving for Paris, where Mr. Godfrey has a studio.

Upper right, Marcel Godfrey studies a recent portrait he is working on. An artist of exceptional versatility, he works with pastels too; does not limit himself to portraits or any particular subject, and spends $1,000 a year on painting materials.

Lower photo, this very fine picture was painted in the paddy fields of Java in 1939. The original canvas was sold years ago, our picture is a reproduction of a reproduction.

MARCEL Godfrey painted his first picture at the age of 35 to win a bet.

Like another famous artist called Gauguin, whose life he parallels in some ways, Godfrey has lived for travel and adventure. Where Gauguin began his career as a staid stockbroker, Godfrey was an underwriter, though he has never been described as staid. Like Gauguin, some of his most brilliant canvases were done in Tahiti. They both began painting at 35.

Godfrey's paintings have an international reputation. They hang in New York, Copenhagen, Tahiti, Paris, Singapore and London, to mention a few, and are owned by a variety of people from a New York osteopath to the Marquis of Reading.

His tremendously varied works have won commendation in the most exclusive art circles. One of his paintings won the Beatrice Stone Medal in 1940.

Though he has lived here, in the Okanagan and in Vancouver since the war, Marcel Godfrey will be leaving shortly for Paris with his wife, Rene. When Springtime comes to Montparnasse, Godfrey will be there! Not even he will hazard a guess as to when he will again be seen here, or at his fruit ranch in the Okanagan.

He has been an underwriter, actor, author, editor, playwright, stage manager and soldier as well as artist.

ACTOR AND AUTHOR

London-born of an English father and a French mother, Marcel Godfrey graduated from Cambridge University. Following this, he decided rather than take the usual fashionable tour of the Continent, he would travel to Canada to see what he could do with a year on his own. He arrived here with $50 in his pocket, but the experiment was interrupted by the 1914-18 war, when he returned to England to join the army. As a dispatch-rider he was badly wounded in the Battle of the Somme.

After the war, Godfrey immediately wrote a book which went into two editions, produced three plays and decided to become an actor. He played in pantomime at Drury Lane, was stage director of the Apollo Theatre, and acted in stock companies.

His father decided this was not quite the career for his son, so Marcel joined Lloyds of London as an underwriter and stayed there eight years. He is still a member of Lloyds.

Leaving the firm finally, he went to Paris and became Continental editor of a magazine called "Piccadilly," and incidentally began the first "Dinner Flights" from London to Paris.

On a holiday on the Island of Majorca, where he intended to write a book on reincarnation, Godfrey met the friend and made the bet that started him on his painting career.

Godfrey took his art seriously, studying many years in Paris under Robert Logan before the Tahitian trip which lasted a year. On his return he held an exhibition in the Cooling Galleries, Bond Street, London, and the entire collection was sold.

Since then he has painted in every part of the world, and has never stopped studying. He has been intimate with many other great artists, like Augustus John and Picasso, and from 1939 to 1940 studied with Jean Dagoroe in Paris.

He returned here to join the Canadian Army in 1940, and was appointed camouflage officer, Pacific Command. Captain Godfrey originated so many new ideas that the United States Army asked him to open a school of camouflage in San Francisco. He was sent to England in charge of camouflage for the entire Canadian Army.

The past few months Godfrey has been giving painting lessons for his friends David and Peggy Packard at "The Barn."

Marcel takes two classes twice a week and while his patience is generally wonderful to behold, he sometimes "runs amuk," which is even more wonderful to behold. He waves his brushes, pleads, stamps, throws his arms in the air and brings down colorful invectives on the heads of his fond pupils.

He believes the Packards have an important future if they are given the support they deserve. "They need more pupils, more sculpture commissions. They are professional artists and their 'Barn' has the right working atmosphere without useless chi-chi.

"In Paris," Godfrey states, "there is a Ministry of Beaux Arts which facilitates and cultivates art, makes grants and helps artists to live cheaply. An artist can starve very nicely in this country. He is lucky if he makes ten cents an hour, and that is only when someone is gracious enough to give him a commission.

"An artist does not charge for the handful of hours he may work on one picture, but for the years of training he has had to put in."

When Godfrey returns to Canada he wants to inaugurate a Ministry of Art here. In the meantime, he hopes an art gallery like Gertrude Snider's will be patronized; artists like the Packards encouraged.

RENE GODFREY

Mr. Godfrey's most attractive American-born wife, Rene, has had several successful careers of her own. Her first jobs were reporting for various papers, including The New York World Magazine.

The first American woman to be employed by a French dressmaking firm, she worked for eight years for the famous Jacques Worth, Paris, in charge of advertising and publicity. She originated the first fashion broadcast beamed from Paris to the United States.

Rene looks back on her years with Worth with understandable nostalgia.

"All my clothes were given to me by Worth because it was good advertising. He insisted I have four street dresses, four evening dresses, four sports costumes and four dinner dresses—four times a year. That made 64 dresses a year! But I was kept poor buying the right accessories for them."

Later Rene Godfrey worked for Elizabeth Arden and did free-lance writing in London from her flat in the Temple.

She is a woman of imagination, sympathy, intelligence, charm and great chic.

Marcel Godfrey is a man of keen wit and a genius for satire. His painting is the profound purpose of his life, but he keeps the light touch in his personal relationships and has an enormous capacity for [illegible].

For a man who has been an underwriter, actor, author, editor, playwright, stage manager and soldier, he has painted a lot of pictures.

Successful Tea Held by Mothers

At First Baptist Church on Friday afternoon a well-attended tea was given by the mothers of the pre-school children who three mornings weekly attend the First Baptist Church Co-operative Play Group for pre-school children.

This was the third anniversary of this successful mother-child project and also marked the opening of the beautiful new children's room. Since its inception, Mrs. Clifford Hilton has been director of children.

The guests were welcomed by Mrs C. Hilton, Mrs. Edwards, mother leader of the group, and Mrs. W. W. McGill, sponsor of the play groups for pre-school children.

After a short demonstration of a regular morning's activities in the children's room, tea was served in the church school hall by the mothers' study group. Presiding at the urns were Mrs. Reginald Freemantle, provincial pre-school convener for the Parent-Teacher Federation; Mrs. Reginald Kelly, pre-school convener for Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council, Mrs. Helen Low, director of Christ Church Cathedral pre-school play group, and Mrs. Roland Webster, director of the James Bay pre-school group.

Representatives from the Prospect Lake and Saanichton pre-school groups were also present.

Muriel Eastwood, J. W. Oosterink Married at Pretty Home Ceremony

At a pretty double-ring ceremony which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. J. M. Eastwood, 1112 Faithful Street, Friday evening, Muriel Janet, their younger daughter, was united in marriage with John [illegible], son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Oosterink, 343 St [illegible]. Rev. William Allen of Fairfield United Church, read the nuptial service in front of the fireplace, which was decorated with Spring flowers.

The pretty bride, given away by her father, was gowned in white moire taffeta fashioned with high neck, long pointed sleeves and bouffant skirt finished with a peplum at the waist. Her veil of illusion net was arranged with a coronet of orange blossoms and cascaded to the floor. A spray bouquet of red and white carnations completed her costume.

Miss [illegible] Ryan, wearing an off-shoulder [illegible] gown of pale turquoise nylon marquisette over taffeta, with pale pink floral bandeau in her hair, and matching pink mitts, was the bride's only attendant. She carried a Colonial bouquet of Spring flowers.

The bridegroom had his brother-in-law, Mr. [illegible] Laurie, as best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Foresters' Hall, 749 Broughton Street, where Mr. and Mrs. Eastwood and Mr. and Mrs. Oosterink welcomed the guests with the young couple. The three-tiered cake centring the table was cut by the newlyweds. During the evening Miss Shirley Mosher, cousin of the bride, sang "Because." The toast to the bride was given by Mr Joe Nichols. Leaving on the midnight boat for a honeymoon in Vancouver and Seattle, the bride wore an American Beauty crepe dress with gabardine topcoat, hat and accessories in navy blue, and a gardenia corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Oosterink will return to Victoria to make their home.

Chapter Names New Conveners

The Major John Hebden Gillespie Chapter, I.O.D.E., met recently at the home of Mrs. J. B. Speck, when conveners were nominated. These included: Postwar service, Mrs. McBratney; endowment fund, Mrs. G. P. Clarke; Empire study, Mrs. R. H. Spilsbury; child and family welfare, Mrs. P. W. Bell; ex-service personnel, Mrs. D. Patterson; membership, Miss Joan French, and films, Mrs. J. B Speck.

Various reports were read and plans for the Municipal annual meeting were discussed. Mrs. H. A Richmond and Mrs. G. P. Clarke volunteered to head a committee to take care of arrangements for the meeting.

The regent, Mrs. H. L. Woolison, was nominated as delegate to the Provincial annual meeting. Mrs E. Oldaker was elected standard-bearer.

It was unanimously decided that Mrs. S. P. Moody be asked to [illegible] as the chapter's honorary regent for the coming year, and Mrs. J. H. Gillespie as honorary vice-regent.

The sum of $5 was donated to the Columbia Coast Mission.

Plans for a proposed junior dance to be held at the Yacht Club in June were discussed and a committee was formed to make arrangements.

Hard of Hearing Club Elects New Officers

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Victoria Club for the Hard of Hearing was held on Wednesday in the club rooms.

The retiring president, Mr. F. G. Purser, reported on the activities during the past year showing an increase in the membership and in the attendance at the meetings. He also drew attention to the continual interest of the club in the hard of hearing school children and thanked the various committees for their work in promoting the activities of the club. He referred to the annual picnic, club bazaar and other special events.

The election of officers resulted in the following members being selected for 1949: President, Mrs. E. LeBus; first vice-president, Mr. H. R. Brown; second vice-president, Mr. George H. Evans; secretary, Capt. George A. Laird; treasurer, Mrs. F. E. Beavan. The following were elected to the executive committee: Miss L. Dodimead, Mrs. H. Murray, Mrs. F. G. Purser, Mrs. A. Sangster, Mr. K. T. Hughes and Mr. F. G. Purser.

Side Sweep Is Top Favorite At London's Spring Hat Shows

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, March 12 (CP).—In London's Spring hat sshow the "side sweep" is top favorite.

Carried in cloche, turban and other close-fitting styles, it rises from the modest little side-swept brim to the "one-eyed" styles now prevalent in Paris. This is a wide, deep, tucked, side brim prop, flowered or feathered, it generally covers one side of the face and hair.

Four Paris "one-eyed" styles were chosen by British manufacturers for reproduction here at modest prices. They are:

1. A deep-crowned pale green rough straw with folded front brim tucked back from the forehead and side sweep covered with green silk peonies, reproduced in cheaper straw with rayon flowers, machine-stitched instead of hand-made. It will sell for £3 ($12).

2. A Chinese baku straw in cornflower blue. Its wide brim swathed with blue organdie and its side-sweep crowned with cornflowers, reproduced in sisal straw hand-done trimming. Price £4.

3. A navy blue peterasham of turban shape with high front brim folding back from the face and side-sweeping in two deep flutes, reproduced in plain felt for £2.

4. A deep, close-fitting crown with folded brim and deep, wide side sweep with narrow ribbon-loops decorating the attractive forward sweep. Made in white synthetic straw it will reproduce in the same material for four guineas ($16.80).

or in a cheaper one for three guineas.

Silk, linen and petersham are being used for brim covering usually to match a dress or suit.

Rougher straws and felts have big feather mounts, floral or fruit posies. The decorations, if any, are elaborate.

Hats are again being covered with silk or linen to match the ensemble—especially modern shapes—and tartan is used a lot in little hats with feather mounts for combination with matching accessories.

Bonnets are back again. A black baku with no brim, its forward sweep accentuated by white lace trimming, its side decorated with two big camelias, is a lovely finish to a black moire suit. A rough straw biscuit-colored bonnet has rough tan veiling—shoulder length behind, scarf length in front—finished with a wide ribbon for asymmetrical effect.

Watteau lines are still being used but worn with a side tilt, the rising sweep of the brim accentuated by silk or satin ribbon and finished with a single flower at one side, shepherdess style. The back brim is generally pleated.

The "flower-pot" hat is the latest "teen-ager." A "flower pot" of felt or straw is worn straight on the head back from the face and decorated only by wide contrast ribbon.

First ocean steamships were converted sailing ships.

Margaret Burnett and R. Sprinkling Married at Fairfield United Church

Rev. W. Allen officiated at the marriage solemnized at Fairfield United Church last evening between Miss Margaret Burnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burnett, 1161 Chapman Street, and Mr. Robert Francis Sprinkling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sprinkling, 993 Southgate Street.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of white satin trimmed with lace. She wore a floor-length veil and carried red roses and white carnations.

Mr. Neil Sprinkling, the groom's brother, was best man and Mr. D. Sprinkling and Mr. F. Hoffman acted as ushers.

Mrs. Ireland played "Because" while the register was being signed.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Lougheed's Banquet Club where the toast to the bride was proposed by Capt. Edgler.

Leaving for a honeymoon at Vancouver and Seattle, the bride traveled in a light brown suit, mink muskrat fur coat and wine accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Sprinkling will return to make their home in Victoria.

Why do so many Canadians prefer ENO?

ENO's "Fruit Salt" is preferred by many more Canadians than any other saline or health salt because ENO is so effective and pleasant tasting.

ENO's mild antacid action really helps relieve stomach upsets—ENO as a laxative gently helps cleanse the digestive tract and ENO is completely harmless and not habit forming.

No wonder ENO's "Fruit Salt" is six times more popular than any other saline or health salt sold in Canada!

Mrs. Morkill Tells Guides About International Work

Mrs. Alan Morkill, M.B.E., who has been associated with international guiding for 30 years, told Guiders something of this aspect of Girl Guide work when she addressed the annual meeting of the British Columbia Provincial Council of the Canadian Girl Guide Association at the Memorial Hall yesterday afternoon.

She said that the World Association has striven to promote unity of purpose in the fundamental principles of guiding throughout the world. These principles are based on the original promise and law, she declared.

The association discusses various methods of promoting friendship among Guides in different countries at their meetings, Mrs. Morkill pointed out and stated that many international get-togethers have been arranged from time to time. She cited in particular an international camp in Norway at which more than 4,000 Guides were in attendance and various camps organized by the English and French Guides in their countries.

Every country has different ways of training, Mrs. Morkill declared, and in these various ways Guides are able to learn a little of another country's methods.

INTERNATIONAL HOSTEL

Mrs. Morkill spoke of the international hostel in London where Guiders can stay very reasonably, and where they come in contact with other Guides.

She stressed that friendship is one of the most important things about Guiding and said that the international work of the organization is helping the young people to understand the ways of other lands.

Mrs. Morkill was introduced by Mrs. J. Quinnell, Provincial Commissioner, who conducted the meetings.

TEA AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE

Following adjournment the Guides were entertained at tea at Government House by Mrs. Charles E Banks, wife of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

Last night a campfire was held at the Memorial Hall and this morning Guiders Own will be held at the home of Mrs. K. MacDougall, Wilmot House, Wilmot Place, Oak Bay, commencing at 10 30 a.m.

BABY'S COLDS

Help Nature To Fight Them Off

Medical Science denies there is any such thing as a cure for colds—only Nature herself can do it. So when baby's sniffles, or stuffy breathing warn you of a cold's presence—cooperate at once with Nature.

See that baby is kept warm, gets plenty of sleep and take extra care that the bowels are thoroughly cleared of harmful wastes. To do this without upsetting baby's whole system and further weakening it, try Baby's Own Tablets. Mild, yet act promptly in getting rid of the irritating materials that make baby restless and feverish. Mrs. George McBride of Scarboro says: "My baby of 24 months caught a nasty cold so I tried Baby's Own Tablets and she threw this cold off quicker than ever before. I certainly am for Baby's Own Tablets from now on." Effective also in teething troubles, constipation and other simple baby ailments. 25¢.

STOP—

loosening your skin!

Make This Test: You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are loosening delicate tissues around their eyes in the act of creaming their skins. But my Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No need for rubbing at all. When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! You stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in my 4 Purpose Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths!—it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

Let Me Prove All This To You At My Expense

Silk Display Here in May

Preliminary plans for the first Victoria showing of "Symphony in Silk" were made at a recent meeting of Xi Beta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority. The display is a unique collection of over 100 pieces of petitpoint, the work of Mrs. Violet Johnson, now located in Vancouver. The work has previously been displayed in Alberta and Saskatchewan and will be shown at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto this Fall. Dates for the Victoria showing have been set as May 4 to 7 at the new Art Centre on Fernwood Street.

Tentative plans have been made by the Beta Sigma Phi Council to sponsor a silver tea at the Aged Ladies' Home on Saturday, April 30, proceeds to go toward the purchase of linen for the Home.

The annual Spring Formal of the Sorority will be held at the Empress Hotel on Wednesday, April 27.

The cultural program initiated the study of Mexico with talks on the history and ancient culture and traditions of the country being given by Misses Dorothy Waller, Mary Horan and Mrs. Edna Bix.

Next regular meeting, at which films will be feaured, will be held at the home of Miss Muriel Knight, 1230 Rockland Avenue, on March 14.

Rayve... the new personalized HOME PERMANENT with the exclusive DIAL-A-WAVE

...your guide to the one right wave for your kind of hair

FROM THE FAMOUS PEPSODENT LABORATORIES

THE COMPLETE RAYVE KIT... everything you need for the most perfect permanent you've ever had. Includes 60 improved "easy-to-use" plastic curlers, 80 extra strong end papers, the "Dial-a-Wave", and simple step-by-step instructions. $2.50†

THE RAYVE REFILL KIT includes the "Dial-a-Wave" and everything else for a complete Rayve wave, except curlers and bands. $1.25†

Find your "Rayve Number" on the easy-to-use Dial-a-Wave

The new, easy-to-use "Dial-a-Wave" that's in every Rayve package takes the guesswork out of your home permanent. You simply set the dial for the texture and condition of your hair and the kind of wave you want ... and find your "Rayve Number." This number is your guide to the special timing procedure that's best for your particular kind of hair.

A RAYVE wave is faster, yet gentler ... far easier, too!

THERE'S NOTHING HIT OR MISS about your Rayve cold wave. It's personalized—for your kind of hair. The exclusive "Dial-a-Wave" quickly gives you a guide to the professionally correct timing procedure for every kind of hair. With Rayve, you can be confident of the most perfect permanent you've ever had. And it will save you time, money and trouble.

RAYVE WAVING TIMES ARE UP TO TWICE AS FAST as old-type home permanents. Yet Rayve's modern, improved formula makes waving action noticeably gentler. More than 50,000 women pretested Rayve for you ... found it far easier, more comfortable. You don't even wear a turban. Giving yourself a Rayve wave is as easy as putting your hair up in curlers.

A RAYVE WAVE IS LONG-LASTING—YET SOFTER, MORE NATURAL. No frizz or fuzzy ends with a Rayve home permanent. You'll love it from the first day. It will be so much more natural looking than any you've had ... so easy to fix in any of the new, becoming hair styles. Once you've tried Rayve, you'll never again be satisfied with any other kind of wave.

Victorian Designs Exhibit to Italy

For first time since war, Canadian Government Exhibition Commission will display Canadian products at Milan (Italy) Trade Fair in April. Edwin D. Baker, of Victoria, designer of display, is shown above pointing out industrial panel to Dr. Pietro Migone, Italian commercial attache at Ottawa; Baron Mario di Stefano, Italian Ambassador to Canada, and Tom C. Wood, Canadian war artist and chief designer of commission. Mr. Baker is the son of Mrs. C. W. Baker, Chalet Road, Sidney.

Control of Arthritis, Rheumatism Goal of New B.C. Health Program

A program for the control of arthritic and rheumatic diseases for British Columbia, offering special hospital beds, clinical services and mobile units for the treatment of patients, was announced yesterday by Health and Welfare Minister George S. Pearson.

Calling it a small beginning of a big scheme, Mr. Pearson said British Columbia was the first Province to undertake a scheme of this kind on so broad a basis. It will be supported by B. C. Division of the Canadian Arthritis Society, the B.C. Medical Association, the Chartered Physical Therapists Association, the Federal and Provincial Governments and from public contributions.

Two main objectives are the provision of facilities for early diagnosis and care of those who may be expected to respond to modern treatment.

"PILOT" SCHEME

A "pilot" scheme is already in operation in Vancouver, but it is hoped to expand it to cover the whole Province to meet the needs of a large proportion of British Columbia's 45,000 sufferers from these diseases.

This year a diagnostic treatment and research centre is to be opened at Vancouver General Hospital, which will mean an expansion of out-patient facilities and a new in-patient ward of 20 or more beds. Two trained physical therapists, an occupational therapist and special equipment will be added to the clinic and a research assistant is to be appointed to provide clinical material.

General practitioners will be given the benefit of diagnosis by the clinic and they will be given the opportunity to observe and treat a group of patients under skilled direction, to increase the number of physicians with a special knowledge of arthritic diseases.

Plans are under way for diagnostic and treatment centres at St. Paul's and the Children's Hospital in Vancouver, at St. Joseph's and Jubilee Hospitals in Victoria, at New Westminster and Trail.

Mobile units are being trained to bring physical therapy treatment to patients unable to attend the centres or their own physicians.

An educational programme is being undertaken by an advisory committee of the B.C. Medical Association, which will offer an intensive short course during the Summer.

Sale of Gold Above $35 Said Opposed

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP).—The Treasury says it is strongly opposed to permitting sale of gold in the United States at any price materially different from the $35 an ounce official monetary value.

William Martin, Jr., acting secretary, so informed Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.).

Magnuson, who made the letter public today, said he had asked the Treasury's position on proposed legislation to permit sale of gold by lode gold producers on the open market.

Martin said the principal purpose of such a proposal appeared to be to provide for sale of domestic gold at a price above the monetary value.

Such quality of price, he said, would conflict with the basic purposes which led the Government to buy and sell gold and use it as a reserve for its banking and currency system.

"For the Government to hold a floor under the price of gold but not to fix a ceiling over it at the same price violates the whole conception of the use of gold for official monetary reserves and for defining and maintaining the parity value of gold," Martin wrote.

"The Treasury policy of buying all gold from authorized sources at $35 an ounce in order to keep the dollar from going to a premium over 1-35th of an ounce of gold has the effect of keeping the price of gold from falling before $35 an ounce."

Police Hit By Estimates

VANCOUVER, March 12 (CP).—Police Chief Walter Mulligan said yesterday the familiar mounted police in Vancouver's Stanley Park may be withdrawn because he has had to slash $37,000 from his estimates for the coming year.

He told the police commission in order to reduce his 1949 estimates of $2,100,000 he may have to dispense with the Stanley Park force and also reduce personnel and the number of prowler cars.

Legalized Euthanasia Asked For Incurables by Group

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP).—If you are suffering racking pain from "incurable" disease, should you have the right to ask your doctor for death by swift painless means?

Hundreds of ministers and doctors of New York State believe you should. So do more than 800 members of the Euthanasia Society of America. Voluntary euthanasia means ending human life by painless means to stop "incurable" physical suffering—but only at the request of the sufferer.

CHURCHES PROTEST

On the other hand, thousands of other prominent churchmen and physicians believe with equal conviction that you should not have that right.

Around these two points of view today swirls a controversy involving the Ten Commandments, man's relation to God and down-to-earth questions of right and wrong.

The Euthanasia Society, founded in 1938, has many members prominent in science, medicine, letters and religion. Its founder was Dr. Charles Francis Potter, Protestant minister and founder of the first Humanist Society in New York.

Both sides are working hard in defence of their stands.

Recently 379 ministers petitioned the New York State Legislature for a voluntary Euthanasia law. Among them were Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, minister emeritus of the Riverside Church, and Sidney Goldstein, rabbi of the Temple Emmanuel, both of New York. A committee of 1,776 physicians also took a stand in favor of "mercy death." Two years ago 1,100 of them petitioned the New York Legislature for it.

The Euthanasia Society is now drafting a petition to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, asking it to recognize as a fundamental right, "the right to merciful death as a release from incurable suffering."

Strong active opposition to mercy killing is led by the Roman Catholic Church. Monsignor Robert E. McCormick, presiding judge of the New York Archdiocese Court, and many other priests are attacking it vigorously in pupil, pamphlet and press. Dr. John Behnken, president of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, condemned the 378 clergymen's petition. The American Council of Christian Churches, representing 1,500,000 church members, also condemned euthanasia in two resolutions.

VOLUNTARY MOVE

The Euthanasia Society's aim is to have voluntary euthanasia legalized in all states, but it is currently concentrating activities in New York. The concept is illegal in every state at present.

The society has drafted a bill, which provides that any sane person over 21, who is suffering severe physical pain from a disease for which present medicine knows no cure, may send a written petition for death to a court of record. It must be accompanied by his physician's affidavit. The case would be examined by a commission including at least two doctors. If its report favored euthanasia, the court would grant the petition. The bill has not yet been presented to any lawmaking body.

Spike Delays Patrolman

LONDON, March 12 (AP).—Police Sergeant F. R. Miller sheepishly explained why he was missing from his beat this morning.

He climbed a wall to investigate a noise in a building. He started to jump down but a spike caught his belt.

"My feet were about a foot from the ground," said the sergeant. "I flashed my lamp at traffic but nobody paid any attention."

City Man Held On Charge Of Threatening

The man is in custody and will appear in police court Monday morning.

"I'll put a bullet through you," the man is alleged to have told the informant.

PETER RABBIT CANNOT FIND WINSOME'S HOME

"I am afraid you will wait a long time before you will see him here," chuckled Johnny Chuck.

Where was Winsome Bluebird's new home? Peter Rabbit had turned that question over and over in his mind until his head ached. Not that it was any of Peter's business. It wasn't. Of course not. But you know how it is with Peter. He is a lot more interested in the affairs of other people than in his own. Some people are just that way. He had taken it for granted that Winsome would build a nest in the same old hollow in the Old Orchard that he had used the year before and the year before that. So during the time he had been so interested in the affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Quack he had given little thought to Winsome Bluebird.

"I can run up and call on him any time—," thought Peter. But, when at last he took it into his head early one morning to make that long delayed call, just imagine how surprised he was not to find Winsome in the old apple tree in which was the hole which used to be his home.

"He must be off after his breakfast and probably Mrs. Winsome is inside that hole," thought Peter. "I'll just sit down and wait a while."

So he sat down where he could watch the entrance to Winsome's old home and waited. He waited and waited and waited, but still their was no sign of Winsome Bluebird.

"That's queer," thought Peter. "I never knew him to stay away from home so long before. Then he waited and waited and waited some more, and still Winsome Bluebird did not come.

"Waiting for someone?" asked a voice.

Peter turned to see Johnny Chuck sitting up and grinning at him.

"Yes," replied Peter. "I'm waiting for Winsome Bluebird. I thought I would pay him a call this morning."

"I'm afraid you will wait a long time before you will see him here," chuckled Johnny Chuck.

Peter's eyes opened wide with surprise. "Isn't that his home right up there?" he demanded, pointing to the little hole in and out of which he had so often seen Winsome and Mrs. Winsome pass.

Johnny shook his head. "No," said he. "I understand that the old home isn't good enough for them this year. They've got a new home."

Instantly Peter was all curiosity. "You don't say so!" he exclaimed. "Where is it?"

"I don't know," replied Johnny Chuck with a yawn. "It is no business of mine where it is, and I haven't even asked."

"But it is somewhere in the Old Orchard, isn't it?" persisted Peter.

"Didn't I tell you that I don't know where it is?" retorted Johnny Chuck. "There are some things that it is just as well not to know. When my friends try to keep their homes secret, I don't go asking questions. Then if any harm comes to them it will not be through any fault of mine."

"There is something in that," said Peter, looking very thoughtful. "Still I would like to know where Winsome Bluebird's new home is."

"Listen!" said Johnny Chuck holding up a warning hand. "Isn't that Winsome's whistle? Why don't you ask him where his home is?"

Peter listened, and sure enough he heard the sweet whistle of Winsome Bluebird, but just where the sound came from he couldn't tell for the life of him. You know Winsome Bluebird has a way of making his voice sound a long way off when he is very near, and quite near when he is a long way off. It just seems to come from everywhere and nowhere in particular. Peter listened with all his might and then he started off through the Old Orchard with his head tipped back as he watched the treetops for a glimpse of a blue coat. Johnny Chuck watched and chuckled.

All through the Old Orchard hopped Peter, stopping every few minutes to look and listen, and all the time his curiosity grew and grew. He was so absorbed in trying to find Winsome Bluebird's new home that he quite forgot everything else. He forgot to watch out for danger, and so he didn't see Black Pussy creeping up behind him.

Next Story: Peter Rabbit jumps for his life.

The time used is Pacific Standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

Eight Weeks To Find Job

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP).—An average man looking for a job in the United States probably will take about eight and one-half weeks—and perhaps longer—to find one, the census bureau said today.

The bureau said this was the average time now required for one man to find work in the United States. This compared with seven and three-quarter weeks in January.

Women seeking work require six and one-half weeks on the average, the bureau added.

Unemployment figures for February showed that employment among men dropped 504,000 below the preceding month. Total number employed in the United States was 57,168,000, with unemployment figures 3,221,000 in February. The unemployment figure was a postwar peak.

Glimmer and Shimmer Hollywood

A new releasing agreement has just been consummated between R K O Radio Pictures and Walt Disney Productions, for the world-wide distribution of the next three Walt Disney features.

The three Walt Disney pictures are in the order of their release, "Ichabod and Mr. Toad," "Cinderella" and "Treasure Island." All will be in Technicolor.

With Cinderella," Walt Disney brings to the screen the most widely-read fairy story of all time. "Cinderella" will be presented entirely in animation and is expected to be ready for release at Christmas.

"Ichabod and Mr. Toad" will be ready in September. It will tell the story of Ichabod Crane, the schoolmaster of Washington Irving's great American classic "The Headless Horseman" and the story of Mr. Toad, the hero of the English fable "Wind in the Willows" by Kenneth Grahame. Bing Crosby will narrate the story of the tall lanky Ichabod and sing three songs. Basil Rathbone will be the narrator of the Mr. Toad story. Like "Cinderella" it will be entirely in animation.

"Treasure Island" by Robert Louis Stevenson, third of the Disney features, will be the first 100 per cent live action picture by Disney. Young Bobby Driscoll who starred in "Song of the South," and "So Dear to My Heart" will play the hero, young Jim Hawkins, with casting to be announced for Long John Silver and other memorable Stevenson characters.

Hedy Lamarr who only recently completed the role of Delilah in Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah," has just been signed by Paramount for her first Western screen role. She will be starred with Ray Milland and MacDonald Carey in "Copper Canyon."

Since the picture will be filmed in Technicolor, this will constitute Miss Lamarr's second consecutive color picture, a medium to which she was discovered to be remarkably suited.

HEDY LAMARR

She has been picked to play opposite Bing Crosby in Frank Capra's production, "Riding High."

Coleen, who has been under contract to Twentieth Century Fox was chosen for the assignment over a half dozen other applicants tested.

Miss Gray is a comparative new comer to film prominence, but in a short time she has succeeded in establishing herself as a talented and popular performer. She has appeared in "Red River," "Kiss of Death," "Nightmare Alley" and "Fury at Furness Creek."

"Jet Pilot" is getting high priority on Alan Ladd's busy schedule and may start the film after he finishes "After Midnight." Meanwhile R K O's "Jet Pilot" is still in the scripting stage and no starting date is announced for Warner's "Jet."

There's an interesting problem in connection with the jet subjects. Air pictures have featured the dramatic power of roaring engine and vibrating planes. First hand accounts indicate jet flight is something like sitting in space. Apparently there's not much drama in a "Whoosh!"

Nervous Breakdown

By DR. J. B. WARREN

A nervous breakdown is not caused by mental or physical work, but by problems and conflicts which keep the individual awake and without appetite. It is constant worry or anxiety that upsets the nervous system which affects every organ of the body including liver and stomach. Thus the blood not being filtered properly by the liver contains poisons which affect the brain the judgment and the fighting spirit of the individual and he can't just face the issue or issues at hand.

No Network Move in Sight For Fibber and Molly

This Week's Radio

Niles Trammell, president of the National Broadcasting Company, has announced that "Fibber McGee and Molly" will remain with N.B.C.

His statement followed closely announcements by Phil Harris and Alice Faye and Bob Hope that they will remain with the network. Trammell also announced the possibility that "Mr. District Attorney" and Ed Gardner's "Duffy's Tavern" program would continue as usual on N.B.C.

Radio adaptations of three motion pictures with leading film and radio personalities in the starring roles, are scheduled for the "N.B.C. Theatre" productions when the program takes over its new air time, 6:00 to 6:30 p.m. today.

The first bill in the new time period will be "You Were Meant for Me," starring song-and-dance man Dan Dailey. Lloyd Bacon, who directed the film of that title, will set the stage for the radio adaptation.

LORETTA YOUNG

Loretta Young will play the lead in "The Perfect Marriage" next Sunday, with Lewis Allen, director of the movie version, as commentator.

N.B.C. comedian Bob Hope will star in "The Ghost Breakers" Sunday, March 27.

DAN DAILEY

Henry Morgan, noted young comedian, takes up a familiar stand at his favorite cigar store corner, when he launches the new Henry Morgan show today at 5:30 p.m.

His pal, and fellow satirist, Fred Allen, will visit him following two successive visits by Henry to Allen's own N.B.C. show.

As program "regulars" Morgan will feature such favorites as Arnold Stang, his comedy side kick, and the popular songstress, Lisa Kirk currently featured in the Broadway hit, "Kiss Me Kate."

Music will be furnished by Milton Katims and his orchestra, with Ben Grauer announcing.

Edgar Bergen is going to hunt for gag writers within the ivied walls of universities.

The ventriloquist, enjoying his short-term retirement is heading for a vacation jaunt to Florida and Cuba. When he returns, he says he'll tour colleges in search of bright young men to help write his new air show.

Bergen hopes the fresh writing talent will bring his program a new slant. He will be in tough company next fall on C.B.S., since he will follow Jack Benny and Amos 'N' Andy and precede Red Skelton.

Arturo Toscanini has completed casting for the opera "Aida" which he will conduct on N.B.C., Saturdays, March 20, 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., and April 2, 3:15 to 4:30 p.m.

The cast will include Herva Nelli, soprano, who will sing the title role; Richard Tucker, tenor, as Rhadames; Eva Gustavson, mezzo-soprano as Amneris and Giuseppe Valdengo, baritone, as Amonasro.

EATON'S

The Lady of Spring

IS PRETTY AND POISED

Fashion this spring is delicate, light, airy; developing from an affinity of design and fabric rather than from one definite silhouette. There are rules of course: shoulders follow their natural curve, the throat is often deeply bared and waists may rise to an Empire line, but the news is the fresh interpretation fashion gives to floating chiffons, crisp surahs, textured wools and cottons woven to new worldliness. This feeling of harmony in texture, tone and pattern follows through in hats, shoes, gloves and other accessories.

We, at Eaton's, have assembled just such fashions.... beautiful, becoming, wearable clothes designed to make you, the lady of Spring, pretty and poised.

HOW THEY STAND

	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
Detroit	31	18	7	180	134	69
Montreal	26	22	8	142	121	60
Boston	26	21	8	158	133	60
Toronto	21	22	12	139	145	54
Chicago	20	29	6	166	190	46
New York	17	29	10	133	160	44

MONTREAL, Que., March 12 (CP).—Montreal Canadiens handed Goalie Bill Durnan his tenth shut-out of the season tonight by turning back New York Rangers 3-0 in the first act of a National Hockey League week-end double-header. Rip Riopelle scored twice and Glen Harmon once for the Montrealers in a fairly wide-open game applauded by 11,122 spectators.

Rangers put up a determined fight throughout and carried their best attack when led by Edgar Laprade, Tony Leswick or Buddy O'Connor. But Canadiens' sharp back-checking allowed New York to break through on Durnan for only a few really dangerous shots.

SPICY, TOO

There was enough spice, too, in the game to call for 13 penalties. Canadiens drew seven, including a major to Murph Chamberlain for fighting, and Rangers six, including a misconduct to Fred Shero.

Elmer Lach figured in all three Montreal goals, his playmaking proving one of the highlights for his team. Ken Reardon, defenceman, was back in the game after a layoff of more than a month because of a broken shoulder blade.

SUMMARY

Second period: 1, Montreal, Riopelle (Lach) :28. Penalties—Bouchard, Fillion, Shero (2 minors and a misconduct), Lach.

BRUINS END JINX

TORONTO, March 12 (CP).—Boston Bruins defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1 tonight before 13,539 fans to keep pace with Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League race.

An airtight goal-tending display by Frankie Brimsek enabled the Bruins to end a Toronto jinx which had followed them through six previous games, all won by Leafs.

The Boston goalie handled 45 shots, 16 in the first period, 14 in the second and 15 in the third, in a breath-taking display. The shot that beat him for the lone Toronto goal came from Harry Watson's stick with Brimsek flat on the ice after saving from Defenceman Gus Mortson.

Paul Ronty drove in the winning goal for Bruins in the third period on a play set up by Fern Flaman.

The shorthanded Leafs played the game with 15 men. They had Amateur Ray Hannigan in the line-up, just in case he was needed. The Leafs are short three right wingers through injuries: Howie Meeker, Bill Ezinicki and Harry Taylor.

SUMMARY

First period: 1, Boston, Warwick (Henderson, Schmidt) 12:09; 2, Toronto, Watson (Mortson) 13:17. Penalties: Egan, Kennedy, Henderson.

Second period: No score. Penalties: Egan, Barilko, Babando.

Third period: 3, Boston, Ronty (Flaman) 3:03.

Soccer in Victoria could use the stimulus of an appearance here by Newcastle United when that famous English club makes its trip to the Coast next June. Yet there is only an even chance, if that, that Newcastle will make the journey across the Straits. And all because of the city's previous poor record in attracting fans for games featuring touring teams.

Arguing with the British Columbia Soccer Commission last night that Victoria could carry the freight if it was alloted one of the two British Columbia matches to be played by Newcastle, city soccer officials were confronted with attendance figures of previous tours, which showed a loss in Victoria.

John Richardson, secretary of the British Columbia Football Association and British Columbia representative to the Dominion Football Association, stated that Newcastle would only play ten matches in Canada on its tour. Two have been alloted to British Columbia and both are now billed for Vancouver—on June 4 and June 7, with a Seattle appearance on June 5. The English club has been guaranteed $30,000, a matter of $3,000 per match, and the D.F.A. hopes to enrich its coffers through the tour.

Commission members claimed last night that they felt that the two Vancouver matches would bring in $20,000 gross, allowing $12,000 for the Saturday fixture and $8,000 for the Tuesday game. They were not too hopeful that Victoria would draw anywhere near the second amount and took a dim view of the Victoria request for a game. However, the persuasive Victoria officials gained some ground and extracted the promise that if they could guarantee the necessary $3,000 within the next few days, their request would be in game venues.

There should be no difficulty in doing this, nor none in putting an absolute minimum of 5,000 fans in Royal Athletic Park on June 7. The Victoria Baseball and Athletic Company has promised every co-operation and will postpone the scheduled W.I.L. game between the A's and Yakima if Newcastle is billed here. Eeven with this, it is doubtful that the game will be transferred. forwarded to the D.F.A., which supposedly must rule on any change

The commission feels that it will be unable to accommodate all the Mainland fans who want to see Newcastle play in one game. Rather than disappoint them, they seem to think that two games will be necessary there. What of Victoria fans? A tour like this should be also planned with the idea of the good it will do for soccer. To satisfy the fans of one town at the expense of fans in another is not right. Nor are finances all-important. Victoria deserves to get one of the games and if commission members want to do soccer some good, they will help see that we get it.

Too bad United did not play like they did yesterday against New Westminster. It would have meant several hundred extra fans but now it will be at least a month before the club plays another game at home. Just some more of the poor organization so evident in the Coast Soccer League this season . . . It is reported that U.B.C. Thunderbirds want to enter the Canadian basketball play-offs. Just why they should be admitted escapes the eye. U.B.C. had two teams in the Vancouver senior league and both were eliminated while the first-stringers competed in an American conference. Besides, it would be rather odd if they met Clover Leafs. Two of the stars of the Canadian champions are Jack Pomfret and Ole Baaken. Pomfret is coach of the 'Birds while Baaken is men's athletic director at U.B.C. . . . Salem Senators have traded off Joe Gedzius and Mel Nunes, shortstop and third baseman, respectively, of last season's club. Victoria United's upset victory over St. Andrews in Pacific Coast Soccer League match at Royal Athletic Park yesterday was due mainly to sensational display by Goalkeeper Bill McAllister. McAllister is shown at extreme right just after he beat Royals' Brian Philley to header in front of goal to save potential St. Andrews' score. United defenders are Left-Half Sid Robbins, centre foreground, and Fullback Chick Newman, with arm raised. John Halley, inside left for St. Andrews, is shown at left centre rushing in to aid Philley, while Referee George Barnes is at extreme left.

U.B.C. Holds California To 0-0 Draw

BERKELEY, Calif., March 12 (AP).—The University of California Bears failed to make good on several scoring opportunities and battled to a scoreless tie with the University of British Columbia in a Rugby game played on a muddy field at Memorial Stadium today.

A crowd of 7,000, largest of the season, saw the game.

California dominated by the play and six times penetrated within the Thunderbirds' five-yard line, only to fail to score. The Bears outcharged and outdribbled their lighter opponents but could not keep possession of the ball when it would have meant a score.

Outstanding for the Thunderbirds were Alex Carlyle and Hillary Wotherspoon. Bob Losey, John Guss, Jim Cullom and Hank Wright did good work for California.

California defeated the visitors 8 to 3 here Thursday. They meet again late this month at Vancouver.

ART HOUTTEMAN

Hard-luck member of Detroit Tigers' pitching staff, appears to be winning his fight for life but is still on danger list. He suffered fracture at base of skull when his car collided with fruit truck at Lakeland Florida. Manager Red Rolfe posted notice forbidding players to go to hospital, as he expressed belief that succession of visitors might prove harmful to Houtteman.

Codville Drops Decision To B.C. Welter Champion

Special to The Colonist

DUNCAN, March 12. — "Golden Boy" Don Codville of Duncan dropped a close decision to Earl Cook of Vancouver, British Columbia welterweight champion, in the feature bout of an exhibition boxing card at Duncan last night.

Sponsored by the Duncan Kinsmen Club, the card drew a crowd of 600 with net proceeds going to the aid of King's Daughters' Hospital.

Codville had the best of the infighting in the feature bout but was unable to cope with Cook's longer reach.

BURGESS WINS

One of the cleverest fights on the card was the lightweight battle between Art Burgess of Esquimalt and Bruce Codville of Duncan, with the Esquimalt boxer taking the decision.

Art Harrison of North Ward was awarded a technical knockout over Bill Vance of Duncan, Vancouver Island featherweight champion, when the latter suffered a badly cut eye in the first round. The fight had the appearance of becoming the best of the night.

Dave Codville, Duncan, decisioned Ronnie Joe, Esquimalt, welterweight.

Norm Calverley, North Ward, decisioned John McLeod, North Ward.

E. McDonald, Esquimalt, fought to draw with G. Glover, Esquimalt, 90-pound class.

Most Valuable Player Award To Babe Pratt

SEATTLE, March 12 (AP).—Walter "Babe" Pratt of New Westminster and Tommy Fowler of Oakland have been voted the "Most Valuable Player" Award in their respective Northern and Southern Divisions of the Pacific Coast Hockey League.

Pratt, 33, received the same honor in 1943-44 in the National Hockey League as an outstanding defenceman.

Fowler, 24, played with Chicago Black Hawks of the N.H.L. in 1946-47. The clever Oakland centre polled twice as many votes as his nearest rival, Bill Brennan of Fresno. He formerly played with Kansas City, Tulsa and Fort Worth in the United States Hockey League.

Revitalized Wests Score Surprise Win Over Vets

HOW THEY STAND

	W	L	T	F	A	Pts.
Oak Bay	2	1	2	15	12	6
Esquimalt	2	1	0	12	7	4
Canadian Legion	1	1	2	5	6	4
Victoria West	2	4	0	9	20	4

Next game, today: Oak Bay vs. Esquimalt, Heywood Avenue, 2:30 p.m.

With both clubs fielding revised line-ups, Victoria Wests pinned an upset, 1-0, defeat on Canadian Legion in a Victoria and District league soccer match at Windsor Park yesterday.

The setback put a serious crimp in Vets' hopes of copping second-half laurels and left them in a three-way tie with Wests and Esquimalt for second place, two points behind Oak Bay. Esquimalt, with two games in hand, battle the leaders today at Heywood Avenue for a share of the lead.

Strengthened by the addition of Brian Sluggett and Willie Turner from the intermediate Eagles, Wests turned in their best performance of the season. Hustling throughout the game, Sluggett and Turner injected new spirit into the Greenshirts and they remained on the ball all the time holding a wide margin on territorial play. Only a steady performance by Goalie Charlie Saddler of Legion prevented the score from being one-sided.

Legions' half-line showed a decided weakness and Wests repeatedly ripped holes in the defence with pretty combination play. Winners' backs played a strong game and fed the forwards well with up-field clearances.

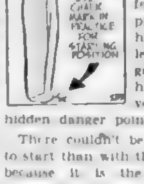
Legion: Saddler, Little and Speller, Smith, Cole and McCormick, Anderson, Christianson, Duncan, Oliver and Davidson. Sub: Moss.

Better Bowling

By BILLY SIXTY

Number One Detail.—When the ball is started through the swing, and you have your mind set on knocking bowling pins down, a lot of little errors can sneak into the delivery and spoil your effectiveness. You'll probably always have that problem, so it is a good idea to know how to check yourself on those hidden danger points.



There couldn't be a better place to start than with the stance. First, because it is the beginning or foundation of the game, and, second, because it is one phase of the delivery you can control or regulate absolutely.

You can understand easily that footwork, the ball swing, the slide and delivery, with swing-through, are going to be irregular with a never constant starting position or stance. You will always have flaws with a poor start.

We've discussed before the importance of finishing at the foul line at an identical spot with every delivery. The only way to get from the stance to this identical spot each time is by smooth and perfectly regulated footwork. And that kind of footwork results only when you take your stance each time on the very same spot.

I'd like to recommend you begin your check-up with this fundamental. Use the newell post, a board, the return rack, or anything else else you can keep in mind to help you mark your stance position.

Dropping the ball, or finishing off-balance at the foul line is very likely brought on by an irregular starting position. In your practice, I suggest you use a chalk mark and toe that line. (See illustration). That's how to get into perfect stride.

Button Match Set

Bob Fleming and Jim Merriman, Gorge Vale, will make another defence of the city junior golf buttons on their home course today when they meet the challenge of Gary Shepard and Ray Calton, Victoria Golf Club. The match will start at 1 p.m.

Tiremen Win Henderson Cup As Oak Bay Rally Trips Golds

FINAL STANDINGS

	W.	L.	D.	F.	A.	Pts.
Douglas Tire	5	1	6	25	16	16
Oak Bay	7	4	1	29	19	15
Victoria Golds	6	4	2	31	16	14
Eagles	4	2	4	16	7	12
Saanich Indians	0	10	1	11	60	1

Douglas Tire captured the Henderson Cup, emblematic of the Intermediate Soccer League championship, yesterday when Oak Bay rallied for three second-half goals and a 4-2 triumph over Victoria Golds at Heywood Avenue. Victory for the Golds would have left them tied with the Tiremen and forced a play-off for the trophy.

Oak Bay had the best of the play and was deserving of the win. Golds took the lead when a drive by Charlie Constable deflected off an Oak Bay back into the net, and boosted the margin to 2-0 just one minute later on Constable's first-timer. Dinny Wells reduced the margin with a hard drive from his right wing position just before the breather.

Wells squared the count with a well-placed shot shortly after the resumption of play. Centre-Forward Paul Whirtlin drew the opposing backs out of position, cut between them and netted what proved to be the winning marker. The clincher was credited to Glen Smith when his shot deflected into Golds' net off a defending back.

St. Andrews Upset By Form Reversal

HOW THEY STAND

	W.	L.	T.	F.	A.	Pts.
North Shore	2	2	0	13	7	4
St. Andrews	2	2	0	10	8	4
Vancouver City	1	2	0	4	8	2
Victoria United	1	3	0	4	12	2

Anyone who thinks that sheer fight and club spirit won't win ball games should have been at Royal Athletic Park yesterday afternoon. There, a revamped Victoria United Club pulled the season's biggest upset and dealt St. Andrews' second-half hopes a severe jolt with an amazing 3-1 triumph over the powerful Scots in a Coast Soccer League match.

It was a remarkable transformation. Using practically the same personnel which looked so bad the previous Saturday, but using it in different positions, United was full value for the points as it forced the issue all the way after giving up the first goal and being outplayed in the early going.

CHANGES WORK

PROFESSIONAL DISPLAY

But it was the sensational netminding of Bill McAllister and the great performance of Red McMillan at right half which featured the surprise win. McAllister gave as fine a display of goal tending as has been seen here in many a moon. Time after time, the ex-Scot made practically impossible saves as he turned aside at least half a dozen goals. It was his work which had the St. Andrews forwards shaking their heads, that seemed to fire the city club. McMillan came up with probably his finest performance as he blanketed John Halley, highly-touted young inside. Under McMillan's close surveillance, Halley was hardly more than a passenger all afternoon.

SCOTS OPEN FAST

After United just missed on the opening rush, St. Andrews took over and it only seemed a matter of how large the final margin would be. McAllister turned Brian Philley's drive over the top and then blocked a close-in smash from Halley to draw rounds of applause. The Scots were doing the forcing and went ahead midway through the half when Philley scored a beauty from in front after feinting Forbes out of position.

Continually driving in, United carried the play and was perhaps unfortunate in not being in front at the half way mark. Ab Travis missed an open goal when Bob Newbold, who looked bad through the game, came too far out of his nets, and Druce [illegible] before Creed counted the equalizer. Druce set up the goal with a neat pass forcing Newbold to make a sprawling save. In the ensuing scramble Creed found the net.

EXCITING ACTION

St. Andrews had the upper hand in the early minutes after the changeover but McAllister never faltered. The winning goal came after about 15 minutes, with Druce again [illegible] a pass, a Creed beat Newbold from directly in front. It was spectacular football as the Scots strove [illegible] for the equalizer only [illegible] and the [illegible] of McAllister [illegible] came close on breakaway plays.

Playing his first game Druce had to be relieved near the finish when he started to develop a cramp. Manager Roy Bettes dispatched Nip Sage as a replacement and the choice proved to be a happy one. The veteran scored the final goal the first time he touched the ball, coolly hitting the net after Newbold missed when he again came far out to try and clear.

This was the clincher and the losers, as well as the fans, seemed to realize it. The Scots looked futile at times as they were forced out of their methodical game. Just before the final whistle McAllister capped his performance by blocking George Steele's poorly-taken penalty kick and then diving to turn the rebound around the post.

Line-ups:

St. Andrews: R. Newbold; Jones and Webber; Henderson, Glover and Matheson; Greig, J. Newbold, Philley, Halley and Steele. Spares, Dorazio, Byford and Simpson.

United: McAllister; Newman and J. Robbins; McMillan, Forbes and S. Robbins; J. Travis, Pleasburn, Druce, Creed and A. Travis. Spares, Morgan, Sage and Huggins.

Royals Blank Shores To Take First Place

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., March 12 (CP).—Two second-half counters, by Bill Arthur and Right Winger Bob Lewis, gave New Westminster Royals a well deserved 2-0 victory over North Shore Reds today in a Coast Soccer League fixture.

Royals victory, coupled with St. Andrews' 3-1 loss to Victoria United, gave them sole possession of first place in the standings. North Shore and St. Andrews now are tied for second place, two points behind the leaders.

A large share of the credit for today's victory went to the Royal city's youthful Netminder Bernie Williams, playing his second game in senior company. He was brilliant throughout and especially in the first ten minutes of play when called upon to stop four sizzling shots.

Once again, condition proved the deciding factor between victory and defeat. Royals kept up a steady pace while the Reds, after setting a brisk first half tempo, faded badly in the second canto and were well-beaten.

MILLIGAN IS STAR

Last Six Sites Considered For Title Bout

MIAMI, Fla., March 12 (AP).—Promoter Joe Louis and his business partners are considering six cities as a possible site for the Ezzard Charles-Joe Walcott match, he said today.

Under consideration for the fight already sanctioned by the National Boxing Association — are Detroit, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Chicago.

Louis conferred with his partners, Arthur Wirtz and James Norris, before he left for Arbua, Dutch West Indies, where he appears tonight in an exhibition fight.

They also have conferred with Lou Viscusi, manager of Featherweight Champion Willie Pep, regarding a title match with Sandy Saddler but Louis said no decision had been reached. The former heavyweight boxing champion, who retired March 2, will return from the West Indies Monday.

By GRANTLAND RICE

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 12.—We are in the process of being gently chided by a smart income tax expert who also knows about baseball salaries.

"I read your piece," he said, "about the pity that Stan Musial couldn't get nearly as much money as Joe DiMaggio, Bob Feller, Lou Boudreau and Ted Williams, although almost everyone admits that Musial, today, is probably the world's greatest all-around ballplayer.

"In the first place, I would like to say that DiMaggio, Williams and Feller are not getting the salaries that have been printed. I recall when Hank Greenberg was getting close to $80,000. His actual pay was $37,500—top pay. After you have passed the $50,000 mark, it really doesn't matter too much what you get.

INCOME TAX GETS GRAVY

"For example, the real difference between a $50,000 and an $80,000 salary is actually only $2,200. The difference between a $50,000 and a $90,000 salary is around $3,000 or $3,200. When Government and state taxes are taken out beyond $50,000 the player gets only a small share of the extra $30,000 or $40,000 he might be paid, but never is.

"There is no $80,000 ballplayer in the game today."

We have always doubted that ballplayers were getting the $80,000, $90,000 and $100,000 salaries reported now and then. Babe Ruth's $80,000 was worth to him around $70,000. Not $30,000 or less. Also Babe Ruth was the only ballplayer who was actually worth $200,000 a year to the game—maybe as much as $500,000.

I asked Mr. Saigh, owner of the Cardinals, if the report on Musial's salary was true.

MUSIAL NAMED SALARY

"It is," he said. "In signing Musial, I simply said 'In my book you are the greatest ballplayer in the game. Please name your own salary.' Musial did and we signed the contract."

The fact has been for some time that Cardinal ballplayers have received more pay than any number of other National League clubs that I know and you know.

These tax matters referred to also help to explain why Joe Louis has been fettered so long. When you make $1,000,000 and get $91,000 of it back, you can't be too frisky in chucking it away. After all, $91,000 isn't too bad a take-home pay envelope for a year. Many have lived on less.

But when you think of what happens to salaries between $50,000 and $80,000, why get steamed up over a mere matter of $2,200?

DIMAGGIO'S TROUBLE

Joe DiMaggio is one of the few who at least are getting over $50,000. How much more isn't important as it brings little to Joe.

But Joe DiMaggio, in addition to being a great ballplayer, one of the greatest, is also a gentleman of character and rectitude—a conscientious man.

And Joe is worried about the spur in his heel. He is worried badly by the fear that it will come back. Dr. George Bennett of Baltimore and Johns Hopkins—he has one of the world's finest physicians and surgeons, also a rabid baseball fan, but there are queer things that happen to the flesh that seem to be beyond the human ken.

ONE AFTER ANOTHER

"All I know," Joe told me, "is that I've been plagued by something through a good part of my career. I've had to play a lot of baseball while suffering — a bad heel, a bad ankle, a bad arm. Yet I'm a strong, healthy fellow. I love baseball. I'd love to play every day.

"I had a good year in 1948. Not so good as it might have been—but a good year. But 1949 was to be my big year.

"You know, Grant, I broke into baseball with San Francisco 17 years ago—back in 1932. That's a long time back. I've been with the Yankees 13 years. I'm no kid. I figured I could have only a few years left, at the age of 34. But 1949 was to be the big one.

"Yes, I hit 46 home runs in 1937. I batted .381 in 1939. I led the league in home runs and runs batted in in 1948. I don't think I ever got as big a reception from the fans as I received in 1948. I wanted to be twice as good as I was then to make good for them. They gave me the best break I ever got.

"And then in my first day's workout in 1949 I find my heel is sore again—even sorer than it was. The spur is still there, I guess. You never heard me alibi anything. All that counts is the box score, the standing of the clubs, the official averages.

MIND OVER MATTER

"I'll tell you this—I hope everything will be O.K. If not, I'll do the best I can on one good heel and one bad one. It's a funny thing. No part of your body is important until it gets hurt or goes wrong. Then it is the most important part of your body, a finger or a knee or whatever it is."

"In other words," I suggested, "mind is more important than matter when there's nothing the matter."

"That's about it," Joe said. "But there's always something the matter."

No one can say now what difference that wounded DiMaggio heel can make. Maybe little difference. Maybe a pennant's difference. But it is making a terrific lot of difference to conscientious Joe DiMaggio's peace of mind.

Campbell River Fishing Report Shows Promise

Steelhead fishing in Campbell, Quinsam and Oyster Rivers is excellent, according to a report received from Alan Maclean of Painter's Fishing Resort. Maclean states that conditions in the Quinsam and Campbell are very satisfactory and that a fresh run of steelhead has been reported. Fishing is good in the Oyster with the water clear.

Lakes are still frozen over, but warmer weather has made anglers hopeful. There is little activity in the mouth of the Campbell, although Johnny Vanstone of Campbell River caught a few good sea-run cutthroats on Tuesday.

Steelheads caught recently have all been fresh and most have been taken on Tee Devons or Devon Minnows. Norman Howarth, Courtenay, landed an 18-pounder out of Sandy Pool using a Devon Minnow; Dunc Marshall took three, one from Sandy Pool and two from Lower Island Pool, early last week on Tee Devons. They weigh eight, ten and 13 pounds. Rod Haig-Brown brought in a ten-pounder from Quinsam Pool, using a Golden Girl fly; Bob Pilkington of Campbell River took three in one day's fishing in Islands Pool on a Tee Devon, and H. S. Reid of Victoria, landed a 12-pounder and one weighing 15 pounds in the Oyster, using a Devon Minnow.

Only salmon reported were taken by Mrs. H. H. Boyd, who landed two Springs, weighing six and nine pounds, on a silver scale plug in front of Painter's Lodge.

Hopkins Takes Derby Award For Steelhead

Ron Hopkins, well-known Victoria angler, is the winner of the Steelhead Derby, sponsored by the Cowichan Fish and Game Association. Hopkins and Jim Maxwell, another Victorian, tied for top honors when each weighed in a steelhead which tipped the scales at 16 pounds ten ounces. Hopkins won the draw for first prize with Maxwell taking the second award.

Officials announced that 64 fish were weighed in during the period of the competition. These weighed an aggregate of 597 pounds, an average per fish of approximately 9.5 pounds. Other prize winners were S. A. Guest of Victoria, and D. Shaw, A. Potts, Stan Bonsall, Jack Strouiger, Ken Patterson, Allan Potts and Bucky Kennett, all of Duncan.

Prizes were presented to the winners at the regular meeting of the association Thursday night by Game Warden Frank Weir. L. Langlois was chairman of the Derby committee, which also included A. A. Sherman and A. A. Potts.

During the meeting, Dick Marsh, president of the club, presented a cigarette lighter to Sid Pitt, past president of the club, who has been transferred to Nanaimo. Roy Elvins was also installed as the new secretary, succeeding Edgar Evans. Evans received a vote of thanks for his work for the club during the past three years.

Mat Fans Return Home Jubilant As Ross Swallows Own Medicine

"Gentleman" Tony Ross returned to Victoria to meet smiling Al Alexandra in the feature bout on last night's wrestling card at Bay Street Armoury. He was greeted by a familiar round of boos from the rabid spectators, then proceeded to give the fans what they were expecting, but ended up the worse for wear. Ross used his full bag of tricks, which included hair pulling and stomach punching in the early part of the bout to build up an advantage. But he was "crucified" on the ropes in the third round. Tied hands and feet he was helpless as Alexandra butted him repeatedly with his head.

Alexandra then lifted him from the ropes and tossed him for a fall. Alexandra was declared the winner in the next round after he had thrown Ross from the ring for the third time and finished him off with punches to the head. Ross was bleeding profusely and staggering about the ring when the bout was stopped.

Mohan Singh, Victoria East Indian, was awarded the decision in his ring debut when opponent Bob Cummings hit the referee. Singh copped the first fall in the third round and it was then that Cummings lost his head and turned on the referee.

Travel Bug Bites O.C. Soccer XI's

LONDON, March 12 (CP).—World-wide popularity of soccer is likely to result in the largest exodus ever by league clubs this Spring.

The Football Association has planned tours for two national teams representing Wales and Scotland. Newcastle United, currently pacemaker in Division One, will play ten games in Canada. Belfast Celtic, who have a United States tour lined up, may be joined by Southampton.

Others planning trips abroad include Arsenal, Charlton, Portsmouth, Liverpool, Derby, Tottenham Hotspurs, Fulham, Blackpool, West Ham, Queen's Park Rangers and Hull. Blackpool have been invited to play in Belgium. Hungary and Denmark are anxious to entertain clubs interested in a Continental trip.

Charlton aims at a four-game series in Turkey. Fulham's invitation to visit Spain is in return for transferring Centre-Half Jock Watson to Real Madrid, a club managed by former Fulham Fullback Mike Keeping. Liverpool may visit Switzerland.

Arsenal, League champions, have had invitations from many countries, but will not decide until later. The most tempting offers come from South America and Italy.

West Ham is eager to make another tour. In recent years they've played in 71 Continental communities and in 13 countries.

Portsmouth Nears Crown As Newcastle XI Falters

LONDON, March 12 (Reuters). — Portsmouth today advanced a step closer to the championship of the Football League by winning 4-1 at Sunderland while their nearest rivals, Newcastle United, lost.

Newcastle's 3-0 setback at Wolverhampton left them five points off the pace. Each club has 11 games to play.

Southampton moved steadily along at the head of the Second Division whipping Leeds United 2-1. Fulham kept pace in the promotion race five points back with a 2-1 decision over Chesterfield.

In the Third Division, Northern Hull City moved within two points of leading Rotherham United by turning back Darlington 1-0 while Rotherham lost 2-0 at Rochdale. Hull was four games in hand in the struggle for advancement to the Second Division.

Swansea Town, Third Division Southern leader, ran into unexpected trouble at Millwall and lost 2-0. The defeat left the Welshmen six points ahead of Bristol Rovers and Brighton, tied for second place, each of which drew today.

In Scotland the spotlight centred on Hampden Park, Glasgow, where about 90,000 saw Rangers win the Scottish League Cup with two second-half goals against Raith Rovers. Neither team scored in the opening half.

Stiff Training Faces "Reps" For Trip South

Doug Bray, who replaces Campbell Forbes as Crimson Tide coach when the Victoria team visits California at the end of this month, is determined that his charges will make a good showing and has called 'Rep' practices at Macdonald Park Monday through Friday for the next two weeks.

Players attending these work-outs should get into top condition and will benefit by working together as a team.

Present plans call for the team to leave Seattle by chartered bus on March 28 and arrive in Berkeley after two full days' travel with an overnight stop at Grants Pass, Oregon. Bray has a schedule mapped out whereby players will do physical jerks every hour or two to keep from getting travel kinks during the journey.

About 19 players will make the trip but as yet no definite line-up has been picked. The following are asked to attend practices starting tomorrow:

Church Basketball League Champions

"Y" Swimmers Win Gala But U.B.C. Men Unbeaten

Archie McKinnon's Flying "Y" Squad downed Doug Whittle's U.B.C. water-pounders by a total-point score of [illegible] in an intercity gala at the Crystal Garden last night, yet the Varsity men's team as such retained its unbeaten record.

In men's event competition alone the score was 34 for U.B.C., 25 for the "Y" with the final issue in doubt right up to the finishing leg of the final event, the 200-yard men's free-style relay.

By little more than the flick of a finger Varsity's George Knight outsped Harold Harris of the "Y" for an eight-point victory. The same two men brought the crowd to its feet earlier too, splitting the 100-yard men's free style in a dead heat.

Third major men's event of the evening, the 150-yard men's medley relay, was won by the Y.M.C.A., an event this season has yet to lose.

"Y" girls outscored their Mainland competition in all events, but had to work for their points.

Crowd-pleasers between the intercity events were Ed Kelter's Pro-Rec team on the trapeze, a fine display of diving by U.B.C.'s Jim Hawthorne as well as some excellent comedy diving, and a group of races for "Y" juniors only.

[illegible] are the results of the intercity [illegible] 150-yard medley relay, Y.M.C.A. [illegible] yard medley relay, Y.M.C.A. [illegible] 50-yard free style, I. N. [illegible] Y. J. N. Anderson [illegible] Women's 100-yard back stroke [illegible]

Two Clubs Win, Eaglettes Lose In Cage Finals

Porky Andrews is showing Victoria basketball teams a thing or two. His Alberni Intermediate "A" women's quintette low-wed up the Athletics' double victory over Y.M.C.A. by taking Eaglettes into camp, 49-39, in the first game of a total-point series for the Island title Friday night. Second game will be played here Saturday.

Eaglettes stayed close to the Alberni squad until the final period when the home team broke loose for 20 points while holding the Victoria team to 11.

Alberni did not do so well in the junior girls' final as Mary Casilio's Arrows romped to an overwhelming 75-8 victory over the Up-Island team in the first game of a total-point series for the Island crown. Betty Purich, with 24 points, and Joan Rodgers, with 19, led the Arrows, who established a 24-0 margin in the opening quarter.

At Nanaimo, Boy Whyte's Hotshots gained a 35-point lead in the Island intermediate "B" girls finals by taking the first game of a total-point series from Nanaimo McGavin's, 47-12. Second game will be played here Wednesday.

Senior "B" Puck Title To Nanaimo

NANAIMO, B.C., March 12 (CP) — Les Mitchell's goal with 40 seconds left in regulation time, tonight gave Nanaimo Clippers possession of the Coy Cup and the British Columbia Senior B Hockey championship. They defeated Kimberley Legionnaires 7-5 before a capacity crowd. For the third time in the past nine seasons, a Nanaimo team has captured the coveted silverware.

Clippers trailed 4-3 going into the last period before playing Coach Lavell fired home two important goals to give Nanaimo a 5-4 margin which they maintained till but five minutes before time.

A last-ditch attack that had Holditch sitting in the clear allowed Kimberley to knot the count. Mitchell snapped up Mel Gourdeau's pass to sink the winner.

Still in the fight, Kimberley pulled Goalie Cliff Kilburn in an attempt to again tie the score. The strategy backfired when Dick Warwick picked up a loose puck following the face-off and shot the rubber into an empty cage.

Mayor George Muir presented Team Captain Fergy McPherson with the Coy Cup and congratulated the Kimberley boys on their sportsmanship and for the clean manner in which they contested the hard-fought series. Clippers won the first game by a 7-5 score and followed up with a 5-1 count in the next game in the best-of-five finals.

Slate Puck Games

Second place will be at stake when James Bay and Fort Bay tangle in the feature roller hockey game at Stevenson Park at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Preliminary game at 1:30 p.m. pits the league-leading Oak Bay sextette against Civil Service.

JOUSTING JUSTICE

Watson, Ronty Make Gains; Leaders Idle

Toronto's Harry Watson scored the only Maple Leaf goal last night to climb into sixth place in the N.H.L. individual scoring race last night.

Boston's Paul Ronty also counted once to force a three-way tie with Detroit's Bud Poile and Chicago's Gus Bodnar for the seventh rung.

Other leaders were unchanged as the high-scoring Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks were idle.

Leaders follow:

	G.	A.	Pts.
R. Conacher, Chicago	25	41	66
D. Bentley, Chicago	22	42	64
Abel, Detroit	25	26	51
J. Conacher, Chicago	23	23	46
Lindsay, Detroit	21	25	46
Watson, Toronto	24	19	43
Poile, Detroit	21	21	42
Bodnar, Chicago	19	23	42
Ronty, Boston	18	24	42

Edmonton Tops Calgary, 3-1 To Lead Series

CALGARY, Alta., March 12 (CP) — Edmonton Flyers handed Calgary Stampeders a lesson in checking tonight to gain a 3-1 victory in the third game of their best-of-five Western Canada Senior Hockey League semi-final series.

The 1948 Allan Cup champions checked Calgary into a standstill and won going away in the rugged contest before an overflow crowd of more than 5,200 fans. Edmonton now leads the series two games to one. The fourth game will be played in Calgary Monday night.

Flyers took the lead with the only goal of the first period when Don Anderson [illegible] a 12-foot [illegible] Al [illegible] leading goal-getter in the Western League, sent the northern club two up with a golf shot late in the second period.

Stamps rallied briefly in the final frame with Butch McDonald scoring on a pretty play with Bud [illegible]. But Colin Kilburn broke away at the 15 minute mark to beat [illegible] and clinch the Edmonton victory.

Tide Ends Rugby Series By Losing to Lions, 14-6

VANCOUVER, March 12 (CP) — Vancouver Lions proved too strong for Victoria Crimson Tide in a McKechnie Cup game at Brockton Oval today, winning 14-6 before a sparse crowd of about 100 persons.

The result left Vancouver one point back of Varsity, whom they meet for the first time next Saturday. To have any chance of lifting the silverware, Lions must beat the Thunderbirds. It was Victoria's last game in the tournament and left them with three defeats and one tie firmly entrenched in last position.

The Islanders started out better than they did last week against Varsity and for a time it looked as if they would beat the Lions but they gradually went to pieces and bad fumbles proved costly.

TIDE TAKES LEAD

After 10 minutes, Olson put Victoria ahead with a lovely penalty goal from 35 yards. Lions had two penalty kicks for offside. Barney Kirby missed the first one but booted the second squarely between the posts from the sidelines, to tie the count at 3-3.

Shortly after, Olson fumbled the ball near his own line and Bob Pegues dribbled it over and fell on it for a try. Kirby converted to give Vancouver an 8-3 lead.

Another penalty for tripping about 25 yards out, saw Olson just put the ball over the bar for three points to bring the count to 8-6.

Just before half-time, Lionel Feeney outpaced the Victoria back field in a long run then passed to McEwen, who went over in the left-hand corner for another try leaving the score at the interval 11-6 in favor of Vancouver.

Ten minutes after the interval Kirby finished off a Lion three-quarter movement in which Lionel Feeney was the shining light by crossing the Victoria line for a third try to complete the scoring.

Paddle Title Won By V.H.S. Squad

In the first annual inter-high school table tennis tournament held at the Vic High gym Friday afternoon the Victoria High team came out on top with a total of 29 points out of a possible 32. Oak Bay was next in line with 21, followed by Mount Douglas with 15, Mount View 9, Esquimalt 6.

The two Neal brothers, Ed and Art, did not lose a game while playing in the singles for the winning team. In the doubles for the Victoria High team were Rees Barnes, Jack Woods, Jay and Chan Comparing for Oak Bay were Johnston, Folson, Burley and Crisp. Mount Douglas had D. Hanson and R. Hanson, Cornish and Evans. For Mount View it was Lewis, Rainer, Dodridge and Davis. Esquimalt had Chapman, Fleming, Wright and McConechy.

Robinson Rebuked by Chandler For Training Camp Altercation

MIAMI, Fla., March 12 (AP).—Jackie Robinson, negro second baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was called on the carpet today by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler about his recent flare-up against a teammate at the Dodgers' Spring training camp at Vero Beach.

Chandler expressed annoyance over a statement attributed to Robinson after the game, quoting him as saying: "They (rival players) better be prepared to be rough this year, because I'm going to be rough on them."

Robinson denied making such a statement and minimized the tiff with his teammate.

"It wasn't anywhere as serious as the newspapers made it appear," he said. "We just jockeyed each other as players do once in a while, and I lost myself in the heat of the moment and said something I shouldn't have. I was sorry a minute after I said it."

ACCEPTS STATEMENT

Chandler accepted Robinson's word but warned him to avoid any unpleasantness hereafter.

"Your conduct during your brief career in organized baseball has been exemplary," he told Robinson. "Don't ruin everything by some foolish action now."

Chandler was referring to an altercation between Robinson and Chris Van Cuyk, a rookie Brooklyn pitcher, in last Thursday's intra-squad game. What started out as a good-natured jockeying between them turned into some harsh words before they were through.

The two players shook hands then and went to the movies together that night.

Return Books Immediately Officials Ask

Immediate return of unemployment insurance books by employers or employees has been requested by the Victoria National Employment Service.

Last year unemployment insurance books were collected on March 31 instead of March 1.

H. E. S. Moore, contribution and coverage officer at the employment office here, said the books are being collected earlier this year to avoid congestion. Majority of employers had turned in their books this year but some have not replied to notices sent them, he said.

The request applies also to employers who have no employees. Those who do not turn in their unemployment insurance books are liable to court action under the National Unemployment Insurance Act.

Streaks on white clothes may be removed by washing them in clean water to which a little ammonia has been added.

At the Theatres

CAPITOL THEATRE Kathryn Grayson is not at all allergic to being kissed by Frank Sinatra in M-G-M's action-filled new Technicolor musical hit, "The Kissing Bandit," the story of a Robin Hood who'd rather be an in-law than an outlaw. It's crammed with songs and laughs.

OAK BAY THEATRE Double trouble in paradise when Virginia Field, David Niven, Eddy Albert and Loretta Young run into each other with the wrong partners in Paramount's comedy, "The Perfect Marriage."

ODEON THEATRE Lizabeth Scott, called the sultry siren of film dramas, has the most unusual role of her career in "Pitfall," the Samuel Bischoff production for Regal Films. Dick Powell is her co-star.

ATLAS THEATRE The intensely dramatic story of a woman who yearns for love in a house of hate, "Hatters Castle," Paramount, which brought the famous A. J. Cronin novel to the screen, paired two current sensations of American movies, James Mason and Deborah Kerr, to enact this soul-stirring romance.

ROYAL THEATRE Tyrone Power and Anne Baxter, two of the screen's top dramatic stars, enjoy an exciting change of pace in their current co-starring roles in "The Luck of the Irish," Twentieth Century-Fox's high spirited comedy-romance.

Asks Purchase Of B.C. Fruit

LONDON, March 12 (Reuters).—Sir Harry Gilpin, former chairman of the Liberal Party executive told the Liberal council here today that [illegible] the other side of Canada are [illegible] their apple trees because we are not taking their fruit.

Sir Harry, who led a British [illegible] mission to Canada last year, [illegible]:

"It would be of enormous importance [illegible] Canadian feeling and sentiment if we could ease the very difficult and dangerous position.

"The only alternative is to cut down our purchases and the inevitable result would be to drive Canada [illegible] into the arms of the United States. We must all take our share in re-opening the market in a country which has a great present and a still greater future."

Simple Forms To Be Tried For Census

OTTAWA, March 12 (CP).—A new and simpler method of recording the vital statistics of the people of Canada may be used in the 1951 decennial census.

First, however, it will be tried on an experimental basis among several hundred Ottawa citizens. If it proves successful it will be adopted for general use. The test will be held March 22-25.

Compared with the old forms which covered three and a half square feet, the new forms are a mere seven inches by seven; 90 per cent of the writing on the old form will be eliminated. Time formerly taken by the enumerator and householder will be reduced by more than half. Accuracy will be greater and there will be a reduction in costs.

5 IN MEMORIAM

ANDERSON—To the dear memory of our beloved wife and mother Nellie Stevenson Anderson, who fell asleep March 13, 1942.

She has gone along the trail ahead of us leaving an empty place in our lives that never can be filled, but she lives on in our hearts and fond memories of her love and integrity are with us day by day.
—Evan and John.

HEMSWORTH—In loving memory of Keith, who passed away March 13, 1941, aged 3 years.
Always in our hearts.
The family.

KATER—In loving memory of a dear husband and dad, Robert Kater, passed away March 14, 1943.
"Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near."
—Loving wife and daughters, Annie and Alice.

LAURIE—In loving memory of our dear son and brother (Jimmy) James William Laurie, who passed away March 13th, 1944.
"There is a link life cannot sever;
Love and remembrance last forever."
Ever remembered and sadly missed by Mum, Dad, Betty and Kay.

PRICE—In loving memory of Alfred (Freddie) Price, died March 13, 1936.
"Time heals they say, maybe it does,
But memories last and so does love;
God took him home, it was His will,
But why so young, we wonder still."
Fondly remembered by Mother, Dad and Family.

$100,000

A [illegible] an awful lot of money but we expect to buy even more than this amount of good used furniture, etc., from Victoria homes during 1949. Our business has grown because we have gained a reputation for paying fair prices and spot cash for what we buy, and taking a smaller profit on what we sell. Kindly phone Wally Gray and get fair prices for what you have to sell. Ask your friends and neighbors.

Movie Slump In Britain Major Worry

LONDON, March 12 (CP). —Vying for front page space with the cold war and budget estimates is the British movie industry, fighting a battle with costs as realistic as any it puts on the screen.

Every day some new item of gloom is translated into headlines—stars' wages cut, studios closed down, film workers sacked.

Nevertheless, movie magnates do not believe the industry is doomed. They declare that, as it yields nearly £40,000,000 ($160,000,000) a year in revenues, no Government is likely to allow it to suffer extinction.

NATIONAL PRIDE

Furthermore, they point out, the continued existence of the British movie industry now has become a matter of national pride, and films like "Henry V," "Hamlet" and "Great Expectations" have brought artistic prestige to Britain which cannot be measured in terms of dollars or pounds alone.

Extravagance and high taxation are blamed for the losses which have made city financiers reluctant to advance money for new productions. One example is the British film "My Brother Jonathan," made last year. Although it cost £198,000 to produce and took in £1,041,000 at the box office, the second highest British earner of 1948, its producers still lost £5,000 in the home market.

HEAVY TAXES

The producers' explanation is that of the money earned the Government took £416,000 in taxes, the exhibitors £475,000 and the distributors £57,000, making a total expenditure including production costs of £1,046,000.

Two drastic changes have been suggested for putting the British movie industry on a paying basis: First, a larger percentage of the box-office returns must reach the producer, and second, pictures must be made at less cost.

Some pressure is being exerted upon Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, to have the Government refund part of its taxation so that it can be ploughed back onto production.

Feat of Light Planes Record Flight Of 5,010 Miles Described by Odom

Capt. William P. Odom, who recently completed a 5,010-mile non-stop flight alone from Hawaii to Teterboro, N.J., in 36 hours, setting a new world distance and speed record for light planes, is at 29 a legendary figure in aviation circles. With Milton Reynolds he also holds the round-the-world speed record made with a converted twin-engined army bomber in April 1947 [illegible] Here he describes the [illegible] and [illegible] of a [illegible] Waikiki beach.

By CAPT. WILLIAM P. ODOM

NEW YORK, March 12 (NANA) —the trip is over. 5,010 miles sitting still, 36 hours of peering into the sky, no sleep, not much food, constant attention to controls, but now my feet are on the ground again, and I am tired but satisfied.

At Hickam Field, Honolulu, the Monday morning hours sped past with final preparations, and all afternoon I worked out my last plans and made rechecks. When evening came, I moved toward the plane for my 7 o'clock (12 midnight E.S.T.) takeoff. In the cockpit I sat for a minute with clenched fists, telling myself, "You can make it, you can make it."

HAD COMPANY

Immediately after my takeoff a B-17 of the air rescue service followed me into the air and stayed with me for the first 975 miles.

I passed over Waikiki beach and speeded over the waters of the Pacific at 5,000 feet.

My plane is fairly soundproof, but the whir of the motor filtered through and at first was pleasant. As the trip wore on, however, it became a steady, monotonous hum.

Slowly, darkness settled and the quarter moon was sharp and clear in the sky. Behind and above me was the B-17, and we kept up constant communication by radio. I became terribly sleepy and only the constant activity of checking an instrument, a chart, or handling the wheel kept me awake. Then there came a feeling of aloneness in sudden surges, and I turned to look back into the darkness to see the lights of the B-17.

About midnight I ate a chocolate bar. Throughout the entire night my throat was dry and I drank a lot of water—and all night, too, I awaited daylight.

ALL ALONE

About 4.30 Tuesday morning the B-17 crew said they were turning back. We joshed each other and with a last farewell they turned and headed back for Hawaii. In a final glance I saw their tail lights fade into the darkness. I was alone now at 11,000 feet over the waters of the thundering Pacific.

Then, an hour later, at about 5.30, daylight came and I leaned back in my seat and stretched out. I felt sure now that I would make New Jersey with no mishaps. By 7 o'clock I was hungry. I pulled out some of my food supplies.

The weather Tuesday was at first good and I flew under a warm sun and moved in and out of the wispy clouds.

By noon, I was only an hour and a half away from the California coast. At 1.51, local time, I made my landfall on San Francisco and sighted the Golden Gate. Checking my fuel gauge I saw that of the 288 gallons of gas I had started with I had 160 left. That was just about right, but I checked again to be sure since I had allowed myself a fuel surplus margin of only 5 per cent for the entire flight.

FIGHTING STORM

At 2.30 a.m. I was over the Rockies and ran head-on into a snowstorm. Instead of flying at 11,000 to 12,000 feet as I had planned I was forced up to 15,000 to 16,000 feet. Suddenly visibility was zero, ice formed on my wings and I kept shouting through the radio for more weather reports.

I was in constant fear that the greater strain on the engine would eat up my fuel surplus. Sometimes I was barely clearing the mountain tops. For four hours I bent forward, taunted with alertness, striving desperately to conserve by fuel supply.

Presently I broke out into the clear over Scotts Bluff, Nebraska. I sat back, muscles relaxing.

Through the whole storm I had constantly checked by gas supply—wondering, hoping. I looked at the gauge as I came into the clear and saw that the plane had consumed an extra 15 gallons. I felt relieved, but hoped desperately for clear weather ahead.

At Omaha, where I was forced to turn back to California on my first attempt, I felt sure that I would complete the flight. I had judged that if I could reach Omaha without using any of the fuel in my last three tanks of 20 gallons each that I would make my destination. Actually it was 20 minutes beyond there before I turned on my first of these tanks.

MET BY PLANES

On reaching Chicago at 6.15 a.m., Central Time, I had about 50 gallons of gas. Planes—newspaper photo, mail and private planes—moved around me in the sky. At Youngstown, I was met by the planes from La Guardia Field which had come out to escort me to the Teterboro, N.J., airport.

Then came the toughest part of the flight, the last hour from Allentown, Pa., to my destination. That seemed like an eternity. Finally, Teterboro came into sight, and, with it, a great crowd of people. They really gave me a grand welcome, but they weren't nearly as glad to see me as I was to see them—after 36 hours in the air. It was 12.08 p.m. E.S.T.

All the fanfare has been pleasant but I feel very tired. It will take me about three weeks to feel my old self again. I have been made numerous attractive offers, but so far I am only sure that I will operate my airplane maintenance shop at Teterboro and a restaurant on a near-by highway.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THAT WORD "CHAFE"
Not to "Chap" but to Heat!

"To rub her temples and to chafe her skin."

In this line the Elizabethan poet Edmund Spenser did not allude to milady chapping her skin, as persons to today, correctly or not.

A chapped skin is a split or cracked skin, and in its familiar usage the term applies most often to skin cracked by exposure to cold, as "chapped lips." This is all according to Hoyle, for "to chap" is an old word meaning to slit, to cut in chinks, as in Blackmore's

Milady's complexion came into this early, for the Elizabethan Lyly alludes to the Winter's blast that would "chap her fair face." But lest we lose sight of the essential meaning of "to cut" or "to slit," the Scotch used the word in the sense of "to strike" or "to beat."

Now, to "chafe" is another word entirely. It is from the Old English "chaufen," to warm. This derivation is from the same Latin root which produced "chafer" in the name of a warming dish. Thus something chafed may be inflamed by friction—the literal chafing as well as the metaphor for vexation or irritation. A chafed skin might be a cracked skin, but correctly this would be by way of being warmed—not cracked by cold, as the chapped skin.

Job Openings at End of Term New Attraction for Recruits

LONDON, March 12 (CP).—The old soldier with his small pension won't be an object of pity in future. He'll be a civil servant, a full trade-union member or, perhaps, an executive.

Britain's newest attraction for regular recruits to the services will be in the promise that when their period of duty has finished they will be in line for a good job.

Plans are far advanced to assure the soldier, sailor and airman he will not be cast adrift when his service is done with him.

PROVIDE OPENINGS

A scheme is being worked out to provide openings for ex-regulars, and it may include special training for civil employment either within industry or in establishments set up by the Labor Ministry.

A recent Government white paper on defence said:

"In Government service a proportion of vacancies for the clerical and executive classes will, in future, be reserved for competition among ex-regulars.

"The trade unions already have agreed that men trained in a wide range of service trades should be recognized as qualified for membership as skilled men and discussions are proceeding with a view to recognizing the status of other service tradesmen.

"There will also be schemes of training to assist selected candidates who wish to enter business. These comprehensive arrangements will, it is hoped, greatly enhance the attractiveness of the services to the right type of regular recruit."

MORE NEEDED

In 1948 19,700 regular other ranks were accepted for the Navy, 34,200 for the Army and 13,600 for the Air Force. But many more are needed to maintain the services at full efficiency, with 750,000, including young men called for compulsory service, on duty at March 31, 1950.

"The services all suffer from lack of men with long experience or a high degree of service skill, although in the event of an emergency large reserves are at present available from among the trained men and women who served in the recent war," said the white paper.

Your Hair Needs Washing More Than Your Body

Hair is "catch-all" for dust, dirt and grime from the air

Unless you wash your hair at least once a week, you may develop an unhealthy scalp. This is because your hair traps dirt, dust and soot from the air. These combine with perspiration, dried skin, and oil to form a waxy accumulation of dandruff lying tightly on your scalp. Thus your hair can't get the nourishment it needs, and becomes dull, lifeless, and thins out.

For healthy, good-looking hair, you should dissolve away all dirt and dandruff from your scalp. Use Fitch Dandruff Remover Shampoo, the ONLY SHAMPOO guaranteed to remove dandruff.

Langford Fire Fighters Win Practical Tribute

LANGFORD, March 11.—Only three years old as a community-sponsored effort, the Langford Volunteer Fire Department has set such a record for efficiency that the Fraser Dominion Fire Underwriters Association recent announced a considerable drop in fire insurance rates for the district.

The department was formed originally under A.R.P. in 1940, as the Langford, Colwood, View Royal Fire Department. In 1943 Langford Volunteer Department was placed on its own under a three-way split, but remained under Civil Defence and District Warden A. F. Bayles.

NEW HALL BUILT

In February, 1946, a new fire hall was built as part of the basement of the new Community Hall, with funds raised by the Community Club However, operation of a department with only voluntary contributions was found unsatisfactory, and in January, 1947, a Fire Protection District was formed under the Provincial Water Act.

A year later, in February, 1948, a new two-ton truck was purchased, together with a 800-gallon-per-minute front-mounted pump, a lot of hose and other equipment. Men of the department, aided by a few other residents, completed the truck to the specifications of the British Columbia Fire Underwriters.

TRUCK COMPLETE

The truck carries a 400-gallon tank, and more than 2,500 feet of 2½ and 1¼-inch hose, ladders, extinguishers and other equipment, and is now complete except for painting and trim.

As the present fire hall is unsuitable owing to the size of the truck and length of ladders, plans are under way for a new hall directly on the highway, and the mounting of a five-horsepower, three-phase alarm siren.

It is also hoped that the new hall will [illegible] better recreation facilities for the volunteers.

WELL-FED NATIONS

Study Offer Of Wharfage At Courtenay

COURTENAY, March 12.—Taking over by the city of Courtenay of three Dominion Government wharfage instalations is proposed by the Department of Transport. The instalations are at the foot of Sixth Street, the foot of Eleventh Street and at the Courtenay Slough. The Government would be responsible for maintenance and improvements to the instalations, while the city would appoint a wharfinger to look after them.

The Government is asking a rental fee of $1 per year for each of the instalations.

City council will decide on the matter later this month.

SUGGESTIONS MADE

Council has already made a number of suggestions to the Department of Transport for improving facilities at the Courtenay Slough, arising out of a meeting between a council committee headed by Alderman D. A. Inkster and a delegation of fishermen who have boats moored in the slough.

These suggestions include: dredging to a depth of eight feet, reinforcing the dam at the entrance to the anchorage to guard against damage by large boats, building of a concrete wall on the Comox Road side, raising stringers on the floats to allow passage of ropes under same, removal of snags and overhanging trees, instalation of a flat grid for repairing boats up to 40 feet in length, setting aside of a special place in the harbor for small boats.

It is proposed that vessels not over 26 feet in length be charged $3 per month for wharfage privileges. For each additional ten-foot length of vessels 40 feet and over, it is proposed to charge an extra dollar per month.

School Building To Be Studied By Ratepayers

PORT ALBERNI, March 10.—Ways and means of assisting the school trustees of District No. 70 in meeting problems of school construction, delayed since ratepayers voted necessary sums in 1947, will be considered at a joint meeting between the trustees and representatives of three ratepayers' associations, Port Alberni, Alberni and the rural area.

Meanwhile, the School Board has withheld action on entering a contract with another firm of architects until it has reached a settlement with Hubert Savage of Victoria.

Port Alberni ratepayers appointed a committee to act on the school problem at its regular meeting.

LONG-RANGE PROGRAM

The association further discussed a long-range town planning program whereby lanes of the city would be widened. This calls for a voluntary assignment of two feet of property from lot owners.

Reese Riley, harbormaster, told the ratepayers that various improvements are planned at the waterfront for fire protection. These include a firewall to impound leaks or breakage from oil and gas tanks. Fire lines will be laid on the Argyle Street dock and wharf and approaches will be hosed down twice a day during the fire season.

Other regulations are that unattended fires aboard fishing vessels were strictly forbidden; the fireboat will have a shed and be placed where it will be handy.

Campbell River to Act Against Ownerless Dogs

CAMPBELL RIVER, March 12.—Problem of ownerless dogs roaming the streets of Campbell River has become so acute that the Village Commission has decided to do something about it. Commission will appoint a man to canvass every house in the village to inquire whether the tenant owns a dog and if so, whether he has a licence for the animal.

After a certain period, the village poundkeeper will gather up all unlicensed dogs and take them to the pound, where he will dispose of them unless they are claimed. Persons owning unwanted dogs may turn them over to the poundkeeper for disposal, the commission also decided.

At its regular meeting, the commission granted trade licences to C. H. Poole and Patrick Condon, real estate agents; C. B. Gavel, woodyard, sawdust, ice and coal; A. O. L. Johnson, chimney sweep.

Village roads are being graveled and graded, public works chairman Carl Thulin reported. Mr. Thulin also reported that track-type tractors were chewing up village roads. Letters will be written to owners of these tractors asking them to keep to the side of the road when traveling through the village.

Village clerk Robinson was appointed to represent Campbell River on the public health advisory committee for School Districts Nos. 71 and 72.

Waterworks chairman Oscar Thulin estimated the village water system would bring an annual gross of $24,000. He thought nearly $6,000 of this amount could be used annually to reduce the village waterworks debt.

Petition from property owners at the southwest boundary of the village that their section be included in the village was discussed by the commissioners. The request will be forwarded to the Department of Municipal Affairs for approval.

Protest Ban on Public Office Faced by Courtenay Teachers

COURTENAY, March 11.—A teacher can run for office as mayor of Vancouver. He can run for office as commissioner of the village of Comox. But he is not allowed to stand for election as mayor or alderman of the city of Courtenay.

This anomalous situation was pointed out to Courtenay city council by G. W. Stubbs, representative of the Comox District Teachers' Association which requested council to support a resolution asking that teachers be declared eligible for election to city councils.

Mr. Stubbs further asked that Courtenay support the resolution when it is presented at the Union of British Columbia Municipalities convention later this year.

(Courtenay delegates to the 1948 U.B.C.M. convention supported a similar resolution, but the measure was voted down.)

AREA OF EXCLUSION

Mr. Stubbs said he could not understand why there should be an "area of exclusion" between councils of large centres and small villages such as Comox.

He pointed to Thomas Alsbury who "gave the late Sen. G. G. McGeer the fright of his life" in the 1946 Vancouver municipal election.

"Alsbury is a teacher, he is permitted to run for election as mayor of one of Canada's largest cities," said Mr Stubbs. "Yet if a teacher living in Courtenay wishes to run for city council, he is barred by an antiquated law which should never have been on the books in the first place."

can steal away a woman's beauty!

BEAUTY fades when a woman's face grows pale—when her freshness is failing—her energy runs low. Yes, and these signs often come from a blood condition. If you have them, you may have a Borderline Anemia, a mild anemia due to a nutritional deficiency of iron.

The red cells in your blood may be too puny and faded. They may be weakened to the point where they can't transmit full energy to your body. Many people — women, men and children—drag through life with this Borderline Anemia.

How Ironized Yeast Tablets Build Up Your Blood and Vigor

So, if your color is poor—your energy low and this common blood condition's to blame—take Ironized Yeast Tablets. They are formulated to help build up faded red blood cells, and thus restore vigor. Of course, continuing tiredness and pallor may be due to other conditions — so consult your doctor regularly. But in this Borderline Anemia, take Ironized Yeast Tablets to start your energy shifting back into "high" — to help restore your natural color! Take them so you can enjoy life again!

BORDERLINE ANEMIA why it can make you TIRED · PALE · LISTLESS

Blood that holds energy! This is how energy building blood looks under a microscope. Here are big, plentiful red blood cells that can release vigor to all your cells.

Blood in Borderline Anemia! Many have blood like this never know it. Cells are puny, faded. Blood like this can't release the energy you need to feel and look your best.

And the Walls Came Tumbling

By JOSEPH McCORD

CHAPTER V (Continued)

"And to think what it will do for the stores and . . . things!" Carol's practical mind leaped ahead. There was Andy. Perhaps he could afford an attractive shop. "Where do you suppose all the people will find places to stay? Where is the factory going to be?"

"Up the railroad a piece. The old canning factory's a part of the ground they tell me. Odd you hadn't heard. Town's buzzing with it."

Doctor Silverthorne was recalling Dennison's injury, that the stranger had asked him where he might find Andy Delaine. Queer for a fellow like him to be hunting Andy. Carol's face convinced him that she didn't know the answer, either.

"I hope it's true," she sighed. "I can't remember anything exciting ever happening here. It would be almost as good as living in a city."

"Could boom things for a time. You should advise Mrs Steel to take in boarders. She's famous for running church suppers." Erasmus gave his beard a final tug. "The Hanscomb can't stand much of a rush and if Peck Mather doesn't clean things up a bit, he'll find himself paying a bonus to the trade he does anare. Your friend with the magnetic feet must have hardy ancestors. Well, I'm leaving. If a call comes from Wilcox's, tell them I'll be along in the course of an hour or so. Ed can't last long, though. I'll give him a couple of days."

Ordinarily a statement like that would have depressed Carol greatly. Dr. Silverthorne had a dispassionate way of discussing death—births, too but he always brooded over the passing of a patient. As if he somehow had failed in a professional task. Just now, however, his receptionist's mind was too greatly taken up by Jericho's good fortune. Nevertheless, she deferred her lunch hour until she was sure that the doctor had time to reach the Wilcox Farm. Scarcely half a block from the office she was startled to hear her name called and turned to see a car slowing at the curb.

It was Mr Dennison.

"Going your way," he observed. "Can I drop you at your gate? It's warm walking today." As he spoke he reached out and flung open the roadster's door. That made an acceptance of the invitation rather compelling.

"Why, thank you very much!"

As Carol sank back into the deep upholstery the first thing that came to mind was that she had been picked up directly in front of the bank. Wige would have something to say about that now, if he saw it. After all, what difference did it make? "How is your foot?" she asked with polite concern, glancing down as if she expected to see the injured member swathed in bandages. It wasn't.

"Coming along nicely. And how are you?"

"I'm fine."

"I fail," so. He said quietly but without any suggestion of the veiled sarcasm Carol had come to associate with his talk. Privately she had concluded that he might have a keen sense of humor but for some reason feared it would break out and so was continually on his guard. After all, she had conversed with him but twice and when his foot was hurting him. In the excitement of this unexpected situation she promptly forgot the puzzle that was revolving in her mind when Dennison hailed her: What the "proposition" could be he had attempted to sell Andy but hadn't succeeded.

Now he was speaking again in the same casual way and driving slowly, too.

"As a matter of fact, Miss Delaine, I was wondering if you weren't unusually happy just now."

There it was again. Why must he spoil almost everything he said? She countered that one with Andy's dismissal.

"Why not? I've admired your car every time I've seen it. It's beautiful." She was aware that her driver gave her a quick glance, but she continued to look straight ahead.

"Good Lord!" was his vexatious retort. "Excuse it. But I hope you don't really think I'm . . . like that!"

"Then there is something else I should be happy about?"

"It sounds asinine. But I was thinking about your plant locating here. From the way I've been buttonholed and interviewed the last twenty-four hours, I had an impression . . ."

"Why, of course I'm happy about that! I should have started enthusing at once. But I didn't know a thing about it until Doctor Silverthorne told me an hour or two ago. And he couldn't tell me very much. Then it's true?"

"It's true enough." Dennison cursed himself mentally for his callow attempt. This girl was sure to think him an utter simpleton.

He had visited Delaine at his shop that same morning and reluctantly accepted the little tailor's terms on the strength of a telegram received from the home office. Nothing else to do just now the wire said, later perhaps. Dennison was to make the best bargain he could. Progress was essential. Delaine was politely imperturbable, but the younger man thought he detected a certain smugness in his air. Of course he had told his family, gloated over his cleverness. He would

Now, it appeared that he had nothing of the sort. More than that, he had succeeded in making Lawhead's rising young executive look undeniably silly. In spite of her unfortunate choice of relatives, this girl was unusually attractive and she had a distinct personality. For some reason he could not explain she had been in his thoughts quite often during the past forty-eight hours. This morning he had been wondering how her father's stroke would affect her. From Jericho's viewpoint, the Delaine's would be rich. They'd probably splurge and that, so far as Carol was concerned, seemed a pity.

Before he could think of any satisfactory way to escape from his present awkward dilemma, the Steel house was reached and Carol had her hand on the car door. He opened it for her. At the same time a quick slight figure reposing in a porch chair. That, too, was quite in keeping with the situation.

"Thank you very much, Mr. Dennison," Carol said quietly as she stepped out.

"Not at all."

VERA-ALLEN, who knocked everyone cold dancing "Slaughter on 10th Ave." with Gene Kelley, in "Words & Music," does her next toe-twirling with Fred Astaire—and this should be something. It was supposed Ginger Rogers would be teamed again in "A Royal Wedding," but no—it comes up Vera. Up comes this NEW idea to completely furnish a bedroom on the cheap & here's the idea. Two chests (The Mr. & Mrs. Chests) with a big plate mirror 30" by 36" fastened to the wall over them. This Mr and Mrs. were given a sealer coat at the factory, so can be finished in any color, altho they look very devoted as they are made of cedar and have concealed handles, and 4 drawers. Then there is a Hollywood bed . . . a time-tested slat & link spring on legs and a mile-high spring-filled mattress . . . result . . . a nice little bedroom outfit for only $95.00, and U get 8 big drawers to stuff things away.

IT'S A HIT. Lana Turner & Bob Topping are headed for the West Indies on their yacht "The Southern," altho at present anchored off the shore of Foul Bay (excuse me that's an error) off the coast of Florida. Lana says she will return to Metro as soon as the studio wants her. Lana is said to be very happy. The real reason why Miss West is out of the cast of "Diamond Lil" on Broadway, is said to be, because she fell, getting out of a bathtub, and sprained her ankle. Come up and See Us Sometime. (the Us . . . being HUMBER BROS.) and get one 3 for 300. That's 3 rooms furnished for $300. This is a lot easier than writing a pome, I'm just sitting here, swiping this stuff from Louella Parsons. The danger period in marriage is said to be the 2nd 5 years. If a couple get safely past the 10th anniversary the chances are very good they will have a golden wedding. Wonder if I could work another plug in here . . . no . . . better not. Not one woman in 10 wears a hat that is becoming to her, so says an authority, and a bloke by the name of Thomas in Piccadilly, who has been selling hats to men for 61 years, says "It has been my experience that women, are the worst judges in the world of men's hats." The G.F. has a happy knack of cutting the crown off some old hunk of felt, pinning on a flower, and making the bonnet look like one of those perky 95 dollar jobs. Some of the worst moments of my life, when a boy, was watching mother stick a hat pin thru her head, when she wore that lid with the golden pheasant on it. How about a plug now??? O.K., well sling on your bonnet & come, take a look at our "Thor" washers . . . everyone says they are about tops . . . they have the super-agitator, and a 9-lb. tub . . . & the oil is sealed in . . . we have our sales-talk pretty pat on these . . . want to check on it??? $149 is the low asking, and tailored terms. Out of the dark of Winter's smother, up from the Winter's velvet white. Out from the earth's mysterious mother, daffodils were born last nite. It isn't very often we trade in a Chesterfield Suite so good that no one can tell it was ever used, but such is the case with this big drawing-room model . . . want a super-bargain??? A great big barrel, sweat & toil, vinegar thrown, plus a lotta oil. But the latest crack, I guess it's satire, "It's all held together . . . with chicken-wire."

The Awful Price You Pay For BLEEDING GUMS
Sore bleeding gums are often a sign of dreaded Pyorrhea, a bad gum infection, where pus comes from around teeth and in time teeth get loose and fall out.
So, see your dentist and start using Forhan's For The Gums at once. Forhan's cleans teeth to a bright sparkling lustre. It checks bleeding gums, helps gums to be firmer with a lovely healthy pinkness. Notice the difference in the way your teeth and gums soon feel and look. Recommended by Dentists.

Reduced Costs, Capacity Boost May Halve U.K. Airline Losses

LONDON, March 12 (NANA). — Britain's Government-owned airlines are expected to nearly halve their [illegible] during the 12-month period beginning at the end of March, as compared with the corresponding year [illegible] coming to a close. However, estimated losses are set at about $22,000,000.

Causes for the relatively hopeful outlook are reduced costs and an improvement in the capacity of British air services. Programs already approved are expected to bring an increase in ton-miles of about a third during the next 12 months. Important in this respect are the new aircraft expected and further reorganizations.

Costs of the three Government-owned lines—British Overseas Airways, British European Airways, and British South American Airways—have been falling for the past two years laregly through staff reductions in the two major corporations: B.O.A.C. and B.E.A. Actual losses, however, have remained high as they have with most air operators throughout the world.

NEW PLANES IN 1952

Recently, the Ministry of Civil Aviation has hinted that losses may have to be borne until 1952 when the great bulk of new craft will be in service. On these new craft, a spokesman said, Britain was relying to lead the world.

This year, B.E.A. will not receive new aircraft [illegible] will [illegible] its fleet [illegible] those routes which fit in best with its present organization. This will leave many "home," or internal routes, for the [illegible], to private operators working as associates of the corporation. Fortunately, there appear to be plenty of private companies ready to [illegible] which [illegible] does not wish to operate.

Some new aircraft will be delivered to British Overseas Airways this year. These are expected to improve the economic situation by providing additional capacity without demanding extra labor in [illegible] by affording higher performance and consequently higher daily revenue. These aircraft are landplanes. To some extent, they will displace the flying boats and so yield a saving in the [illegible] of handling. On the flying-boat services, all the marine equipment has to be provided by the corporation and this has proved to be a heavy item in the cost of operation.

PAY LOAD INCREASE

The first of the landplane replacements should be the Handley Page Hermes IV, with delivery beginning shortly. The arrival of the Hermes should bring a marked improvement in pay load as compared with some of the "interim" types of aircraft now in use by the corporations. The Hermes, as a passenger-carrier, has a pay-load capacity of 15,950 pounds.

One of the interesting things about Britain's aircraft is that some have been ordered for the corporations before the prototypes have been flown. Eight De Havilland Comet jet liners are on order for B.O.A.C. and six more for British South American Airways. That argues a [illegible] measure of confidence in the design. It also marks the desire of the corporations to have a certain number of high-speed aircraft for the operation of express services, possibly at special fares.

The Comet should be able to cruise at 450 m.p.h. It may even do much better than that, but the makers have not yet published their estimates. On the other hand, [illegible] orders on behalf of the corporations have yet been placed for the 130-ton Bristol Brabazon. There may be orders when some experience has been gained with this great land plane.

GOOD CRUISING SPEED

Whatever doubts there may be about runways and maintenance arrangements for the Brabazon do not apply to the Princess [illegible] of flying boats now being built by Saunders-Roe for B.S.A.A. Three of these boats are on order and four more are likely to be ordered. In these boats, a good cruising speed of at least 330 m.p.h. [illegible] combined with a [illegible] pay load capacity. At [illegible] range, which [illegible] permit a non-stop flight from England to New York, the Princess class will be able to carry 20,000 pounds of pay load. The hull is of such dimensions that, on shorter trips, enormous loads can be taken.

Another type which is likely to be ordered unseen, is the Bristol 175, intended not for the Atlantic but for the Commonwealth routes. Its loaded weight will be about 100,000 pounds, quite modest in comparison with the Brabazon and the Princess, but its speed when fitted with turbo-props is likely to be most attractive. A great deal of the success for which Britain looks in three or four years' time evidently depends on the lead she has established in the development of the gas turbine for use both in driving propellers and in jet propulsion.

Several operational difficulties associated with the use of gas turbines in commercial air transport [illegible] still to be dealt with. If satisfactory solutions are found, large benefits are likely to be derived from the gas turbine and the next generation of British airliners may well [illegible] the [illegible]

Ship Crosses Arctic Circle In Midwinter

By THOMAS R. HENRY

ABOARD U.S.S. [illegible], OFF EAST GREENLAND, March 10 (NANA) - This storm-battling icebreaker floated placidly across the Arctic Circle one warm Spring-like evening recently green-curtained with Northern Lights and with the sea as quiet as an inland pond.

It was a strange transition from a few hours before when, in Arctic [illegible] and mount[illegible] [illegible] whipped by a gale [illegible] the great reaches of icy water to the northwest, the ship was standing nearly on her beam end amid artillery-like crashes of great ice blocks.

This is one of the first [illegible] in history that any ship [illegible] crossed the Arctic Circle in mid-Winter in this part of the world. The crossing came at 33 degrees of longitude.

On this same voyage, the Edisto pushed across the Circle along the West Greenland Coast a month ago.

NAVIGATIONAL EPIC

The passage out of the fiercest sort of Winter weather to a balmy Spring constitutes a navigational epic. Two nights before the ship had been trapped all night in a frozen hurricane whose shoreward drift carried the craft some 20 miles toward the rocky Greenland coast.

The Edisto was caught in a heaving, cracking ice flotilla all night long and the cobalt-blue [illegible] were heaved against the sides of the vessel with crashes like the firing of big guns. Progress, relatively easy for this ship through stationary ice, became virtually impossible.

These conditions were among the worst ever encountered at sea and valuable lessons in Arctic navigation were learned for any future attempt to buck the Winter ocean close to the Arctic circle.

A late dawn came with swirling snow and a gray mist rising from the billowing ice. In a few hours, despite bad visibility, the ship was able to make her way to the open safety of the swift-flowing [illegible] Greenland current, pouring South from the vicinity of the North Pole. There was no abating of the winds which had packed the ice mountain-high during the night. The ship was rolling as much as 45 degrees each way.

MORE DIFFICULT

Navigation toward the North Pole in Winter up the East [illegible] of Greenland appears to be more difficult even than along the West Coast despite the far greater extension of open [illegible] on the East. This is due to the extreme storminess and the treacherous nature of the ice, which tends to concentrate from 20 to 30 miles from the shore.

The surface of the icepack for most of the morning looked like an endless expanse of frothy vanilla ice cream topped with a dash of cobalt blue, while the open sea was a gray-blue chaos of deck-washing waves.

GOOD SAMARITAN

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP)—An exhausted deer [illegible] to reach firmer ground because of the slippery footing, was rescued by L. Copp from the icy surface of Stony Lake. He dragged it by its front feet to the shore where the animal was able to regain its footing.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

According to Culbertson

Copyright, 1949, by Ely Culbertson

As almost everyone knows, playing a hand "double-dummy" means to play it as though you could see every card in the opponents possession. That was substantially the case in today's deal—the expert declarer seemed to have X-ray eyes!

South, [illegible].
North-South vulnerable

	NORTH
	♠ K J 9
	♥ Q 10 4 3
	♦ Q 10 9 8 3

♣ Q 6 4		♣ J 8 7 5 3
	SOUTH
	♠ A Q 10 8 5
	♦ A J
	♣ A K 10 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♥	2 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's leap to six was somewhat sensational, but so was his hand, after North had raised freely.

However, when West opened a trump and the dummy went down, South could not be entirely pleased with his position. West's two-heart overcall made it all too probable that the diamond king was offside, and if South took that [illegible] and lost it, he knew that the heart ace would be banged down without appreciable delay.

South studied the situation for some time, and the conviction grew that no line of play had a conspicuously good chance to succeed. One plan after another [illegible] to be [illegible].

South made up his mind. Winning the first trick in dummy, he led a low heart to the king. West won and returned another trump. South took this in his own hand, then cashed the ace of diamonds. His next move was to take a finesse to the ten of hearts, and when that card held he cashed exactly one more trump—thus putting East out of the running. Now he cashed the heart queen and discarded his own diamond jack. When he followed this up by ruffing a diamond, and the king fell from West, it was all over—South merely returned a trump to dummy's honor and ran the good diamonds. He now had one more trick than he needed.

Yemenite Jews Moved In Israel "Air Shuttle"

TEL AVIV, March 12 (Reuters).—Believing themselves to belong to Israel's Lost Tribes, a group of Yemenite Jews have just made the 1,600-mile flight from Aden to Israel—their first air trip—with the same philosophical Oriental calm as they accepted a new way of life.

Ancestors of the Jews have lived in the Yemen since Biblical times. As non-Moslems they lived under restrictive Arab laws and fled to Aden at the outbreak of the Palestine fighting which coincided with internal political unrest.

Those of military age were detained by British authorities during the Palestine truce.

They now are being moved to Israel at the rate of 150 a day under operation "Magic Carpet" by chartered aircraft flying a non-stop shuttle service.

Despite British attempts to check the flow, Jews continue to infiltrate over the Yemen border into Aden. "Magic Carpet" operations may continue for some time.

See Some Hope of Compromise For Czech State and Catholics

PRAGUE, March 12 (Reuters).—Recent developments in Czecho-Slovakia have brought the representatives of the Catholic Church and state back to the point of negotiation.

Both sides are now hopeful that agreement may be reached — although both recognize the difficulty of attaining a compromise between points which are still widely separated.

The points at issue are:

1. Schools. Despite denials by Communist officials, the state has taken over many Catholic schools, especially those attached to monasteries.

TWO HOURS ENOUGH

The state argues that two hours a week compulsory religious instruction in state schools meets the requirements of the church.

The church declared that two hours a week is insufficient to counteract the effect of the new "materialist" doctrines taught under direction of the Communist Ministry of Education during the remainder of school time.

2. Politics. The church maintains that priests should not take part in politics. The Communists argue that the church took no action against priests taking part in politics before February, 1948, and that action taken since must therefore be construed as "hostile."

3. Anti-state activity: The Communists further demand that the church take action against priests found guilty of anti-state activity.

MAY CONSIDER ACTION

The church, according to an authoritative source, may be prepared to consider this, but can take no steps in the matter of priests already tried and imprisoned.

"On the material level, the church makes a number of complaints:

The question of compensation for nationalized church property is outstanding.

The state offers to meet the financial difficulties consequent upon nationalization of church properties by assuming full responsibility for the payments of priests' salaries. The church fears that to accept financial assistance might mean accepting financial and other controls.

HOPE FOR SETTLEMENT

Hopes for a degree of settlement were raised here last month when President Klement Gottwald received a delegation of Catholic bishops.

It is understood that President Gottwald accepted assurances that the bishops sincerely wanted to come to an agreement. He asked them to put the questions raised during their discussions with the church committee of the Communists' Central Action Committee.

The feeling in high church circles here is that agreement may be possible on the material questions. Such questions as religious instruction in schools and the survival of church schools, etc., are, however, more difficult.

Producers Revive Flop With New Look in Humor

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP).—Broadway theatrical producers traditionally are gentlemen who dance—and count box-office receipts—with tears in their eyes.

Whenever they present any show of less stature and acclaim that the "current "Death of a Salesman" or "Kiss Me, Kate" they moan that the world is against them. Especially do they belabor disapproving critics, playgoers who shun the box-office and actors who want their names in bigger lights.

CURRENT CASE

Sometimes, but not often, the producers triumph over these threats to their artistic endeavors. A current case is that of Clifford Odets' new play, "The Big Knife," which opened February 24 to reviews which were almost unanimously acid in tone.

Dwight Deere Wiman, producer of the play, drew some comfort from the fact that he had cinema star John Garfield in the leading role. But, what principally eased his aching pains from the gloomy first-night reception was the fact that in the box-office till was $208,000 in advance ticket sales. The receipts for the first week were $23,530, about four-fifths of the house capacity.

MAKE CHANGES

Occasionally, too, a pair of producers like Sammy Lambert and Anthony B. Farrell take a sensible view of an unhappy show and settle down to correct matters. When their musical revue, "All for Love," opened January 22 in their $1,000,000 mark Hellinger Theatre, they found something—in fact, a great deal—was wrong. Playgoers didn't laugh enough and critics made uncomplimentary remarks. It was admitted to have great beauty and little else.

Lambert and Farrell began some extensive tailor work. They built up its laugh-provoking sketches, restaged the dances, added some new numbers and threw out others. Then they took large advertisements in the newspapers to explain to playgoers that they were doing something rather than sit back and watch the show die a slow death.

The "new look" additions to the humor, combined with the already beautiful girls, production and score of "All for Love" now make this a completely happy experience in the theatre.

"Suffered much with constipation"

Famous cereal helps where "remedies" failed

Are you among those who long for constipation relief? Then read this unsolicited letter:

"I tried several remedies but could not end this old trouble. One day I was told I should try KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. I began to eat this cereal regularly. And without exaggeration, it turned out to be perfect for me!" M. Mason, 6727 9th Avenue, Rosemount, Montreal.

If your constipation is due to lack of bulk in the diet, you too may find lasting relief! Eat a daily portion of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN and drink plenty of water! ALL-BRAN is not a purgative, but a wholesome regulating cereal. Eat an ounce as a cereal or in muffins for constipation relief. If after using a package you are not entirely satisfied, get double your money back as guaranteed on the package. Buy delicious ALL-BRAN from your grocer today. Made by Kellogg's of London, Ontario.

Balanced for Softness and Strength!

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, March 12 (AP)—Wall Street's hopes for a Spring rally in the stock market took on new life this week.

On Friday the market snapped out of its coma with the largest average gain in more than two months. The forward momentum carried through to today's short session when key issues moved up fractions to more than a point.

At the week-end the price level, as measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, was the highest since February 4.

Saturday's advance was considered impressive by many financial men in view of the news that John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' chief, had called his men out of all mines east of the Mississippi for two weeks.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks inched up .1 of one point to 63.9, a peak since 64.6 was touched on February 4. Of the 739 individual issues which changed hands, 418 advanced and 142 declined. Sales totaled 390,000 shares, against 450,000 a week earlier.

Montreal Stocks

MONTREAL, March 12 (CP).—Trends were about mixed during continued dull dealings in the second half of this Saturday two-hour session of the Montreal Stock Exchange and Curb Market.

Utilities were slightly easier while papers were edging into higher ground in narrow lists. Metals and mines were steady. Steel moved on a soft decline.

Butter Prices Drop in East

WINNIPEG, March 12 (CP).—Bulk butter prices dropped another two cents a pound in Winnipeg today following yesterday's two cent decline, a trade source announced.

The price of bulk butter to wholesalers has dropped from 65½ to 65 cents this week. At the same time, retail prices have dropped from a range of 71-70 to 65-64 cents.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., March 12 (CP).—Butter prices slumped here today, with best grade down 6½ cents to 67-70 cents a pound. Dealers could give no reason for the decline.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, March 12 (AP).—After falling a few cents in early dealings grains staged a mild rally on the Board of Trade. Some contracts got back above the previous close. May wheat showing the best recovery powers.

Much of the late buying came from previous short sellers. However, there appeared to be some mill buying in May wheat. This was considered hedge lifting against sales of flour to the domestic trade. It was believed to be Spring wheat flour as wheat prices firmed at Minneapolis.

Country offerings of cash corn were not large, bookings totaling 35,000 bushels. In corn, the best recovery was shown by the December contract, which represents the still unplanted 1949 crop. Elevator interests gave a little support to oats.

Private cables said [illegible] markets in Italy and Belgium were [illegible] with consigned coarse grains for which the demand has disappeared.

Winnipeg Grain

WINNIPEG, March 12 (CP).—Coarse grain futures prices rallied to erase or reduce early sharp declines in moderately active trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Selling in Winnipeg grains was stimulated early in the session by weakening tendencies on American grain markets. This selling was met by mill and shipper demand in oats and processor and shipper support in barley.

Firming tendencies at Chicago also stimulated some local and commission house buying in oats and barley late in the session.

Rye, a commission house trade, saw early sellers return to the buying side when American grain prices rallied. The United Kingdom was allocated 500,000 bushels of wheat under the Anglo-Canadian wheat agreement.

Prices of class two wheat remained unchanged.

Export Buying Boosts Prices Bid for Cattle

OTTAWA, March 12 (CP).—An increase in export buying was responsible for a rise in prices this week on Western cattle markets, the Dominion Agriculture Department reported today in its livestock review.

At Toronto, [illegible] prices on choice steers were $21, [illegible] light steers and heifers, $19-$19.50, with a few $20, good cows, $16-$16.50, and good [illegible], $18.50-$19.50. Montreal offered only 1,358 cattle, [illegible] 25 per cent of which were steers. [illegible] on steers were steady, but heifers and bulls 50 cents lower. Good light steers made $19.50-$20; mediums, $17-$19, and common as low as $15. Good cows, $15.25-$16.50; common downward to $12, canners and cutters, $9-$11.50. A few good [illegible] sold at $17-$19, [illegible] common, $14-$16.

Winnipeg received 2,756 cattle. Good light steers [illegible] at $19-$20, odd choice heavy steers, $20.50, and mediums down to $17.50. Good cows rated $15-$16, and canners and cutters, $11-$13.50. Calgary sold 2,066 cattle. Choice light steers [illegible] the scales at $19.50-$19.75; good at $19-$19.25, good cows $1[illegible]-$1[illegible], mediums, $14.75-$[illegible] [illegible] and cutters, $10-$12.50. Edmonton offered 2,419 cattle with a few fancy steers, $19.25; most choice lights $18.50-$19, [illegible], $17.25-$18.25, [illegible] cows $14-$15 and down to a low of $9 on canners. Receipts at Saskatoon were 300 cattle, all sold with good light steers $16-$1[illegible], medium $17-$17[illegible] [illegible] $17.50 and good cows, $14.25-$14.50.

Crude Petroleum Output Shows Increase in 1948

OTTAWA, March 12 (CP).—Output of crude petroleum in Canada during 1948 was 73 per cent higher than in the previous year, increasing from 6,893,000 to 11,[illegible] barrels the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

At the same time Canada imported 11 per cent more crude than in 1947, rising from 69,828,000 to 77,336,000 barrels. During the year 89,275,000 barrels of crude petroleum were received at Canadian refineries as compared with 76,721,000 the year before, for an overall increase of 16.3 per cent.

Output of refined petroleum products was almost 11 per cent higher, major increases coming from motor gasoline, kerosene and fuel oils. The year's aggregate production amounted to 80,969,000 barrels compared with 73,077,000 in 1947.

Venezuela was the main source of Canada's crude oil imports, accounting for 37,567,000 as against 27,797,999 in 1947. The United States was next with 32,071,000 compared with [illegible]. Arabia, which had not exported any oil to Canada in 1947, sent 3,643,000 barrels to the Dominion last year. Other imports: Trinidad, 2,537,000, Iran [illegible], Mexico 213,322.

Yield Record Set by Wells

EDMONTON, March 12 (CP).—Led by a dozen flush-flowing wells in the lush new Redwater sector, Alberta's oil wells set a production record of 56,669 barrels a day during the first week of March.

Production showed an increase of 6,395 barrels daily over the previous record established during the week ended February 21.

The rich Redwater sector, 35 miles northeast of Edmonton, averaged 11,591 barrels from 12 wells, compared with 11,379 barrels of crude oil from Turner Valley, oldest major field in the province. The Redwater [illegible] was discovered last September.

Total production in the first week of March showed an increase of 150 per cent over output for the corresponding week a year ago.

Stocks of Meat Showing Decline

OTTAWA, March 12 (CP).—Stocks of meat held by wholesale butchers and cold storage warehouses across Canada declined during February, the Bureau of Statistics reported.

At March 1 meat stocks were 72,[illegible] pounds, compared with 80,[illegible] at February 1, and 132,211,000 at March 1 a year ago.

Stocks of frozen meat fell to 45,[illegible] pounds from 90,827,000 pounds a year ago. Most marked decrease was in pork which was down to 15,[illegible] pounds from 52,434,000.

Social Work Convention To Be Held in Victoria

"Western Goals in Social Welfare" will be the theme of the Western Regional Conference on Social Work, when that body meets in convention, May 2-5, at the Empress Hotel.

E. W. Griffith deputy minister of welfare for British Columbia, is president of the conference, and [illegible] executive committee in charge of program planning and conference arrangements. Serving on the committee are Miss Sara Spencer, vice-president, Miss Marie Riddell, secretary; Dr. H. Anderson, corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. Pearlman, recording secretary, and Col. W. H. Dobbie, treasurer.

PARLEY OFFICERS

Committee chairman and conveners are J. K. Balcombe, Mrs. D. Markham, Dr. M. Sherman, W. R. Bone, E. L. Rimmer, Miss C. Gardiner, Mrs. N. Baker, Miss J. M. Riddell, Miss Marjorie Smith (Vancouver), Miss Margaret Gourlay (Vancouver), Miss Winona Armitage (Cowichan Station) and Col. Dobbie. Other Victoria members are Mayor Percy E. George, Alderman Margaret Christie, Miss Laura Holland, Mrs. P. H. Mutrie, Miss Mildred Wright, Dr. J. L. Gaylon, D. G. Decker and Dr. J. A. Taylor.

Col. Hugh Allan and Miss Ruby McKay are Vancouver members. Manitoba members are S. McArton, Mrs. Robert McQueen and Dr. C. E. Smith. K. E. Forster and Miss Marjorie Bernard will represent Saskatchewan, and Miss Hazeldine Bishop, Alberta.

The conference will be the second held in Canada. The first was at Regina in 1947.

CHANCE FOR STUDY

The need for such conferences was recognized at the National Conference in Halifax in 1946, when it was decided regional conferences should be held biennially in various parts of Canada, alternating with the National Conference held every two years.

The purpose of the conferences is to provide both private and professional social workers with opportunity to study and discuss current social problems of each region and to formulate future social welfare plans.

The Victoria conference will review and discuss public welfare, family and children's casework services, welfare for minority groups, social planning, mental health, group relationships and rehabilitation services.

Community organization will be the topic at an open meeting, during the conference, due to widespread interest in the value and need of Community Chests and councils.

Honoring Good St. Patrick

Breaking through Shamrock, stove-pipe hat, traditional clay pipe and all, this little Irish lass with merry twinkle in her blue eyes is all set for St. Patrick's Day, Thursday. Even her dress is green.

Welfare Minister

E. W. GRIFFITH

President of executive committee for 1949 Western Regional Conference on Social Work meeting at Empress Hotel, May 2-5. Mr. Griffith is deputy minister of welfare for British Columbia. Delegates from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will attend sessions.

Alberni Retailers Reorganize, Elect

PORT ALBERNI, March 12.—Alberni District Retail Merchants' Association has been reorganized and an immediate membership canvass will be launched by the executive.

Pioneer merchant, E. Homewood, was returned as president and George Folkard will continue as secretary-treasurer.

The following executive was chosen: Charles Heddon, A. C. Macfie, Clare Vivian, Jack Stewart, D. Arey Smith and Hans Petersen.

Kenneth White, manager of Woodward's, addressed the meeting and suggested that the association affiliate with the B.C. Retail Merchants' Association with headquarters in Vancouver.

The association decided there will be no holiday on Easter Monday, that a two-day holiday will be observed on May 24 which falls on Tuesday, and recommended to councils that Saturday, May 7, being observed as V.E. Day, be not declared a holiday.

At the next meeting it was suggested that the association discuss a holiday schedule for the balance of the year.

Harbor Plan At Courtenay Wins Approval

COURTENAY, March 12.—Fishermen who ply their trade in the waters of Georgia Strait are in favor of the proposed 200-boat harbor at the mouth of the Courtenay River.

News of the proposed harbor was recieved with enthusiasm by boat-owners at present tied up in the Courtenay Slough.

One fisherman said the plan would afford fishboats the best protection to be found anywhere on the East Coast of Vancouver Island.

Another said owners of seiners would welcome accommodation planned in the harbor. Lights, water, fire-protection and sanitary facilities are always hard to get, he stated.

SURVEY COMPLETED

"The plans of Courtenay-Comox civic and trade board officials, if carried to completion, would eliminate many of our worries on this score," he declared.

Engineers of the Federal Public Works Department have completed survey of the site, while the public works bureau of the Courtenay-Comox Chamber of Commerce is preparing a brief, urging establishment of the harbor, for presentation to the Federal Government.

Also completed are surveys of the Courtenay Slough and the site of the proposed breakwater at Comox.

Ladysmith I.W.A. Elects Galloway

LADYSMITH, March 12.—Annual meeting of Sub-local 1-80 I.W.A., Ladysmith, elected James Galloway, president. Joseph Morris was the presiding officer. Others elected were: Vice-presidents, Eric Sundberg, Jack Martin and Victor Kulla; financial secretary, Jack Caldwell; recording secretary, Hugh McKenzie; warden, Axel Anderson; conductor, George La Fleur, trustees, Bill Lyelback and Jack Armstrong.

Mr. Morris, who was chairman of the Labor Union Institute at Nanaimo, March 5-7, told of a busy week-end of union education, covering intensive training in collective bargaining and union organization, political action, and unionism in general. The institute was under the auspices of the Canadian Congress of Labor. About 80 persons attended from all local unions on Vancouver Island affiliated with the C.C.L. A. R. Mosher, C.C.L. president, was the key speaker.

Ecroyd Speaks At Jordan River

SOOKE, March 12.—L. G. Ecroyd, Western field representative of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, was guest speaker Friday evening at a Sooke-Jordan River Chamber meeting in Jordan River.

Mr. Ecroyd, introduced by A. F. Brawley, president, outlined the work of the 20 Chambers of Commerce on Vancouver Island, and emphasized how their united strength could lend power to any common project.

Looking ahead the speaker said he anticipated an increase over the 500,000 tourists who visited Vancouver Island last year.

Correspondence read at the meeting included a letter to the British Columbia Government from the Canadian Puget Sound Co., offering to use its steam shovel and other equipment, already in the area, for repairs on roads in Jordan River district.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. J. Elliott, Mrs. George Oliver and Mrs. Harry Rough of the Jordan River P.-T.A. served refreshments.

Scots, Eagles All Ready For St. Patrick's Parties

To the tune of "The Wearing o' the Green," Victoria Irishmen are preparing for St. Patrick's Day celebrations next Thursday.

One of the leading St. Patrick day events will be staged by a Scottish organization.

St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society will hold a concert and dance St. Patrick's evening at 8 o'clock at the K. of P. Hall, Cormorant Street.

Irish tunes played on Scottish pipes by Pipe-Major Ian Duncan, will be one of the features.

Irish reels and jigs by dancers under the direction of Adeline Duncan, vocal selections, piano accordion and violin selections are on the program. Dancing will be from 9 to midnight.

Arrie No. 12, Fraternal Order of Eagles, will celebrate St. Patrick's Day as part of its 50th anniversary festivities with a dance and entertainment at the Club Sirocco Thursday evening. Ray Wainwright is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Ladies' Auxiliary of the Eagles will hold a St. Patrick's Day tea at Eagles Lodge Hall, 755 View Street, Wednesday afternoon.

Many private parties will be held in homes throughout the city.

"... and it was such fun designing our own pattern!"

The rich, lustrous colours of an Armstrong Asphalt Tile Floor radiate a cheerful welcome . . . warm up the personality of any room in your house.

There's a wide range of plain and marbleized colours to choose from. And, since Armstrong's Asphalt Tile is put down one tile at a time, you can create your own individual floor design.

This modern resilient flooring resists wear. It's easy to keep clean. It retains its gleaming beauty year after year, with only occasional washing and waxing.

Yet, with all its advantages, a beautiful floor of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile costs even less today than it did ten years ago!

Flooring contractors everywhere in Canada are installing attractive modern floors of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile. Ask any Armstrong contractor or dealer in your locality to show you colours and sample floor designs, or to give you an accurate, free estimate.

Northwest Yachtsmen Meet in Victoria Club

Guarding Canadians in the Far East

Ready for any emergency if and when Chinese Communists gain complete control of China, Canadian destroyer Crescent, above, rides at anchor in Shanghai Harbor. Behind her, partly visible is Australian destroyer Shoalhaven. There are still many Canadians in Shanghai and in interior. If evacuation is necessary, Canada will have planes fly them to Shanghai where they will be placed aboard destroyer for safety and ultimate journey back home.

Packers Entering Yard; To Become Whalers

Marine News

Two fish packers, the Nahmint and the Kinquit are due to arrive at Victoria Machinery Depot today for conversion into whalers. Works Manager Thomas Moffett said yesterday that "quite a bit" of specialty work would be done on the two vessels.

This will be the second time the Nahmint has become a whaler, Mr. Moffett said. Last year it was changed over for the whaling fleet and then reconverted to a packer for the herring season.

Masts will be changed and other alterations made, he stated.

It was estimated the Nahmint would be finished in two weeks, with work on the 110-foot Kinquit scheduled for completion by April 20, when the vessel is due to sail on its way to whaling duties.

LEAVES PORT

King Bros., shipping agents, report that the British freighter, Ss. Yerby, left yesterday for the Mainland after loading approximately 1,000,000 feet of lumber here for Australia.

Ss. Lake Winnipeg, Western Canada Steamships, is berthed here to load 1,500,000 feet of lumber for the United Kingdom. Agents say she will be here several days.

HEADS SOUTH

At Los Angeles, he will join the Furness Line ship Pacific Exporter for the trip north. The vessel, inbound from the United Kingdom, will reach here about March 29, after a stop at San Francisco.

NOTICE TO MARINERS

The British Columbia Telephone Company intends to lay a submarine cable across the First Narrows, Vancouver Harbor, Tuesday, according to advice from T. E. Morrison, Department of Transport agent here.

Mariners are warned to exercise caution while the work is being done.

PREDICTS BOOST

Rep. Jackson (D., Wash.) predicted yesterday that the herring quota for Alaska for the 1949 season will be increased by the Fish and Wildlife Service.

The service had recommended the catch be held to 150,000 barrels in Southeast Alaska; to 250,000 barrels in the Kodiak area and to 100,000 barrels in the Prince William Sound region.

Jackson said that quota is more than a 50 per cent reduction from the quotas of 1948 and the fishermen felt that a larger catch can be authorized safely.

DEATH SHIP

The Ss. Durban Castle, the "porthole murder" ship, was to be boarded by police on arrival in Southampton for investigation of the shooting death at sea of a honeymooning husband.

Stephen Harper, 24-year-old son of Chairman Percy Harper of the Crystal Palace Football Club, was found shot to death in his locked cabin ten days ago. He was returning with his bride after a South African honeymoon.

The Durban Castle is the vessel from which the body of Actress Gay Gibson was jettisoned through a porthole after her death under mysterious circumstances last year. James Lamb, a deck steward, later was convicted of her murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

NO DANGER

The United States trawler St. Nicholas reported she was "completely broken down" off the Nova Scotia coast with a fishing net twisted around her propeller.

She requested immediate assistance, and R.C.A.F. search and rescue centre said a tug would go to her aid. Department of Transport marine radio said the trawler, about 20 miles off the coast 90 miles east of Halifax, was "in no immediate danger."

Bright Future Indicated For Victoria Art Centre

Coming events and present scenes point to a bright future for the Victoria Art Centre, 823 Broughton Street, officials say.

Here's a round-up of current activities at the Centre.

The exhibition of the work of Patric Cowley-Brown, which has had a successful run since February 26, is being taken down today. Mr. Brown, a former Oak Bay High School student, reports sale of three pictures through the exhibition here. The local painter's work was highly commended by Sir Stanley Unwin, well-known British publisher visiting in Victoria.

Victoria Camera Club's photographic exhibit is being transferred from the rotunda of the Parliament Buildings to the Art Centre March 15 and will be on display until March 19.

CONSIDER FESTIVALS

Works of Rowlandson and Hogarth, on loan from the Fuller Museum in Seattle, will be shown at the Centre from March 22 until the end of the month.

Victoria is being considered as a centre for art festivals similar to the art and musical festivals held annually in Edinburgh, Scotland, according to Art Centre secretary Archibald Ross. Mr. Ross conferred recently with Carleton Smith, director of the National Arts Foundation in New York.

In his capacity as an executive of the British Council, Sir Stanley Unwin complimented the Victoria committee on its effort in creating an art gallery for Victoria. He stated that he considered it "imperative" for a city of this size to have an adequate cultural centre.

TEXT OF BILL

Text of a bill to give the Minister of Transport powers to enforce safety regulations for merchant shipping was published in London yesterday.

The bill, presented by the minister, Alfred Barnes, in the House of Commons, Thursday, would enable him to apply the provisions of life-saving appliances and radio to ships not covered by the 1948 international convention for the safety of life at sea, an example being cargo ships of less than 500 gross tons.

Yachtsmen Make Plans For Season's Races

Agenda for the coming yacht racing season was drawn up at yesterday's meeting of the Pacific International Yachting Association.

Representatives of yacht clubs from Seattle, Bellingham, Vancouver, Victoria and Maple Bay took part in discussion of this year's racing plans.

Bellingham Yacht Club will play host to the association's annual regatta this year, according to secretary W. H. Day. The regatta will be a four-day affair with yachts scheduled to rendezvous at Echo Bay in the Sucia Islands in American waters on June 30.

300 CRAFT

More than 300 boats, representing 20 classes, are expected, officials state.

Feature race will be the July 1 run from Echo Bay to Bellingham with three races a day until the regatta winds up on July 4.

The July 3 special will be the race for the City of Vancouver Trophy, with mixed crews from the various clubs competing in five craft supplied by Seattle Yacht Club members.

The annual Swiftsure Light race will be held this year on the last week-end in May. Boats will start from Port Townsend, sail round Swiftsure Light off Cape Flattery and finish at Victoria.

Truck Driver Goes to Jail After Collision

Arising out of a four-car crash on Gorge Road early Friday evening, Robert Oliver Watson, 3044 Austin Avenue, was sentenced to seven days in jail in city police court yesterday when he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Magistrate H. C. Hall also suspended Watson's driver's licence for one year.

Constable Aldon Appleton said Watson was the driver of a truck proceeding west on the Gorge Road between Rock Bay Avenue and David Street which struck the rear of a car going in the same direction. The collision, he explained, caused the car to strike another in front of it, which in turn struck the rear of still another. Damage amounted to about $1,000.

SUITCASE THEFT

Thomas Raynor, charged with stealing a suitcase from Robert Casson, 1319 Vancouver Street, pleaded guilty and was remanded to Tuesday for a probation officer report.

Frank Leavitt, no fixed address, was sentenced to ten days in jail when he pleaded guilty to a charge of begging on Toronto Street. He was arrested by Constable William Rankin.

Legislature May Sit In Mornings

Morning sittings are scheduled for the current session of the British Columbia Legislature.

Premier Johnson has given notice of a resolution calling for sittings from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on and after March 16. The notice does not necessarily mean morning sittings will be called on that date.

The Government has not yet called a night sitting this session, but are expected to be called this week.

LANTERN MISSING

Mariners are advised by the Department of Transport that No. 6 gas buoy in the Fraser River, B.C., has been over-run. The buoy is still in position, but the cage and lantern are missing. Damage will be repaired as soon as possible, the department states.

Big Parsnips Bill of Fare

There will be plenty of parsnips eaten at 501 Macaulay Street during the next couple of weeks.

P.P.C.L.I. Veterans Plan Irish Banquet

Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Association will hold a St. Patrick's Day banquet at the Club Strocco Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Speed Boats

The sport of speed boat racing is again coming to the fore in Victoria and builders are getting ready for an active season. Bob Watson, 2852 Asquith Street, is shown here sanding frames before planking. His boat is the Crackerbox class and is powered by 111-h.p. engine for a top speed of 63 miles an hour.

Robertson, who is commander of the V.I.O.A., is shown rearranging his deck and motor. His boat was the runner-up in the Canadian Northwest championship. Jack Williams, who is deaf and dumb, is getting directions by sign language.

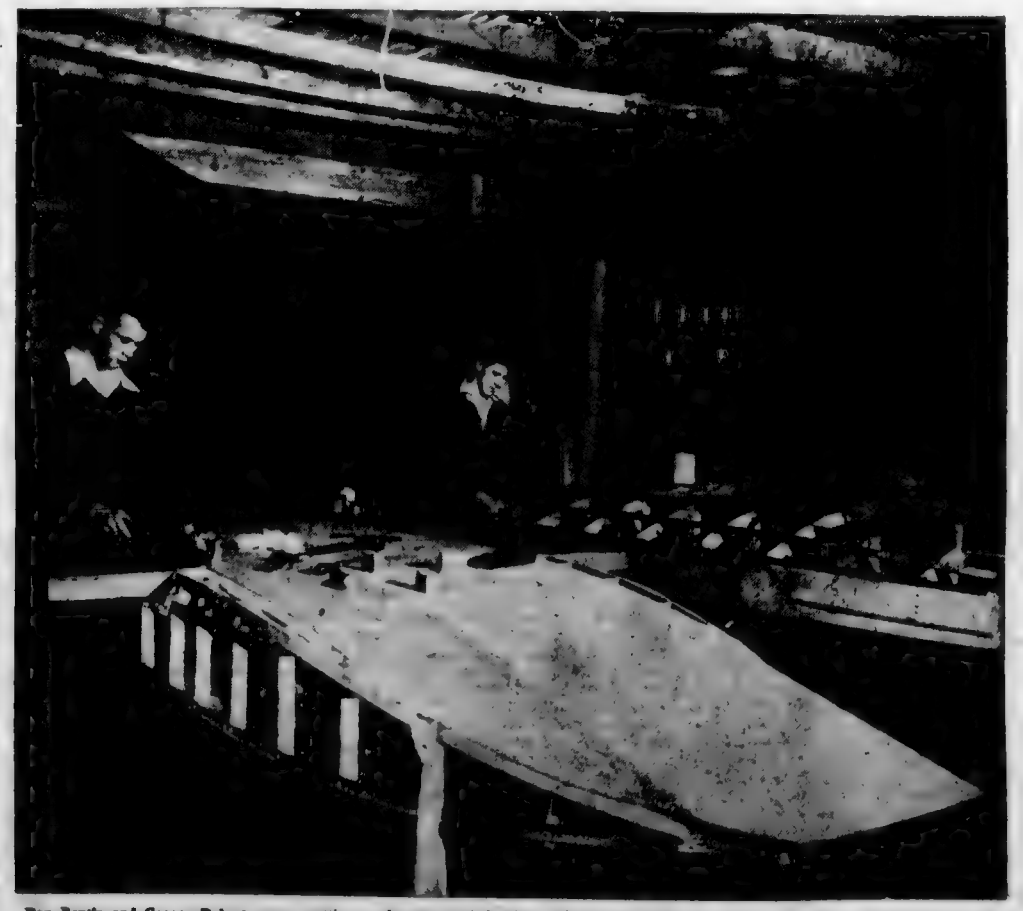
Leo Prevost, Hampshire Road, working on his boat, Pacific I design, which will be powered by a V-8.

Mrs. I. Y. Baldwin, who is "mother" to the club member, is looking over a plan. A scale model of the proposed boat is shown on the table.



Ron Bently and George Robertson are putting on bottoms and decking. These boys, with five others, are beginners. Bently's boat is a three-point suspension racing hull designed by Ted Jones, of Seattle.

Inter-Municipal Juvenile Foster Home, 1527 Cold Harbor Road, is a spacious ten-room house resembling more a fine home in a residential district than an institution. Children awaiting trial in juvenile court remain here in homelike surroundings.

Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. William S. Dingley, O.B.E., D.C.M., who daily play triple role of parents, philosophers and counsellors in their work at Inter-Municipal Juvenile Foster Home, 1527 Cold Harbor Road.

Victoria's Friendly Foster Home

By GORDON FORBES

PARENTS, philosophers and counsellors. These are the roles played daily by Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. William S. Dingley, who operate the Inter-Municipal Juvenile Foster Home at 1527 Cold Harbor Road.

With more than 100 juveniles having passed through the home since its establishment in May, 1947, Col. and Mrs. Dingley are well qualified to explain to the layman what goes on in the mixed up little minds of the city's so-called delinquent children.

Grandparents themselves, the friendly couple gain the confidence of the children in a manner lauded by all city officials concerned with work among juveniles.

Purpose of the home is to hold juveniles pending decision by the judge of the juvenile court. Prior to establishment of the home, juveniles had to be housed in the city jail, a practice extremely unsuitable and deemed basically wrong by many. The home is financed by the City of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt, and is operated by a committee headed by Ald. Mrs. Margaret D. Christie, who was instrumental in creating the home.

FITTED FOR WORK

Col. Dingley was provost marshal for this area during the war, and admits that there is some similarity in dealing with soldiers and juvenile delinquents. He said he used to wonder what made soldiers get into trouble, but now, having had close contact with juvenile delinquents, he understands a lot more.

A two-war veteran and a soldier most of his life, Col. Dingley and his wife have traveled extensively. They impart a great deal of their knowledge to the juveniles who pass through the home.

Far from being a "detention" home, the establishment is run on a "home" basis. Col. and Mrs. Dingley go to great pains to make the children feel they are wanted, and that they are not in jail.

"We have to make them realise they have committed an offence, but at the same time we endeavor to make them believe they are wanted," stated Col. Dingley. "We impress upon the delinquent child that he must change his outlook on life."

Youngest child to pass through the home was a nine-year-old boy. Ratio of boys to girls entering is about three to one.

BETWEEN FRIENDS

Col. Dingley, who is holder of the O.B.E. and D.C.M., has several ways in which to "open up" the boys who enter the home. At first, he said, a juvenile delinquent is quite reluctant to tell anything about himself. So Col. and Mrs. Dingley refrain from asking direct questions and never let the child feel he is being interrogated. No interview is held when the delinquent is brought to the home.

The colonel usually takes the boys in tow and works with them in the garden or about the home. After talking about everything in general, he said he asks a few indirect questions about the boy himself. He doesn't press, and just asks the odd question, but not enough to make the boy think he is prying.

"Pretty soon it is all coming out. Why he committed the offence, his home troubles and virtually his life story," according to Col. Dingley.

Mrs. Dingley has equal success with the girls when working around the kitchen.

LOCKS RARELY USED

Asked about locks, Col. Dingley scoffs. Very seldom, he said, has he ever had to lock a delinquent in his room.

"Sure there are locks, but I don't like to use them."

Two girls escaped from the home early one evening. They went to a show and returned the same night. Two boys once left the home. One came back on his own volition, and the father of the second boy brought him back. All of the "escapes" have been in the daytime, and have consisted of merely walking off the premises.

An indication of the home's effectiveness is the fact that Col. and Mrs. Dingley receive numerous letters and personal calls from juveniles who have passed through the home and are well on their way to being useful citizens. This is due probably to the fact that the pair endeavor to make the juveniles feel at home and "one of the children."

In the case of one boy, he came back to tell Col. and Mrs. Dingley that he was leaving town to get a job in an Up-Island logging camp. They tell all they have been doing and usually ask a little advice. Some come back to see if the colonel can use his influence to get them work.

THE FRIENDLY TOUCH

Mrs. Dingley takes credit for the following incident. It concerns two girls and a boy, all who had passed through the home because of various offences. The boy was in the Industrial School for Christmas, and the girls came to Mrs. Dingley asking help in sending him a Christmas parcel. The boy was the boy friend of one of the girls.

Mrs. Dingley obtained all the goods for the parcel and the girls had "the time of their lives" wrapping and mailing it. This is just one example of the feelings of the juveniles who have experienced the warmth of the foster home.

Numerous Christmas cards are received by the Dingley's from children who have been in the home. One card last year came from Montreal. Youngsters also come to visit Col. and Mrs. Dingley.

"They always get something to eat and drink when they come to visit," says Mrs. Dingley.

The term "detention home" is veered away from by officials, who prefer to call it a juvenile foster home.

Col. Dingley contends that majority of the juveniles commit offences in ignorance, which is direct result of irresponsible parents. The children are all repentent, he said.

FITTING THE CAUSE

Parents are never resentful, according to Col. Dingley, who says many come to him to seek advice, and at all hours. Lack of the proper facilities to keep the children's active minds occupied is one of the greatest causes of delinquency in Col. Dingley's opinion.

"Most of our juvenile delinquents are just plain kids overflowing with energy. Majority of them aren't bad," declared Col. Dingley.

He has encountered few belligerent or lazy children in the home. Some are bitter and have a chip on their shoulders, but once their confidence has been gained they change their outlook on life, he said.

"It is surprising what a casual conversation will bring out. The kids want to be good, but sometimes just don't understand this great big world," stated Col. Dingley.

Distant Wave Forecasting Being Studied on Pacific

BERKELEY, Cal. (UP). — Something new is being added to weather forecasts in the form of predicting the size and time of arrival of ocean waves.

A group of University of California engineers, headed by Prof. Joe W. Johnson, is making an extensive study of waves for the navy's burden of ships.

Although fishermen, shippers and harbor engineers now are given accurate local weather reports, they often have been crossed up by unpredicted waves generated by storms up to 5,000 miles away. The condition of the sea and surf often has no conection with local weather conditions.

WAVES CARRY FAR

Johnson describes waves as "packages of energy" built by wind. The velocity, duration and extent of the wind determines the speed, size and power of waves. Once started, a wave can carry its power undiminished for thousands of miles.

The theory of "wave forecasting" has been worked out by the University of California's Scripps Institution of Oceanography. The system is based on the complex relationship between wind and wave characteristics.

The engineers used Abbotts Lagoon at Point Reyes, Cal., and Clear Lake to confirm their theory. Now, with wind data from weather maps and forecast graphs, the Berkeley engineers are able to predict the height, length and time of arrival of waves at many distant points.

FORECASTS ACCURATE

To make wave forecasting more accurate, they checked 371 forecasts over a nine-month period against actual results recorded at Point Sur, Cal. Another 301 forecasts during an eight-month period were compared with records on instruments at Heceta Head, Ore. Johnson said the predictions turned out to be remarkably accurate.

Besides being a valuable warning to marine operators and an aid to planners of amphibious military operations, Johnson points out that the wave study can be put to use in any particular locality. Wave studies would be particularly valuable to persons designing shore structures and to trans-oceanic shipping and air routes.

More wave recorders are being installed on the California and Washington coasts and at Guam. The instruments are installed 60 feet below the water surface and keep a constant record of every variation of the sea.

Modern Women Crooks Petty Compared to Former Operators

By HARRY HARRIS

PHILADELPHIA (NANA).—The glamor—if it ever had any—has gone out of crime. Women crooks, who used to be ingenious and daring, are now run-of-the-mill. That's the belief of veteran sleuths.

Today, they report, women criminals are usually small-time operators—pickpockets, shoplifters, dishonest servants and sneak thieves. But not many years ago, women were pacesetters of crime.

Fortunately for the public, say these detectives—operatives of the Pinkerton Detective Agency, which is currently celebrating its 100th year—the really big-time female crooks of the gaslight era and the turn of the century appear to lack 1949 counterparts.

Why? What has happened to yesteryear's skirted scalawags? One detective offers this theory: "The dearth of major-league women crooks at present may be due to the fact that modern business offers women opportunities to direct their audacity toward socially worthwhile goals."

THEY'RE STILL AROUND

But although they're not as daring and clever these days, women criminals have by no means vanished from the contemporary scene. "Their participation, directly or indirectly, in criminal activities, though not as extensive as men's, is nonetheless substantial," says Robert A. Pinkerton, president of the famous sleuthing organization.

"Among professional criminals, the ratio of women to men is probably about one to eight. As to skill, there is little to choose between the experienced female crook and her male counterpart.

"Direct participation in crime by women occurs most frequently in the fields of shoplifting—in which they far outnumber the men; also sneak thefts, cheque swindles, insurance frauds, confidence games and allied crimes.

"Indirectly, of course, women are often responsible for crime because their demands for luxury or entertainment force men to break the law."

BIG-TIME EXPLOITS

But in general, today's women malefactors cannot in any way compare to their sisters of yesteryear, whose lurid exploits qualify many for inclusion in any hall of criminal fame.

There was, for instance, Elizabeth Bigley, whose wholesale swindling caused the failure of three banks.

Claiming that she was the illegitimate daughter of the steel tycoon, Elizabeth persuaded the head of a bank in Oberlin, O., to lend her $340,000 on the basis of two fraudulent notes signed "Andrew Carnegie."

When a Massachusetts banker sued her for failing to repay a loan of $190,000, creditors converged. Her flight to New York, where she was promptly arrested, caused the failure of the Oberlin Bank and precipitated "runs" on two other banks, causing their failure also.

Imprisoned, Elizabeth refused nourishment or medicine and wasted away. Believed penniless, she was saved from a pauper's grave by her son. Subsequently, bank books came to light showing sizable deposits in various banks, including more than $300,000 in one account in Pittsburgh. The money was confiscated.

CAREER OF CRIME

Amelia Everts, daughter of a Philadelphia policeman, has been called "the most notorious confidence woman of modern times." Born in 1876, she worked briefly at a Frankford hosiery mill, but at 15 embarked on a career of crime which included swindling and forgery.

In 1921 she bought a bungalow near Newfield, N.J., and became active in church work, coincidentally suggesting she had "inside" information on the stock market and offering to invest for her neighbors. This scheme netted her more than $100,000.

She staved off exposure for a while by showing a $100,000 cheque signed "J. P. Morgan." Briefly in custody in Philadelphia, she was finally jailed in Newark in 1941. After she was sent to state prison for an 8 to 12-year term, three women prisoners at the city jail complained she had stolen their jewelry by persuading them to let her wear it "just for luck."

Beatrice Desmond, alias, May Churchill, who pretended to be related to Winston Churchill and was popularly known as "The Queen of Crooks," wound up a long career of robbery and blackmail as the operator of a Philadelphia disorderly house.

PROFESSOR LOSES

In New York in 1884, posing as "Lady May Avery," an English noblewoman and close friend of Mark Twain, she extorted $300,000 from a wealthy Columbia University professor. Later, in the role of a Salvation Army worker, complete with tambourine, she blackmailed a minister for $45,000.

It was estimated that her crimes netted her $3,000 a week, dissipated by luxurious living. When things grew too warm, she continued her career in London, Paris and Buenos Aires, going steadily downhill until her death at the Philadelphia General Hospital in 1939 after an operation.

Marion L. Dow, alias Carrie Morse, specialized in stock swindles, operated a "brokerage salon" for women only in Philadelphia in 1882. Promising to guarantee her clients against loss if they paid her 50 per cent of their profits, she succeeded in mulcting them of huge sums before the business collapsed and she was sent to Moyamensing prison for four and a half months.

Susanna Hill, despite more than 200 pounds, 60 years and ten children, managed to fleece wife-seeking men of more than $80,000 by mail. She received so many replies to "lonely hearts" ads that she was forced to run off replies on a duplicating machine. When a correspondent grew ardent, she would request traveling expenses to enable her to meet her postage-stamp beau. The post office finally caught up with her.

A MORONIC KILLER

Bonnie Parker was the partner of Clyde Barrow, the moronic killer who terrorized Texas and nearby states from March, 1932, to May, 1934. A cigar-chewing, two-gun moll, deadly with a rifle or revolver, she assisted in more than a score of holdups of banks, gas stations and stores and in a dozen murders.

At one time a posse of more than 1,000 men, including four companies of Oklahoma National Guardsmen, tried unsuccessfully to apprehend Bonnie and her boy friend. The job was finally accomplished — permanently — in 1934 by F.B.I. agents and Louisana deputy sheriffs.

Who Is to Keep Peace of the World?

By SIR DUFF COOPER

ONE aspect of the recent events on the borders of Israel and Egypt seems hitherto to have escaped notice. It will probably prove to be the most important of all.

For a long time Egypt, under the protection of Great Britain, has enjoyed peace. Recently Great Britain, yielding to the demands of Egypt, withdrew the troops that were giving her protection. Within a remarkably short space of time Egypt found herself at war.

With the rights and wrongs of that dispute I am not here concerned. Those who are concerned with them are so fully occupied with seeking a solution that they may be excused if they have overlooked the full significance of this extremely significant event.

BRITISH PROTECTION

Where the arm of Britain stretched out there was peace. The arm of Britain is withdrawn. There is war.

This is the first, but it is assuredly not the last event of its kind. When a mighty empire crumbles away, as the British Empire seems to be crumbling today, it is not followed by a period of peace and quietness. To expect it to be so betrays ignorance, which is widespread, as to how the British Empire came originally to be being.

The history of that Empire has never been properly written, and the ideas that exist about it, both in our own minds and in the minds of foreigners, are hazy in the extreme.

There are two schools of thought. One is favorable to the British, the other is hostile.

The former would have us believe that the British, inspired by the love of justice and the hope of progress, set forth as pioneers of civilization to carry these twin blessings into the darker places of the earth.

The other view, and the one more generally accepted, is that the grasping and greedy English, under the direction of extremely cunning, far-sighted and unscrupulous statesmen, succeeded by plotting, scheming, and, when necessary, waging aggressive war, in establishing this dominion over a vast portion of the earth's surface in order to exploit, for their own profit, the unfortunate inhabitants.

Neither view is correct. The British never wanted an empire and were surprised when they found they had got one. Chance played a large part in its construction.

HISTORY SIDETRACKS

If Charles II hadn't married a Portuguese princess, who brought Bombay as her dowry, the English might never have gone to India.

If the Khedive Ismail had been able to pay his debts and govern his people, the British might never have gone to Egypt.

When Captain Cook presented the vast and beautiful continent of Australia to the British Government they had so little imagination that they used it, at first, only as a penal settlement.

The English never wanted an empire, but, cheerfully accepting the taunt of Napoleon that they were a nation of shopkeepers, they did want to be allowed to get on with their business of keeping a shop.

Shop-keeping, however, becomes impossible if somebody is always breaking the windows and grabbing the goods. Wherever the English were doing business they demanded, therefore, peace and good government, and where these desirable conditions didn't exist they proceeded to impose them.

COLONIAL POSSESSIONS

The British attitude towards Colonial possessions could not be better explained than it was by Palmerston's celebrated simile with regard to Egypt. He had never wanted Egypt, he said, any more than any rational man with an estate in the north of England and a residence in the south would have wished to possess the inns on the North Road. All he could want would have been that the inns should be well kept, always accessible, and furnishing him, when he came, with mutton chops and post horses.

The Egyptian inn was ill kept. All the travelers are complaining. So the British, having first invited the French to join them and been refused, moved in and took over the management.

They remained there for almost half a century. All went well during that period. Peace and prosperity were the signs of the inn. Travelers found all that they required there, and the inhabitants grew rich.

When war devastated so much of the world, the frontiers of Egypt were protected and her ancient cities escaped bombardment. So when it was over the Egyptians bid their protectors be gone, and started to make war on their own.

The connection of the British with India is not dissimilar. When they found themselves there, as the result of a marriage settlement, they did not set about founding an empire, but started a trading company.

Clive, who ended by conquering part of the vast continent, had no intention of doing anything of the kind when he went there, was not even a soldier. He went, there as a clerk in the company's service, with little prospect of ever quitting his office stool.

Conditions in India, however, were such owing to the decay of a previous empire, that it was quite impossible to do business until order had been restored. So the British restored order, and throughout the period of their occupation they maintained it.

During the few months that have elapsed since the British evacuation, more people have fallen by the sword in India than during all the long years of the occupation.

If it be conceded, as it must be, that British intervention in other countries has usually been caused by the failure of the inhabitants of those countries to maintain law and order within their own territories, is there any reason to suppose that what they were unable to do in the past they are likely to prove able to do in the future?

THE NEW MASTERS

Can we believe that within a century or two the intricate art of self-government on democratic lines has been mastered by races who throughout their history—far longer than ours—have ignored it?

We, it is true, have tried to teach them this art, giving them an ever-increasing share of governmental responsibility, but nobody can pretend that our task is concluded, and that a form of government that has only within the last century been adopted in the greater part of Europe, with no very brilliant results, is likely henceforth to flourish in the ancient home of the Pharaohs and among the 99,000,000 devotees of the system of Caste.

If it is not certain, it is at least probable that the withdrawal of British influence in these and other countries will lead to the revival of tyranny, that tyranny will produce misery, and that misery will produce revolution and civil war.

But the question immediately arises, "Who is to intervene?" The answer to that question is likely to prove as fruitful a source of war are any of the dark clouds that today are threatening the world.

The Boy and His Dog

By GORDIE BARRETT

A GRIMY-FACED little tot, about five years of age, followed closely by a tiny Labrador pup, approached the wicket of the theatre, bought his ticket and slowly walked to the entrance. The manager of the theatre noticed the dog following his little master to the door, and stepped in front of them, blocking the doorway.

"And just where do you and your little friend think you are going, my boy?" he asked, a broad grin spreading across his face.

The little boy grinned sheepishly, exposing two gaps where his front teeth ought to have been, and shyly replied: "Me and my dog are goin' to see the pictures." With those words, he stepped behind the manager, and made to enter, the dog trying to wiggle between the legs of the man and follow the boy.

The theatre man stuck out his hands and detained the worried little pair. "Just a minute you two," he growled, trying to hide his amusement. "It isn't quite as easy as that. Little boys and girls aren't allowed to bring their pets into shows. It's against the law, or didn't you know that?"

The tiny boy's cheeks glistened as big tears welled up in his eyes, almost choking off his words as he pleaded, "Please, mister, couldn't I take Lucky in with me? His little shoulders shook slightly as he sobbed, rubbing his grimy little hands across his eyes, making the predicament more embarrassing for the manager.

MANAGERS ARE HUMAN

Wishing for a hole in the sidewalk to open and swallow him, the manager shook his head badly, and turned to close the door behind him, but the trembling voice stopped him. It would break the little one's heart if he just said "no," and just shut the door in the dog's face. He turned and looked down on the trembling pair.

"But my dog is only two years old, and if I tell him, he won't make any noise or cause any trouble." He looked despairingly at his canine pal as he spoke. Again his little body shook as he tried to hide his eyes and muffle his heart-rendering sobs.

The Labrador pup was also feeling down in the dumps. To look at the little thing, one would almost think he was crying his heart out, too, his head between his front legs. He would look up occasionally at the man who blocked his way, and catching his eye, he would drop his head.

The manager felt like kicking himself, but it wasn't in his power to let the two in together. "Gosh, sonny, you too, Lucky, I'm sorry, honest I am, but if you want your dog to see the show you'll have to get the permission of a policeman."

After the man had explained the meaning of the word "permission," the little fellow craned his neck up and down the street, striving to catch the eye of a kind-hearted member of the law, but as the old saying goes, when you want an officer of the law, you can't find one.

THE DOG OBEYS

Finally, his head bowed to hide his swelling red eyes, and knowing he couldn't take his pal with him, he beckoned him to a corner. The dog wouldn't budge. A little patting, soothing talk, shoving and dragging, and the dog lay down. With big brown eyes that almost pleaded, the little dog looked up at his tiny master, but to no avail. He had to stay there, he knew that now.

"Now you can't come in, Lucky," sobbed the boy. "You'll have to wait here for me until I come out, and I'll tell you what happened." The dog wagged his tail. "The man said he can't let us in together. I can go alone. I guess it's not his fault, 'cause he says I got to get a dog to say your age is okay or somethin'. Anyway, I can't find one."

A reassuring pat, a few sidelong glances, and the youngster disappeared into the theatre.

Two and one-half hours later, he reappeared, and there, curled up in a corner of the building, waiting patiently for his master, was Lucky. The dog bounded to his feet, wagging his tail. With the pup licking his master's hands, the two inseparable pals went strolling down the street, with the little one telling his dog all about the hero of the picture.

The manager's gaze followed them down the street until they were out of sight. "Sure wish I could have let them see the show together, but laws are laws." He shook his head from side to side as he turned to enter the theatre. "And they think this is a soft job. Why, I wouldn't want to go over that again for anything."

That's what you'd call loyalty in the first degree, isn't it? Dog is still man's best friend I'd say.

Oak Bay Seeks Pictorial Record

AN appeal for ancient photographs of Oak Bay by municipal officials has produced numerous interesting pictures taken "away back when."

While officials are interested in obtaining only pictures taken prior to 1900, many others have been submitted. It is hoped to compile a pictorial history of the municipality with the donated photos, which should be suitable for copying.

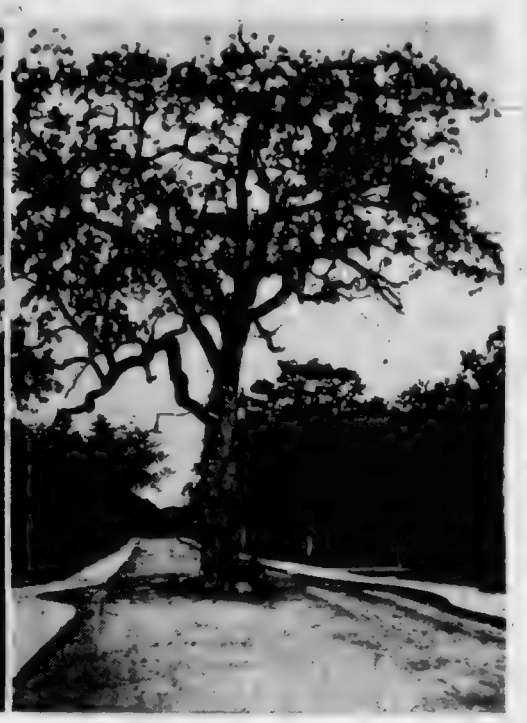
Nearing the 43rd year of its incorporation, Oak Bay now has a population of 11,500 compared with about 300 in 1906 when William E. Oliver, a lawyer, was appointed first reeve. There are 3,500 homes in the municipality now.

Many of the pictures already received are of the municipality's streets under construction. Equipment was awkward and was a far cry from the modern machines owned by Oak Bay today. In those days horsepower meant horsepower, the four-legged variety.

Oak Bay has longed claimed to be the best developed residential district in the country. Even when the municipality had been incorporated only a short time, zoning restrictions were such that homeowners were well protected.

If enough suitable pictures are collected, the municipality's pictorial history probably will be displayed in the municipal hall.

Construction of scenic King George Terrace is started by municipal workmen in 1915. Air drills were the chief weapon used to attack the massive rock.



This "traffic hazard of all hazards" was removed from St. David Street in the early twenties. The large oak tree would play havoc with modern traffic.

The March Of Science

By PAUL F. ELLIS
(United Press Science Writer)

SAN DIEGO, Cal. (UP).—A Wisconsin scientist has developed a device that can make a continuous recording of blood pressure and at the same time serve as a lie detector.

So a fibber, even when he is under the influence of anesthesia, may not be safe.

The new device is an automatic blood pressure recorder and was invented by Dr. Warren E. Gilson, assistant professor of medical electronics at the University of Wisconsin medical school. Previously, Dr. Gilson gained fame when he developed a "bullet finder" for treating wounded soldiers.

His blood pressure recorder operates on the same principle as the manual apparatus, using an inflatable cuff on the patient's arm. However, it was explained, the rising and falling of the blood pressure as the heart contracts and relaxes is recorded on a movie graph by a pen writer. A second pen writer is controlled by a stethophone, which picks up and records the intensity of the blood pressure sounds.

LESS DISCOMFORT

"The automatic recorder minimizes patient discomfort by sudden and automatic release of cuff pressure," Dr. Gilson said.

He said also that it's possible "to get an accurate and simultaneous record that may be kept and studied."

"The machine," he said, "can be set to take readings every 30 seconds, 60 seconds, five minutes, 30 minutes or on the hour. The doctor need not be in the room when the readings are taken.

HELPS ANESTHETIST

He recalled that studies have shown blood pressures jump when the doctor enters a hospital room.

He pointed out that the machine finds good use in the operating room by enabling the anesthetist to keep a check on the patient's blood pressure and heart action without abandoning his other duties.

Actually, the machine can be used to chart respiration and can be rigged for use as a lie detector.

However, in the case of most patients such lie-detection techniques are not planned.

Wakes and Wearin' o' the Green

By BARNETT McKINLEY

ABOUT this time every year my friend Michael O'Flynn starts to get a little savage in his attitude to the world in general.

As March 17, St. Patrick's Day, approaches he begins to voice complaints about the universality of the custom of wearing a bit of the green.

"It's getting," he complains, "so that everybody but the Irish are wearing the shamrock on St. Patrick's."

"I know," he says morosely, "because I've investigated. And last year the closest I came to an Irishman in an hour's search on St. Patrick's was a woman whose mother once saw the south of the island when she was crossing the Atlantic."

When Michael gets into this frame of mind I always try to cheer him up by pointing out that it is quite fitting for the rest of the world to pay tribute to Ireland by wearing a spot of green one day a year.

OF OTHER DAYS

Sometimes this restores him to partial good humor and he condescends to tell some of his own experiences on by-gone St. Patrick's Days.

"I've memories," he sighs, in reminiscent mood, "St. Patrick's means something to me for the way I've suffered in the past."

"There's the time," he'll say, "that I went to a wake of the man who wanted to be buried on St. Patrick's Day."

"It was March 15 when I started out with a friend on the way to that wake, which was being held for Terence O'Neill who had died just that morning. Neither of us knew the deceased personally, so our sadness was tempered by a more general melancholy brought on by reflections on the fleeting nature of our existence.

"It's true that on our way we stopped once or twice for something to help us bear our burden of woe, and so it was we got lost, having never been quite sure of our exact destination in the first place.

"At last we were forced to the extremity of climbing up the front steps of houses and peering in windows in the hopes that we could catch a glimpse of Terence O'Neill's coffin. But we had no luck for some time, though once my friend let out a cry of triumph when he peeked in someone's parlor window and saw a piano.

"Before I could stop him he marched gravely into the house intent on paying his respects. He was out again a moment later with his hat on his chest.

"I never knew the O'Neill in life," he remarked with awe, "but I'll say one thing for him—he had a grand set of teeth."

SCENE OF A WAKE

"However," Michael usually continues when telling his story, "despite my friend's lack of judgment, we eventually arrived at the scene of the wake. And there we had to stay for nearly two days, because the funeral was not until the morning of the 17th, in accordance with the wishes of the departed.

"So the morning of St. Patrick's found us all at the cemetery and all in a subdued frame of mind as was suitable to the solemnity of the occasion. My friend was almost over-subdued, what with going without sleep and the deep sorrow that was on him.

"But he brightened up when the service began and visibly showed that he was following the ceremony with full appreciation of its sentiment.

"Indeed at the closing words of the service, 'The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away,' it was my friend who called forth in answer:

"Now what the dickens could be fairer than that?"

Michael always reverts to his feeling of animosity when his St. Patrick's story is done.

"That's more like the way the day should be celebrated," he says firmly.

"And is a thing that the non-Irish could never understand if they wore green all year."

Model for Flood Control

By G. E. MORTIMORE

SOME time soon, the Fraser River will flow across the University of British Columbia campus. There will be no rush to man the dikes, though. This river will be junior size.

Work on an outdoor scale of the Fraser's lower reaches will be under way by Summer, says Professor E. S. Pretious, of U.B.C.'s civil engineering department.

The project has been undertaken by the National Research Council for the Federal Department of Public Works. U.B.C. will co-operate.

The model will be an exact reproduction—with real water—of the Fraser from New Westminster to the Strait of Georgia, taking in both the main stream and the north arm. It will not be used for flood prevention research, but to obtain information to be used for improving navigational channels.

As far as possible, materials used will be the same as those in the Fraser's banks and bed. Tides at the mouth will be simulated by an elaborate machine. Varying the flow to match the seasons, researchers will study silting and erosion.

Exact scale of the model has not yet been decided upon, and Prof. Pretious declines to predict how long the project will take to complete.

A crew of men under John D. Lee, superintendent of buildings and grounds, has cleared bush from a plot of land 300 feet wide by 350 feet long.

Building scale models is nothing new for Prof. Pretious. He planned the model of Hell's Gate on the Fraser, recently made at University of Washington for International Fisheries Research Board.

Uranium Finds on Superior Lure Prospectors to North

By W. R. DALGLEISH

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (UP).—Along the bleak north shore of Lake Superior and through the rocky Agawa Canyon west of here, small groups of silent men are waging a battle for position. Clad in fur-lined parkas and snowshoes, they are fighting against time.

For the magic word "uranium" has roused the interest of prospectors who have come here from all parts of Canada and the United States. The romance of mining in Canada is being revived. It is reminiscent of the great gold rush days of the late 1800's.

The struggle now in progress is to stake claims and have them recorded while a thick blanket of snow makes it easier to cover the rugged country on foot. When Spring comes, thick underbrush and sharp jutting rocks will make walking through the bush more difficult.

Gains in the wintry struggle are indicated by freshly-hewn claim posts and white-lined squares on the map in the mining recorder's office here.

NEW FINDS REPORTED

The arrival of Spring in the Algoma district will mean the start of concentrated efforts by explorers to "prove" the uranium deposits they have claimed.

The mass staking scramble, which started last Fall with the discovery of uranium at Theano Point in the Lake Superior region, recently gained fresh impetus with reports that rich radio-active ores have been found north of Bruce Mines, 40 miles each of here. More than 100 claims have been recorded in the new area.

Now, more than 100 square miles of staked land has been recorded. This land is potentially rich in the most vital of all mineral resources.

At present, because of Winter conditions, the battle here is one of position. No attempt is being made to discover exactly what lies under the snow. Enough preliminary prospecting was carried out in the Autumn to indicate where the main "breaks" were located. Stakers are interested now merely in locating somewhere near these zones. When Spring comes, prospectors, geologists, and mining men will flock to explore their holdings.

The uranium discoveries are less than 100 miles north of this border city. Because of the short distance, age-old methods of prospecting have gone by the board.

ANYBODY'S GAME

Prespectors of the old school eked out an existence by trapping or logging in the Winter. During the Summer, they spent their savings in search of ore deposits.

Today, it's anybody's game. The sky is the limit. Even a man with small starting capital can get into the deal.

The proximity of the deposits to civilization has eased the transportation and outfitting problem, which was a prime consideration of prospectors in the Northwest Territories. Then, many an experienced man starved or died of exposure.

Here today, any prospector with a good thumb can hitch-hike within a mile of the original discovery made at Theano Point. Five dollars for train fare will take anyone to within a few yards of the first discovery in the Agawa Canyon. They were found in a rock-cut directly on the rail line.

The nearness of the deposits to cheap rail and water transportation not only has attracted a great many prospectors, but has interested men with capital. The local board of trade already has been flooded with inquiries about business opportunities.

John McCombe, veteran geologist and mining engineer, enthusiastically rescribes the Algoma area as having the world's greatest uranium potentialities. He is regarded as a man who knows most of Ontario as well as the average man knows his own garden.

Canada already ranks second in the world, next only to the Belgian Congo, as uranium producer. Most production, however, has been in the northwestern area of the country.

The Lighter Side

TAN

Swedish Farmer Gunnar Andersson was returning home from a meeting of the village school one night recently, when there was a flash of white light 200 yards away, then a strong, hot wind blew over him. A shooting star had fallen. Andersson thought this was an augury of good luck and went home to bed. Next morning, when he woke up, the Swede found he was "sun" burned. Stockholm Professor Lindblad, to whom the farmer was sent by his doctor, says the light of meteors can indeed tan—but that Andersson was the first man in the history of medicine who had suffered such an accident.

LESSON

An East African tribal chief has given British colonial administrators a lesson in ancient history. In a letter to the newspapers protesting the ban on killing lions, despite their slaughter of native cattle, Chief Mutanga accused the authorities of "behavior akin to the tyrants of Imperial Rome." The classical reference sent the Britishers scurrying to the library where they learned that Emperor Commodius had indeed issued a similar edict in 192 A.D. A great frequenter of the gladiatorial exhibitions, the emperor banned the killing of lions in Africa so as to have plenty always available for the Roman arenas.

RIP

Is Jack the Ripper still living? The Whitechapel Sadist was never arrested for the murder of six women toward the end of the last century. Yet when a London theatre recently put on a sketch burlesquing Jack the Ripper, the management received a letter signed by the criminal which Scotland Yard handwriting experts say compares closely to the notes Jack pinned to his victims. There is no cause for panic, however: the dread knife murderer would be at least 80 if he is still alive.

RED SCARED

A Russian diplomat heard rumors of an impending reshuffle, and so as to have an ally on the spot, he sent his cook home to Moscow, ostensibly to obtain more Soviet delicacies for the Embassy larder. He arranged that the cook would keep an ear to the ground and report on the Ambassador's new assignment, mentioning the specialty of the nation to which he was going to be sent: Rice if he was to go to China, whisky for Britain, snails for France, tamales for Mexico, etc. The cook's telegram arrived at long last from Moscow. But the Ambassador blenched when he read the one word: "Caviar."

What Are Communists Planning in Britain?

By An Ex-Communist

LONDON.—To those who follow the twists and turns of Communist tactical policy there was no startling revelation in the announcement by Mr. Arthur Deakin, secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union, of a Communist plan "to secure an interruption of work on a fairly considerable scale" in the United Kingdom in August.

The only new point was the date, coinciding with a "fairly considerable" interruption of work in that month due to the fact that a large proportion of the population will be enjoying themselves at the seaside. Quite obviously the "chaos and confusion" refered to by Mr. Deakin has been the target of the Communists in Britain ever since their London daily organ switched over between its first and second edition on November 20, 1947, from support of the Government's policy of increasing production to its present line of encouraging and fomenting strikes and slow-downs.

THE SAME PATTERN

Throughout the world the pattern of Communist action is the same: only in the depth of its coloration does it vary. In China, a war involving millions; in Burma, where the Communists are in armed rebellion; in Indonesia, where they made an attempt to overthrow the Republican Government; and in Malaya, the color is red with seas of blood. There is less bloodshed in France and Italy, but in accordance with national temperaments, Communist-led strikes and demonstrations are accompanied by sabotage, violence, and fights with the police. (The phlegmatic British worker has to be led more gradually to appreciate the beauty of the Great Design, so the hues are somewhat toned down, and, for the moment, human gore is not among the ingredients.

SOUL OF ZHDANOV

Thus the Communists apply in their own countries the line laid down by Andrei Zhdanov in his report to the Cominform at its formation conference in the Autumn of 1947. Zhdanov's body lies mouldering in its Kremlin grave (unless he was embalmed, like Lenin), but his soul goes marching on. His thesis was that the world's workers, and their temporary allies, the nationalist and peasant movements in colonial and "backward" countries, must be mobilised against "aggressive American imperialism."

It is part of the Communist dogma today that the United States is preparing war against the Soviet Union and the "popular democracies." What looks to others like efforts to secure peaceful prosperity by rehabilitating war-battered countries, are to the Communists moves connected with the establishing of bases for future anti-Soviet war.

Undoubtedly, of course, anti-Communism and fear of Soviet expansion have played their part in the putting across of the Marshall Plan. But more important is the fact that it is an act of enlightened self-interest on the part of the United States. For one thing, prosperous European markets are necessary to continued American prosperity. The Communists, however, represent it as being aimed exclusively at securing American domination over Western Europe for the purposes of a future anti-Soviet war. A parallel with Hitler's accusations of "encirclement" by Britain and France will occur to many.

THE MARSHALL PLAN

Zhdanov took the line at the Warsaw conference of the Cominform that the Communists must campaign for the "sovereign independence" of their countries, threatened by America. And that the greatest danger to this "independence" in Europe was, of course, the Marshall Plan.

Since a massive contribution to the plan by Britain is of vital importance to its success, the Communist Party of Great Britain is assigned the task of keeping that contribution as small as possible. That this means wrecking production, reducing the value of the worker's wages and threatening his rations, does not worry the party that in 1940, when Britain chose to fight on "if necessarily alone" against the greatest military power in the world, held that the war was an imperialist adventure whose outcome was of little interest to the workers.

Unofficial strikes are only one element, if perhaps at present the most important, in the Communist scheme. Another is the creation of the mob. There was a time when the London mob played its part in national affairs—when, for example, the Gordon rioters in 1780 pillaged Roman Catholic houses and chapels. But education and the vote destroyed the mob. The Englishman is a great believer in free speech, in listening to what the other fellow has to say. To walk on the streets behind a banner is not his idea of political action; still less does he like the idea of breaking up the other man's meeting.

MOB ATMOSPHERE

There can be little sympathy among the masses of non-Communists here for Sir Oswald Mosley. Were it not for the Communist-inspired counter-demonstrations to his meetings hardly anybody would take any notice of him. The idea behind the counter-demonstrations has little to do with Mosley's little band of neurotic anti-Semites, however; it is part of a deliberate program of building up a mob atmosphere. The frequent appearance in The Daily Worker of headlines like: "Workers Shout Down . . ." is another symptom. These spontaneous outbursts of indignation at wicked warmongering, anti-workingclass utterances have always been carefully planned well before the speaker opened his mouth, with the boo-leaders artfully placed in the audience.

And then there is the "Peace" campaign, aimed as much at pacifist-inclined intellectuals, students, and middle-class people as at the workers. The object is the plugging of the idea that the United States is a menace to peace and that Conservative, Liberal and Labor leaders are all warmongers.

It is certain that none of these parallel campaigns will win support of Communist aims by more than a small minority of British people. The party strength of the C.P.G.B. is supposed to number only one in 1,000 of the country's population, and if its influence is wider and some of its most competent men are in key positions in the trade unions, it is still disliked by the mass of the people.

But it should be remembered that in no country where it was not running the elections itself has a Communist Party ever secured a majority. Yet the Communists today rule a great area of the world's surface. The moral I leave to the reader.

Czechs Shy at Nationalizing Snakes

PRAGUE (UP).—Czechoslovakia's nationalization of private enterprise hit a small snag when it encountered a snake farmer, Dr. Frantisek Kornalik.

Kornalik keeps 800 poisonous snakes in pens in the basement of his three-story stone house on the outskirts of Prague. He and his 22-year-old son use the snakes' venom for neuralgia, rheumatism, arthritis, allergy and tumor medicines.

Two men with brief cases came to his house. They told him that they were from S.P.O.F.A. (the nationalised drug industry) and that his business now belonged to the state.

Their duty, they said, was to take an inventory of his business.

CENSUS TOO RISKY

"But they never did find out how many snakes I had—they were afraid to look into the pens," Kornalick said.

"My alligator, Honsa, was a real puzzle to the inventory takers," the short-white-haired chemist said. "First they nationalised him when they learned he was an experimental subject and that he drew a special meat ration.

"But they made him my private property again when they saw he slept under the kitchen table and was a family pet."

The officials were kept busy half a day counting the lizards, frogs and turtles which Kornalick keeps in pens in the hall, kitchen and on the stairway leading to his third-floor laboratory.

MAKES THEM SQUIRM

A few days later more officials with brief cases came to explain to Kornalick how the newly-nationalized business should be run.

They squirmed a bit when he fed the snakes some of the white mice he raises in a hall closet.

But they nearly bashed out of the door when he lifted a snake by the tail and showed them how to "milk" the venom into a jar.

After a few days, the authorities came back and told Kornalick he could run his own business. He could take a manager's salary out of the income from the sale of the medicaments, but the profits were to go to the nationalised drug industry.

WIFE GETS JOB

They couldn't decide what salary a snake-keeper should get, so they told Kornalik to borrow what he needed from the medicine income until a salary was set.

Mrs. Kornalik, a short, soft-voiced woman, said that she now has to help her husband because he is not allowed to hire any help. But she doesn't get any pay.

"I don't like snakes, but I have to be nice to them because they are our bread and butter," she said.

New Look at Southern Stars

By GEORGE MULGRUE

MOUNT Stromlo Observatory near Canberra, the Australian capital is to be equipped with a 74-inch reflecting telescope. When this is delivered, Mount Stromlo will be one of the world's great observatories, fifth in order of telescopic power, equal with Pretoria as biggest in the southern hemisphere and quite pre-eminent in observation of certain parts of the heavens.

Originally when the observatory was set up in 1923, it was exclusively for solar observation and called the Commonwealth Solar Observatory, but its scope has so broadened that the word solar has been dropped from its title. Its work in ionosphere study, for instance, is an important part of what has been done in that field of Australian scientists, an amount little, if any, behind that by the United Kingdom and the United States of America. The ionosphere or heavyside layer is a stratum of atmosphere anything from 80 to 300 miles from the earth's surface, which has been affected by the sun's radiations. It is important to us because it reflects radio waves, which would otherwise shoot off into space, and it must be studied because it is constantly changing its height, and at different heights has different effects upon signals.

RECORD OF RESULTS

Scientists work out its height in rather the same way as sailors sound the ocean by sending up a signal, and timing its return. The Mount Stromlo Observatory sends out a signal every 15 minutes, and has the world's longest continuous record of results.

This preoccupation with the ionosphere is, of course, a natural result of the observatory's solar work. There seems to be no doubt that the ionisation of the layer —hence its name—is affected by sun spots, and as a link in the chain of solar observatories which encircles the world, one of Stromlo's ordinary jobs is to watch the sun-spot cycle which runs its course every 11 years. The two lines of observation are complementary.

And for this purpose, Stromlo has natural advantages shared by hardly any other observatory in the world. It stands on a hill, 2,600 feet up in the southern tablelands of Australia, under what is a technically perfect sky. In 1947, there was a continuous spell of 14 absolutely clear days in succession, a phenomenal record in the astronomical sense.

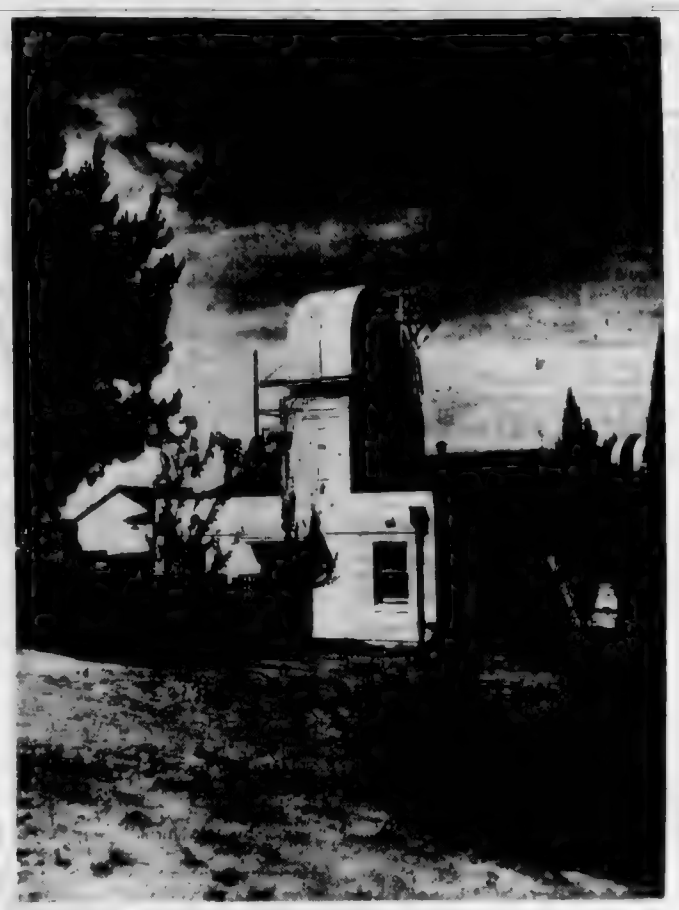
YOUNG DIRECTOR

Any institution must take its standing from the man who runs it, and Stromlo's director, although still a young man (he was born April 24, 1906), has an international reputation as an astrophysicist, specialist in the study of the physics of the heavens. Richard Wooley is an Englishman, son of a naval officer, who had part of his education in South Africa. After taking an M.Sc. at the University of Capetown, he went to Cambridge the the Mathematical Tripos, and later worked under Sir Arthur Eddington, who was professor of astronomy.

When the new telescope is installed in five years' time, Stromlo will be able to work on southern stars of less than the fifth magnitude, which have not been dealt with so far. Dr. Wooley also thinks that he will conduct research into the Magellanic Clouds, those starry condensations that look like detached portions of the Milky Way. These have never been studied with a large instrument before.

It will be the most up-to-date instrument in existence. On his way to the Zurich conference, Dr. Wooley called in and used the Pretoria 74-inch reflector, and made up his mind what he would have in the similar instrument he was to order in England. It will be completely automatic, with every movement, even down to the opening and closing of the shutter, controlled by a few small buttons on a desk.

Mr. Stibbs Adjusts the Sighting Telescope of the 30-Inch Reflector



One of the Observatory towers. The Observatory has a sun telescope, a 30-inch reflector, and a 48-inch reflector from Melbourne Observatory, now being installed. In England there is being built a 74-inch reflector which will be, when it is installed, the fifth biggest telescope in the world.

Five Merchants From Shanghai

By MURIEL CORDEAUX

China is a country of extremes and opposites, and to fully understand what is taking place there it is necessary to understand at least something of these apparent contradictions.

The number five in Chinese ideology is the most significant number, and it is also a number of extreme opposites, bad and good. Whether the number in any specific instance is good or bad is always determined by contributing factors.

The fifth moon in the Chinese calendar is the Dragon moon. Now this fifth month is considered the most dangerous and the most difficult of the whole year, but on the contrary the symbol of the dragon is one of the highest symbols of protection and good fortune.

At dawn on the "terrible Fifth" the mothers of those precious sons carefully tie five different colored threads round the wrists of the children. These threads symbolise the five noxious insects, conveyors of disease, and so often death in the terrific heat of the fifth month. Exactly at noon these threads are cut off and thrown away and the mothers are quite happy and confident that in the "throwing away of evil" symbolized by the threads that they have absolutely protected their sons against plague and all other misfortune.

GOOD AND BAD

Over and over again we come across this number five in Chinese folk lore and in their writings and records, but always with the polarization of opposites, the good and the bad. The Chinese calendar is divided into five seasons, there are the "five sneers" in rural ideology or the five destructive animals, the fox, the badger, the weasel, etc., and at the opposite end we find scattered all over China small shrines dedicated to the spirit of foxes.

The sending to Nanking from Shanghai some weeks ago five men to discuss peace terms with the Communist leaders was extremely significant. If this mission had failed these five would have quietly returned, and we should have heard no more about the matter for some time to come, and among themselves the Chinese would have "saved face" by the fact that the number five was a bad number.

I waited anxiously to hear whether they returned or whether a double five peace mission would be sent to Nanking, and the news came to us a week or so ago. Ten more men had left Shanghai to go to Nanking to talk peace with the Communists. This makes three groups of five men who are today in Nanking discussing peace, and as in all ancient cults and systems of tabulation the numeral three is the number of fruition, the strong probability is that in the next three months we shall hear that a definite peace has been established between the Kouming-tang and the Communist forces, and we can look for a renewal of trade relations with China on a much larger scale than have ever been enjoyed before. This because the youth of China is awake today to the vast advantages of the western world and a democratic way of life.

THE FUTURE CHINA

Chinese I have talked with here in Canada and in San Francisco, Los Angeles and New York realise that their country must be opened up by a modern system of railways, by the building of good roads; that their vast and extremely rich and practically unexplored natural resources must be developed; they know that the havoc wrought by plague and famine, by drought and flood can and must be controlled by modern methods, and to this end they are for the most part ready and willing to welcome co-operation and help from the western world, but never again will China be a country which will willingly submit or endure the iron heel of the oppressor or the commercial exploiter. Today China is awake, and very wide awake and aware, and this same awareness can be of the greatest benefit to the whole world provided that she is approached with the respect due to her as an extremely ancient people, albeit a people who through fear engendered by the western world, have fallen behind in the march of the nations.

When peace is established in China it is to be devoutly hoped that it will be the privilege of the Western democracies to assist China to bridge the gap of the centuries, to guide her first uncertain footsteps over the long bridge of thousands of years until she stands firmly upon the rock of the modern commercial world. But it is in the understanding of China and her problems that we as Western democracies must take our part, not again as exploiters of her country and her people, but as a wiser and older brother. In this manner we can at least greatly assist to establish the peace of the world which we so pray will last for many hundreds of years.

I Sampled Their Movies

By HAROLD ALBERT

A RAINY Saturday night in Naples, I had three hours before catching the boat to Capri and a great placard of Danny Kaye beamed at me from the largest theatre. Seats in all parts from 10c to $1.00. Hard seats at that, and hard programs.

I didn't mind the hard benches. I didn't mind the usher standing beside me, muttering, till I had tipped him. I didn't object to the three advertising films, each followed by an interval. Since I'm a non-smoker, I didn't even object to the ban on smoking upstairs and down.

When Danny Kaye appeared at last, he was speaking fluent Italian. The film had been dubbed, but the voice sounded amusingly like Danny and they at least allowed him to sing in his own language. But when the picture itself was interrupted, not by two intervals, but by three, I walked out!

North American movie-goers in all the large towns and cities should thank their stars for the comfortable cinema around the corner, the cheerful coming-and-going, the convenience of continuous performances, and the luxury of the whole show.

MOVIES IN FRANCE

When a Frenchman wants to take his girl friend to the movies, he goes to the cinema to get his tickets several hours in advance, for box office prices rise steeply by as much as 50 per cent for the evening performances. Separate houses are the rule, and if you get more than a two-hour show, you're lucky. Tips for the usher go without saying, and the intervals, if less frequent, are no less customary.

In the smaller French towns, the operator shuts off his light between reels and adjourns to the nearest cafe, and the audience follows. A strident bell like an alarm clock rings in the foyer just before the program starts and restarts, and the audience files back to see the next installment of the film.

SCREEN IN BERLIN

If you were a Berliner, you couldn't go to the cinema if you wished, on weekdays, before 8 or 9 o'clock, and you wouldn't be allowed to smoke anywhere inside. If you left during the performance you would be bad-mannered. You could laugh or cry as much as you like — Berlin folk are among the most rapturous audiences in the world—but you would have to make do with only one feature film and no others.

Once a Berlin cinema performance has begun, the place becomes like a sepulchre. The lights in the corridors are extinguished and gloom seizes the long foyers, with their crimson drugget carpeting.

But this is a postwar Europe. In dozens of smaller towns, there is no show at all. Film fans must wait for the weekly performance when a screen is rigged up in a barn or a hotel.

In Switzerland, I know one little place which makes shift without films all through the Summer. In the Autumn the water is drained from its swimming pool and a canvas awning is set up to keep off the rain overhead. Through the whole of the Winter the audience stamp their feet in ecstatic applause.

Poland is sometimes so cold in Winter that a girl wheels round steaming jugs of coffee, otherwise the audience might never manage to survive the film.

IN THE OPEN AIR

Greek cinemas are in the open, and if you fancy a peach during the performance, you can nearly always reach up and pluck one from the branch above your head! The golden youth of Corinth or Athens may pay anything from 10c to 50c for these idyllic shows, but there are always eager small boys willing to make and sell peep-holes in the enclosing screens.

The closed cinemas are brought into use in the Winter and nobody bothers about general releases. A film is passed on from theatre to theatre till nobody wants to see it any more—until, indeed, it is practically impossible to see. Nobody worries about the sound track. Greece has only a small cinema industry of her own and the conventional dubbing or titling in French, German or Italian is about as meaningless as an English sound track run through backwards.

A GUESSING GAME

Almost all the names of film stars are tongue twisters to the Athenian and the nicknames in vogue form a guessing game to any visiting tourist. When you hear that the fat funny man and the thin funny man are round the corner, you have to use your wits—or do you?—to know that the pair in question is none other than Laurel and Hardy.

Sweden, on the other hand, takes her movies seriously, and goes in for printed programs. Yet here again there's a good reason. Stockholm has more cinemas, with its 600,000 inhabitants, than Paris, with 6,000,000, because Sweden is movie crazy. Yet, as far as I can discover, the land of Ingrid Bergman and Greta Garbo has no fan magazines and details of film stars' private lives seldom appear in Swedish print. Frenziedly collecting programs, the screen-lovers of Sweden are exhibiting their repressions.

With the present day continental film often so serious and so finished, there's no puzzle more perplexing than Europe's movies. Some of Hollywood's best technicians are drawn from Europe. Perhaps there we've hit it. The continental prefers to amuse himself rather than be amused. He sits in a cafe. He plots and dreams. He may even be thinking out new ways of making movies.

Hail a Cab Driver in Paris; End Up With Fight Over Fee

By JUDY BARDEN

PARIS (NANA).—Few people go to Paris without having at least one fight with a cab driver, an affray more hectic than those in New York or London. The language isn't any help. A Frenchman can talk faster and work himself into a bigger fury than anyone else in Europe.

Rarely do you get into a cab without hearing, "Can't take you there. It is too far and it is nearing my lunch time." Cab drivers here are always "nearing" something—breakfast, lunch or dinner. If you find one who takes you anywhere with a smile, you're apt to be so grateful that you give a ridiculously large tip.

Leaving a fashion house one day, I hopped into a cab, giving the address of my hotel. The driver groaned but started. When we arrived, the meter said 85 francs. That didn't mean a thing. Prices have gone up in Paris, but no new meters have been installed. To that 85 francs you should add about a third and include a tip.

NOT SO GENEROUS

I gave the man 150 francs, which was generous, but apparently not generous enough. He screamed, waving his arms around and throwing the money to the ground where it remained. Leaving his cab, he tore through the revolving door of the hotel after me.

Then followed one of the loudest brawls imaginable. Had it happened in any other country, a crowd would have collected, but in Paris nobody takes any notice of such things. He wanted 400 francs.

Only when I told him I would call the police if he didn't shut up did he leave, getting into a long argument with the doorman who had picked up the 150 francs from the street.

Black marketeers are just as annoying. A man will walk a block side by side with you, saying, "I can give you a good rate for your dollars." If you tell him you have no dollars, he ignores the remark. Threatening to call the police is again the only remedy.

In th Rue Rivoli, a young man stood in my path. I told him to get out of my way or he would be smacked on the nose. He just laughed and said, "Come and have a drink. I'll give you 500 francs for every dollar you have." The official rate that day was about 300 to the dollar.

I hadn't been in the hotel half an hour before a heard a knock on the door. In came a man. "I heard you had arrived," he said. "I thought I could help with a little money transaction." He talked as if we had known each other for years.

He was easy to get rid of. A word on the telephone to the desk downstairs would have resulted in his quick removal.

The French police have decided to visit all large hotels, asking foreigners where they changed their money. I wonder what their reaction would be if they were told, "I changed it on the street in an effort to rid myself of some nasty-looking character."

Falls in Love: Prince Turns to Apeman

By WEBSTER FAWCETT

FIFTY years ago the hand of a farmer's young and beautiful daughter was eagerly sought by all the young rural bloods of the many vineyards in the Carpathian Mountains of Austria.

The sequel came recently when a wizened and ugly beggar woman, prematurely worn out at 68, died in a Warsaw workhouse. Between these two extremes lies a story of folly and wilfulness.

Pretty Wilhelmina grew tired of the admiration of rosy cheeked, but romantic, young men whom she coldly described as rustics. Her heart yearned for the magical excitements of Vienna, then at the height of its fame as a city of waltzes and love.

One night she ran away from her father's sparsely furnished farm, taking nothing with her but a few clothes wrapped up in a bundle and two gold pieces. Little did she realize that she would one day become an archduchess, or that her beauty and escapades would carry her name into every European capital.

Before long she was living as gay a life as she had ever desired. Even though the pay was scanty the officers of the Imperial Army saw to it that lovely ladies never waited long for entertainment.

Then one night white-gloved Count Otto von Freutenberg focused his young but weary eyes through his opera glasses at Wilhelmina as she danced in the chorus and promptly sent a note round to the back of the theatre inviting the "first row —third along" out to supper. Before very long Wilhelmina had adopted the fashion of the day, and was living under the Count's protection, and at his expense. Their strange love affair lasted a few months. Then the young lady cracked a champagne bottle over the young man's head and went to live with another member of the Austrian aristocracy.

She had taken good care that he occupied a better position in society than Count Otto. Before very long she found herself introduced to none other than the Archduke Leopold, who was a relative of the Emperor himself and brother of the Crown Princess of Saxony.

To the lilt of a Strauss waltz a few nights later he called her his soul-mate and made his proposal.

A DARING MOVE

Madcap Wilhelmina tilted back her head, gazed at him disbelievingly, but none the less ordered the band to play the "Wedding March," while she strutted the length of the ballroom on the arm of her beau.

The next day her flat was invaded by officials of the secret police. Had the Archduke really offered her marriage? Where were her proofs? Whether she had them or not, she had better leave the country!

Wilhelmina roared with laughter. She was no man's wife, she declared, and certainly had no intention of marrying funny Leopold.

This was very disarming, but Prince Leopold insisted that Wilhelmina should marry him, and was not ashamed of telling the Emperor himself that he intended to marry a former chorus girl.

"Ridiculous fool!" roared the Emperor. "Disgrace your name and you lose your dukedom!"

"Very well, sire," said Leopold—and he went to Wilhelmina and once more pleaded with her. Wasn't it possible, he thought, that after their marriage the Emperor might decide to be lenient and their alliance would be forgiven?

When she murmured "Yes," arrangements were instantly made for the ceremony to take place at the cathedral at Vienna.

ALLOWANCE CUT

In retaliation, and as a precautionary measure, the Emperor stopped Leopold's $20,000 a year allowance. Wilhelmina was not at all put out. At a cafe on the Ring she opened a little bureau for royal charities and made sure that all the takings should come to her.

No sooner were they married than Leopold was deprived of his commission in the army. Then came word that Leopold had been deprived of his titles.

"Very well," cried Wilhelmina, "we'll give up everything."

BUT IN THE WOODS

In a hut in the Vienna woods the Emperor's relatives settled down to the simple life. Wilhelmina, except in Winter, wore few clothes and gambolled around the forest attired mainly in leaves.

She forbade Leopold to shave, and stories soon began to circulate of a gorilla that had been seen in the woods at night. Once the unfortunate former Archduke was chased by a hunting party by mistake.

In three years Leopold was practically covered with hair, and had become loathsome in appearance.

But presently he recovered from his infatuation. He went back to Vienna, visited a hairdresser, and then started divorce proceedings. He was successful, but Wilhelmina had now grown too unruly to care.

She gave a series of "nature" balls that were even more sensational than they would have been today. Ordered to leave Vienna, she performed a sort of fan dance in the Continental theatres.

Monks Live Communal Life On Holy Isles of Finland

FINLAND is a country of waterways, but its largest stretch of water is the great Lake Ladoga. Here, on some 40 holy islands and islets 2,000 monks who have been outlawed from Soviet Russia are working out a successful communal life regardless of the troubled world.

From the forest lands of the islands the brothers secure adequate lumber and make resin and turpentine to export to civilization. Some monks work as bakers, others as carpenters and joiners. There are tailor monks, for robes and vestments, cobbler monks, blacksmith monks. There's even a co-operative store run by these Russian brethren, cut off from the Soviet, who flourish in Lutheran Finland.

As soon as visitors arrive by steamer at the largest island—it's 34 miles square—the black-robed brothers in their tall black cylinder hats are there on the quay to act as porters. They even run a hotel and a restaurant. And since they know that their visitors appreciate entertainment, they even stage a church service lasting 19 hours!

Yet another of Finland's strange communities is Mariehamm, the capital of lost ships. Commercial sailing ships of any size are no longer being built anywhere in the world—but Mariehamm is continually buying up the surviving veterans, reconditioning them and putting them into use.

Many nations still demand that active service on a windjammer shall be part of the work for a master's certificate, and so sailors come from all over the world to find service in the sailing vessels of Mariehamm.

The Mariehamm fleet has but one owner, who operates his business on amazingly simple lines. He is a one-man company, doing everything himself in his own home.

The Stamp Packet

By R. M. ANGUS

If you will only look deep enough you will find romance in most things, and the humble postage stamp is by no means an exception. There are stories of great interest, as full of action and human element as any you read of in fiction or romance, which stamps can tell for themselves. Little sidelights on stamps, which while they have nothing to do with the study of philately, stamp collectors can read from their albums.

Do you know why the canal which links the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, the Panama, is in Panama? Your stamp album can give you the reason. There were two possible routes for the canal to take, one through Nicaragua and the other through Panama, and each scheme had its supporters. One of the objections to the opponents of Nicaragua was that the area through which the canal must necessarily pass, was actively volcanic, which imputation was strongly denied by the Nicaraguan Government, and it appeared that a deadlock had been reached. Nicaragua had, however, issued several postage stamps showing their volcanos in active eruption, and some of these were purchased by a supporter of the Panama scheme who immediately foresaw that he had a weapon in his hand. A copy of one of the stamps was immediately sent to each of the United States senators, the United States Senate being the battlefield where the issue would be decided. With each stamp he enclosed a note saying: "Postage stamps of the Republic of Nicaragua. An official witness to the volcanic activity of Nicaragua." This immediately turned the scale in favor of the Panama route.

The little Republic of Latvia, on the shores of the Baltic, was established in 1918, and a stamp issue became imperative. Two stamps were issued, but the greatest difficulty was encountered in finding paper to print them on. The Germans, however, had left a lot of military maps behind them when they left Latvia. These were better than nothing, so the maps were taken to the printing works and the two stamps printed on the backs of them in December, 1918. Complete sheets, showing the whole map are uncommon today, but a few years ago they were plentiful; individual stamps are still quite plentiful and are only worth a few cents each.

* * * * *

Late in 1911 a new series of stamps were issued in India, each bearing the portrait of the King-Emperor, George V. There are two stamps in this set which differ in design, but are both of the same denomination, two and a half annas. If you examine the portrait very closely, you will find that His Majesty is in Coronation robes over which are a number of orders. One of these, fittingly enough, is the Order of the Indian Empire, the badge of which is an elephant. It was the elephant that caused trouble. It is necessarily very small in the reproduction on the stamp and, without a lens, you could be excused for not recognizing it as an elephant. That is what happened in India. The Hindus, thinking, no doubt, of the great Indian mutiny and the greased cartridges, immediately assumed that it was a pig, and therefore, a great affront to their religion. To us, it may seem a very childish matter, but with a very inflammable population, the Indian Government immediately saw the seriousness of the situation, and the stamp was withdrawn from circulation and replaced by another of similar value in 1913 which did not show the order.

* * * * *

Another occasion when the stamps had to be withdrawn because of a religious objection was in the Sudan in 1903. The first similar set showing an Arab mounted on a camel, bearing the mail across the desert were issued in 1898. These were printed on paper bearing a quatrefoil device as a watermark. This watermark was the cause of the trouble, not the design of the stamp. The Mahommedans were very much incensed and refused to use the stamps. They claimed the watermark portrayed the Sign of the Cross and that in licking the stamps to affix them to letters they were being made to commit an act of adoration to the Cross. So stamps of similar design were issued in 1903, but on new paper watermarked with the multiple crescents and stars, the sign of the Prophet, and the trouble was averted.

Facts on File

Common Diseases of Potatoes

By E. R. BEWELL, M.S.A.

THERE are a great many diseases which seriously affect the production of good potatoes. Probably the two which are of greatest concern at planting time are "Scab" and "Rhizoctonia."

Scab: Under this heading we have two species, "Common Scab" and "Powdery Scab." The latter is only found occasionally under favorable conditions of moisture and low soil temperature, and is of no economic importance to the average gardener or grower, so will be omitted from further discussion.

"Common Scab" is quite generally known and recognized by most gardeners and growers. Conditions favoring the development of "Scab" also assist in producing a potato of high quality, i.e., a good mealy potato. The appearance of "Scab" is undesirable, but its greatest offence is the loss in peeling.

"Scab" on seed potatoes can be killed by treating with various chemicals. The simplest and most effective treatment is dipping in Semesan Bel for one minute. Soaking in Formalin or Corrosive Bublimate for one to two hours are also recommended treatments.

REDUCE INFECTION

"Scab" develops in the soil where it is alkaline, i.e., has a high percentage of calcium or lime. It is encouraged by applying horse manure or chicken manure on the soil. Experiments have shown that by applying finely ground sulphur at the rate of 800 pounds per acre on sandy soil up to 1,000 pounds per acre on clay soils, will gradually reduce the infection carried over in the soil. Digging or ploughing in grass cuttings, compost, green crops or other forms of humus will produce acid on decaying, anything that produces acid helps to destroy the "scab" organism. It also has been found that by using acid fertilizers "Scab" is reduced in severity and kept under control.

"Rhizoctonia" is found in practically all soils in the northern temperate zone. It can be found in new land as it lives on most native vegetation. The potato is an ideal host and when planted in infected soils "Rhizoctonia" will develop quite rapidly. This disease prefers an acid soil, whereas "Scab" is more prevalent in an alkaline soil, and thus we are faced with the problem of keeping our soil as near the neutral point as possible in order to control both of these diseases.

TREATING SEED

"Rhizoctonia" is not generally as well known as "Scab." It is easily recognised on the tuber, however. The small black specks or spots up to one-quarter inch in diameter are thought by most people to be bits of soil adhering to the tuber. These specks or lumps are attached to the skin, and while they can be picked off with a knife or your fingernail, they will not wash off. Unless seed potatoes are treated to kill these spores, hairlike feelers sent out will attack the new shoots and eat them off below the surface of the soil. Often a potato will have to make three or four attempts to get a shoot above ground. Considerable damage often takes place in potato bins or sacks, especially if there is a high humidity, as the spores will attack the new shoots as the tubers sprout, causing the sprout tips to turn almost black instead of a healthy white.

If a plant is attacked after being well established, "Rhizoctonia" causes it to develop into a larger and more upright type of plant, also more open. In many cases it will produce aerial tubers. Where infection is severe the disease will girdle the stem underground, cutting off any connection with the roots. The plant will then send out a new root system and produce a new set of tubers above the injury. The potatoes are usually small, and misshaped when attacked by the fungus and the result is only pig feed. Large tubers usually develop knobs and are unmarketable.

SERIOUS DISEASE

From an economic standpoint, "Rhizoctonia" is one of our most serious diseases if not the most serious. The spores can be killed by dipping in a good dip such as Semesan Bel, but this only kills the spores on the tubers. As there is some infection in many soils, especially acid soils, I consider it a better plan to plant seed free of the "Rhizoctonia" spore, untreated, rather than infected seed that has been treated. Some control can be secured in cleaning up the soil by planting Fall rye or hairy vetch as the spores will not attack these plants, and they weaken and die out if they cannot secure their food from suitable plants. There are some chemicals that will clean up the soil, but the cost is prohibitive. Keeping land clean, i.e., free of vegetation, for a Summer, has also been found to greatly reduce the amount of infection in the soil.

An article on fertilizers will appear soon.

Sacred Trees In Victoria

By W. NEWTON
Plant Pathologist, Saanichton, V.I.

The Mulberry is generally accepted as a Biblical tree, but it is very doubtful if it has any real right to be so accepted. The tree is seldom seen in Judea and is comparatively rare in Galilee, although very abundant in Syria and the mountains of Lebanon. There is no doubt, however, that the beauty of Mulberry has led to the worship of the tree as something sacred. The legends suggest that the tree was accepted as the symbol of Eternal Love.

One story states, that Pyramus, who lived in Babylon, fell in love with Thisbe, a very beautiful virgin of that city. The attraction was mutual, but their parents forbade marriage, so the lovers regularly exchanged notes through a small crevice in the wall that separated the two houses. They agreed to meet at a given time at the tomb of Ninus, which was overshadowed by a white mulberry tree outside the walls of Babylon. Unlike her modern counterpart, Thisbe was first there, but the unlooked for arrival of a lioness frightened her away, and as she fled she dropped her veil. The lioness mouthed the veil and left it covered with blood from a recent kill. The lover soon after arrived, and upon finding the veil covered with blood, he concluded that Thisbe had been torn to pieces and carried off by wild beasts. Desperate with grief he stabbed himself. When Thisbe recovered from her fright she returned to the Mulberry tree, and there found her dying lover. The pledge of Eternal love was again exchanged and she fell upon the sword with which he had destroyed himself. The Mulberry tree was stained with the blood of the lovers and forever afterwards bore fruit of a blood-red color.

There are many beautiful mulberry trees around Victoria, but a few of them tend to be a little lobsided and top heavy. Horticulturists claim that the natural beauty of Mulberry is usually enhanced by staking to support the trunk during the first few years of its growth, and by pruning out a few of the uppermost branches to encourage a symmetrical development while the tree is small.

Thinning Out, Final Pruning To Put Energy in Roses

By GEORGE HEPWORTH
(Victoria Rose Society)

PRUNING is intended to put the energy of the rose plant into those branches and buds which can best use it, consequently, it includes two distinct operations, the first of which is thinning out, and the second is the final pruning.

Thinning out means completely removing all dead and undesirable wood and the cutting out the old stubs around the base of the plant. Spray the entire plant and the ground beneath with a dormant strength Bordeaux; this will kill most of the black spot and rust spores which lay dormant all Winter in the soil and attack the plant as the season advances. This operation should be carried out around March 1.

Final pruning should start about the middle of the month if your garden is located near salt water, the last week of the month if further inland. In the low areas, which get late frosts, the first or second week of April is early enough, because the frost will damage the tender new growth which is needed for Summer blooms.

Hybrid teas: Hard pruning consists of cutting all branches to two or three eyes, or within two to three inches of the ground. This kind of pruning will give you fewer, but more perfect blooms. Hard pruning should be used only when H.T. roses are needed for exhibition purposes. Moderate pruning consists of keeping a few more canes and leaving five or six eyes, or cutting five to six inches above the ground level. The tall varieties such as President Hoover, should be treated as hybrid perpetuals. Hybrid perpetuals, such as Hugh Dickson, George Dickson and Frau Karl Druschki, should be pruned to six or seven inches for hard pruning and 12 to 18 inches for moderate. Standard or tree roses should be treated the same as the bush roses of the same variety, taking care to keep the head rounded and well balanced. Polyanthas: Dwarf varieties need only thinning out and the light shortening of the remaining shoots. The more robust polyantha hybrid should be treated as a moderately pruned H.P. Shrub and species (the wild roses) need only an annual thinning of canes and the shortening of long shoots which are out of proportion with the rest of the plant. Climbing H.T. or large flowering climbers need little or no pruning and may be left to their natural habit. In course of time old stems may be removed, but the best flowers are on laterals which grow from the older wood, so that it is not necessary to renew the plant continually from the base, as is the case with many hardy climbers. When new canes are needed they may be preserved, otherwise it is better to keep the old wood and remove the new canes as they appear. Rambler type or Wichuraiana hybrids, such as Dorothy Perkins, Excelsa and others, should be pruned shortly after blooming. Unlike the larger flowering H.T., the rambler produces good blooms only on shoots from last year's canes.

All pruning cuts should be made on the slant and just above the eye — the eye being at the high side of the slant. The top eye of all pruned shoots should point in the direction the new shoot is to grow, which is usually away from the centre of the plant since it is desirable that the centre be kept open to the sun.

Cloche Gardening in March

By L. F. STRUTT

CLOCHE gardeners, like others, have been unable to do much in the way of gardening during the past month, but the benefits of cloche protection have been most apparent. Snow, followed by alternate thaws and frosts, have left outdoor plantings in an unhappy condition, yet under the cloches the crops appear little the worse and provide a striking contrast.

This is the busiest month of the year for the cloche gardener. There are many seeds to be sown, the first being broad beans, unless a Fall sowing was made. Beetroot, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, lettuce, peas, onions, radish, turnip will follow, and at the end of the month, if the weather is favorable, outdoor cucumbers and tomatoes.

Cucumbers do better when not transplanted. For the best results incorporate well-rotted manure, or compost, in the top nine inches of soil, sow three seeds in a slight mound and allow the best plant to grow on, pinching out the unwanted ones. Space the mounds about 30 inches apart. Lantern cloches may be used here in the early stages and are ideal for this work, especially when your barn cloches are in use finishing off the lettuce. Cucumbers, sown under lantern cloches in late March, require the large barn type by the end of April, and will fill these by May 24. The cloches may then be removed and used to cover cantaloupes.

Tomato seed may be sown either in a seed bed or where the plants are to mature. Temperatures above 60 degrees F. are required for germination, so choose a sunny spot, remembering always that your cloches cannot make heat, they can only trap it. For the latter reason it is also advisable to await a warm spell before seeding rather than work closely by the calendar. For the permanent planting, work in rotted manure, or compost, to a depth of 12 inches, and for the top two inches use a mixture of good loam, coarse sand and moist agricultural peat, just as you would when preparing a flat. Sow the seed one-quarter inch deep, several seeds to each hill, discarding the weaker plants later on. Make sure soil is sufficiently moist, cover with your lantern cloches. Plants may be protected by lantern cloches for about three weeks after germination, after which time the barn type will be needed because a sharp frost will damage the tender leaves if they are within one-half inch of the glass. Plants raised this way will not be as early as those started indoors with heat in January. However, you will have vigorous, hardy plants which have suffered no check from transplanting.

The Inside Story

By ANN PRINGLE

PLANNING YOUR HOME FOR A DEFINITE PURPOSE

Most women plan a wardrobe for a purpose — clothes for the office, for parties, for days in the country — but how many stop to think what purposes they want their homes to serve? It's just as important, maybe more so. If a dress doesn't suit, it can be discarded with less heartbreak and waste of money than a sofa, a table or a chair. Furniture just isn't expendable.

Here, therefore, is a quick course in predecorating preparation.

First, figure out how you spend most of the hours in the day. At the office? If so, and you haven't a raft of servants, you'll want a simple house, easy to take care of, with plenty of storage space—for mail you don't have time to look through in the morning, for packages that arrive just before the dinner guests and must be stored out of sight for a while, and for silver that you can't keep polished every day, but like to have around for festive occasions.

Do you do a lot of reading and desk work at home? Build the main room around comfortable armchairs, good reading lamps, a desk (or combination dining and work table, if space is at a premium), and be sure your colors are restful and relaxing; neutral tones with a few clear color accents.

People who entertain a lot should decide what kind of parties they like best. Big dinners and luncheons are most gracefully handled in a dining-room, but buffet and cocktail parties can fend for themselves in a living-dining-room. Still, there must be plenty of sitting space — preferably not single armchairs and the usual sofa, but rather, backless sofas (for perching on both sides), pull-up chairs, upholstered benches and perhaps some of those small stack-up chairs or stools that can be stored away until the next party.

If you think of your house as a showplace—a place for your daughter's wedding reception, for formal entertaining of important guests—you needn't worry too much about reading chairs and lamps. Put these in the den, and let the drawing-room be as formal as your heart desires.

But make up your mind. Don't have a French drawing-room just because you've always wanted one. If you won't ever in your life give a formal reception. And don't arrange a room for a whopper of a cocktail party if what you really like is a small group of friends gathered around a radio-phonograph. You wouldn't wear a dinner dress to a Saturday matinee—you know too well what to wear then. Use the same system in your home.

Pot Plants and Greenhouse

By W. L. ARNALL

TUBEROUS rooted begonias, in the single, double, crested and pendulous types, with their large range of colors, make lovely pot plants. They may be used in the greenhouse or conservatory, or to brighten a shady border outside. Seeds, planted from January to March in a mixture of soil, peat and leaf mould, will bloom in August and September of the same year. Water the pan well before planting, then scatter the seed evenly over the surface, covering with a piece of glass and a sheet of paper to prevent drying out. Transfer the seedlings to small pots when large enough to handle. The larger plants will bloom in the greenhouse in July, and the more backward ones may be used for bedding out and should bloom from August on. If they have not bloomed when frost is imminent, repot for later flowering in the greenhouse. Dormant tubers should be started in March or early April by placing them in a flat of light soil or sand which is kept moist, but not wet. Be sure to set the bulbs the right way up; the top is concave or indented, and the bottom is round. When the second pair of leaves have formed, pot into 4's or 5's in a rich soil, and grow on in a well lighted, airy position. For outside planting choose a north of east border protected from sun between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., and be careful not to disturb the root system when transplanting. In the Fall all tubers should be dug, dried and stored in a dry, cool place at 40-50 degrees F.

A Home of Refinement

Plan No. 1009—Few homes indeed have the charm and refinement that this one possesses in such liberal measure. Inside and out it reflects good taste. The owners deserve the credit—for the house is their idea.

With the exception of the living-room, no room could be called large—but each is a good shape. Notice that there are three bedrooms. Both upstairs rooms are equal in size and have two closets.

It will be noticed that there are two built-in corner cupboards in the dining-room, and a fold-away ironing board provided in the efficient, "U" shaped kitchen.

Some Questions and Answers

Q.—How can I be sure that tiles on my bathroom walls will not loosen and fall out?

A.—See that the tiles are applied with a special binder of pure cement and water atop a firm, well-scratched coat of cement plaster on metal lathing. The sandless plaster will hold the tiles firmly in place.

Q.—What can one do to prevent unsightly cracks from marring the appearance of plastered walls?

A.—Cracks often result from settling of a foundation where poor drainage is causing the ground to soften. The immediate areas around the house should always be so graded that surface drainage will not seep into the basement. Whether the home is on a hill or in a valley, the pitch must be sufficient to drain all water away from the foundation.

USING WALL BOARD

Q.—I would like to know some material other than tile that I can use to cover my bathroom wall.

A.—If you want a tile effect, there are a number of good wallboards made in imitation of tile that are attractive and serviceable. If you do not insist on having that appearance there are waterproof wallboards with plain surfaces that you can use. These can be painted. You should use at least one coat of high gloss enamel as a finish. Only the best grades of enamel and paint should be used as steam and hot water vapor are very hard on these surfaces.

Q.—When wood starts to rot is there anything that can be done to check it?

A.—The remaining wood can be saved by the complete removal of the rotted wood. If decay is caused by dry rot, which is a fungus that will spread, the infected wood must be cut out completely and destroyed. When decay is caused by dampness, the wood that has rotted should be removed and replaced, and the new woodwork protected from future dampness in order to prevent a recurrence of decay. When wood is affected by termites means must be taken to destroy their tunnels and to prevent them from reaching any moisture in the ground.

KITCHEN ALCOVE

Q.—I would like to build a dining alcove in my kitchen if I can afford the space. What is the least amount of space that can be used and still allow for a convenient alcove?

A.—It depends on whether the table and chairs are to be portable or built in. In the former type dining alcove the minimum desirable size is 7 feet 6 inches square. In the second type an area 4 feet 6 inches by 5 feet will suffice.

Q.—I want to lay a wooden floor over the concrete one in my basement.

A.—The concrete should be dampproofed. Lay 2-inch by 4-inch wood sleepers over concrete, 16 inches on centre, and nail wood floor to the sleepers.

Q.—What information can you give me about the use of metal lath?

A.—Metal lath provides a durable base for plaster and is especially desirable under stucco and waterproof surfacing in bathrooms. Metal lath is available in different types and weights for various purposes. For use under stucco, metal lath may be either zinc-coated or galvanized and for interior work either painted or galvanized. Ceilings and exterior work call for a heavier weight lath than side walls.

When applying the lath, sheets should lap at least one inch on the sides and ends and be fastened on six or eight-inch centres. If self-furring lath is not used, do not fasten the lath tight against the face of the framework to which it is attached. Instead, use a type of nail which will hold the lath one-quarter to three-eighths inch away so that the lath can be completely embedded in the plaster and afford good reinforcement.

Garden Work for March

By V. W. AHIER

THE severe weather will possibly delay this program somewhat, but by the end of the month much of the usual work will have been accomplished. The following vegetables may be planted if your soil can be classified as "light": Broad beans, beets, carrots, parsnips, parsley, peas, radish and spinach. Set out a few lettuce toward the end of the month and don't forget the slug bait around each plant.

Rub the weak shoots off the seed potatoes and spread the tubers out in flats, placing near a sunny window to encourage strong shoots. Everbearing and late fruiting strawberries may be set out this month; rows three feet apart with 18 inches between plants. Start the tomato seed indoors using a short season variety for best results. Cantaloupes can be easily grown if started indoors in March. Transplant to four-inch pots when they have made their first true leaves and grow on indoors until May. Here again it is necessary to choose a short season variety. Early cauliflower and cabbage should also be started.

Perennial flower seeds should be started in a well prepared bed where they can be easily cared for until Fall. Hardy annuals, such as calendulas, clarkia, sweet alyssum, mignonette, may be planted. Some varieties of the blue hydrangea do not "blue" so easily, and it is necessary to have one which will readily assume the color if it gets the chance. For strong healthy hydrangeas water with a solution of one-quarter ounce sulphate of iron to a gallon of water as soon as growth starts, repeating weekly. When the flower buds begin to form change the solution to one-quarter ounce of alum to a gallon of water and you should have those very blue flowers.

When the frost is out of the ground and the lawn has settled back to its original contours, give it the usual Spring raking. —(V.H.S.)

The Finlayson home on Douglas Street

A CENTURY ago, in Fort Victoria's mess hall, which served as a church, a young Scotsman, Roderick Finlayson, a pioneer and a giant of this new land, took to himself a pretty bride, a shy slip of a girl, Sarah Work, daughter of pioneer parents, an Irishman, John Work and his wife who was Josette Legace.

The linking of a Finlayson and a Work, in the historical annals of British Columbia, was as if royalty had married into royalty. These families contributed so much to British Columbia. They were powers in our history.

Rev. Robert Staines, the first resident clergyman in the Fort, performed the ceremony in December, 1849, and the marriage licence may be seen today in the Provincial Archives. Sarah was the second daughter of John Work, but she was the first married. Jane, the eldest daughter, was married to Dr. Wm. F. Tolmie in the Fort the following February. And Suzette, the youngest, became the first wife of Lieut.-Col. E. G. Prior, so that in the Work family was indeed a dynasty that gave of its bone and sinew and brain to this new world and helped built it.

CROSSED CONTINENT

Finlayson was born in Scotland in 1818, and when he was 16 he came to America to New York and later went to Montreal to join the Hudson's Bay Company. In 1839 he crossed the continent to Fort Vancouver and the next year with James Douglas went in the Beaver to Sitka, remaining in the north some years. In 1843 he came with Douglas to found Fort Victoria and stayed here as second in command to Charles Ross. When Ross died in 1844 Finlayson took over and remained chief until Douglas himself returned from Fort Vancouver in 1849 to take over at this place.

When Finlayson and Sarah Work married they took up residence in the Fort. Dr. J. S. Helmcken, in his journal notes: "Mrs. Finlayson was introduced to me by Dr. Benson at her residence. Having a 'sty' on her eye, or something else, she would at first come forward, being bashful and at the time but recenlty married. The visit was a short one. Finlayson looked rather pallid, but was quiet and very agreeable, rubbing his hands slowly together."

Though Sarah Finlayson had five girls and four boys of her own, she evidently made the time to lend a helping hand to her neighbors whenever she could. Dr. Helmcken, in 1855, wrote that his wife Cecelia was down with pneumonia, and while she was very sick a son was born, and Cecelia died. Dr. Helmcken wrote: "Mrs. R. Finlayson kindly took charge of this poor little thing for a few days, but on returning home he died."

For years the Finlayson property ran from Douglas to Government Street, just about where Bay is today. The house was a large rambling place, with meadows and orchards and formal gardens, carriage houses and stables and barn for the cow. It was a great estate for small children and the Finlayson boys and girls lived way out in the country, though but a few minutes from the centre of the small town. When Finlayson built this home is unknown, but probably he started it in the late 50's.

MAYOR OF VICTORIA

The next year Mr. Finlayson became mayor of Victoria and so the big Douglas Street house was the centre of much entertaining and the city's first lady was a well-liked and kind hostess. The mayor had his troubles in those days, too for he had to struggle with a $10,000 a year budget and it wasn't easy going, any more than it is today.

The Finlaysons were prominent church people—in the first St. John's Church—the old iron church, which stood where the Hudson's Bay Company store is today. The Victoria Gazette of August 14, 1858, noted: "Church wardens—at a vestry meeting held at Victoria Church on Wednesday evening last Augustus Pemberton and Roderick Finlayson were re-elected church wardens for the ensuing year."

In 1861 Finlayson paid a visit home to Scotland. The Colonist of October 3 said: "Returned—Hon. Roderick Finlayson, returned yesterday on the sloop Wild Duck. Mr. Finlayson has been absent on a visit to England for several months past and returns to us in excellent health." Of this visit he wrote in his journal: "In 1861 I got leave of absence from the company to visit my parents and found them alive and well after an absence of 26 years, and the following year I was informed of their death."

THE WATER QUESTION

The springs from which Victoria got its water supply in the late 50's and early 60's were located on the Finlayson property and for a time there was a great deal of worry that the water supply might be cut off, though evidently Mr. Finlayson did everything he could to protect the source. The Colonist of April 25, 1861, had this to say: "The springs—yesterday Mr. J. J. Cochrane, as agent for Mr. Finlayson, owner of the springs, notified the water carriers that they would be allowed no more water from that source. We are aware that a certain party has been endeavoring for sometime back to lease this valuable property and the chances are that he has at last succeeded in his purpose and that watermen will hereafter be forced to pay a good round sum for their supplies of the aquatic fluid."

This caused tremendous worry in the town and Mr. Finlayson was roundly criticized, but two days later The Colonist cleared him: "The water question—No further steps were taken yesterday by Mr. Cochrane towards dispossessing the watermen and through them the public of the property known as the springs. Our community, which has been in an excited state over this matter for the past few days has now subsided into its wonted state of peace and quietness. The water carriers met with no opposition at the springs yesterday and Adam's ale was dispensed in the same manner as formerly. The speculators are evidently preparing for another effort and it will require united action on the part of our citizens to checkmate their plans. It has not yet transpired who is the real owner of the springs. The property is taxed on the assessor's lists as belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company, but it is well known that Mr. Finlayson was represented as having bought them from that corporation last Fall. It now appears Mr. Finlayson was used merely as a blind. The real purchaser is not Mr. Finlayson, but we learn is an officer of the Crown who has as yet failed to make himself known to the public. Every man, woman and child in Victoria is interested in retaining possession of the springs, and if they are permitted to pass into the hands of the geniuses who have turned their speculative eyes toward them it will be the fault of the people themselves."

IN THE LEGISLATURE

Mr. Finlayson was a member of the Legislative Council of the Crown Colony of Vancouver and in 1866 he fell into the bad books of The Colonist, which May 3 of that year had this to say of him: "To come now to the philosophy of Mr. Roderick Finlayson. That gentleman says it would be far better to do away with our representative institutions than have such as we have had—which means, of course, that it would be much better to have the executive untrammeled in the raising and expanding of public revenue. Unfortunately, however, for Mr. Finlayson's consistency; it is not many months since he was shouting as loud as the loudest against the heavy taxation of the country . . . It would really seem that some men lose their wits or at least their memories when they enter the halls of legislation."

Mr. Finlayson, quite naturally, was one of the leaders in the movement to have the capital of the newly-formed Colony of British Columbia moved to Victoria from New Westminster. In January, 1867, there was a meeting at the theatre in Victoria to demand that the capital come here. Mayor W. J. Macdonald was in the chair, and on the platform with Finlayson sat Amor de Cosmos, Dr. J. S. Helmcken, M. W. Tyrwhitt-Drake and A. Rocke Robertson. The Colonist reported Mr. Finlayson's remarks. "Said that Victoria was the most eligible place for the location of the capital and that it would be a waste of money to erect buildings elsewhere now. When the Colony was more advanced the capital might be removed to some point in the interior, but at present the requirements of the Colony demanded that the seat of government should be here (cheers)."

THE FIRST WEDDING

Meanwhile, with her husband busy each day in town, Mrs. Finlayson was busy at home with her growing family and soon there were weddings to worry about and to plan. One came November 12 of 1879, as reported in The Colonist: "St. John's Church was the scene of a fashionable wedding last evening when Mr. J. C. Keith of the Bank of British Columbia led to the altar Miss Annie Jane Finlayson, second daughter of Roderick Finlayson, Esq., ex-mayor and formerly chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company. The church was densely crowded, standing room being scarcely obtainable. The bride entered the sacred edifice leaning on the arm of her father and followed by her bridesmaids—five in number. The organ pealed forth a lively wedding march, and as the bridal party advanced up the aisle the vast assemblage rose to its feet to obtain the best possible view. The bride wore a white gros grain silk with the heaviest and costliest satin trimming, with a court train of brocade satin trimmed with old family lace of the rarest pattern. Over the dress and train depended delicate wreaths of jasmine, lily of the valley and orange blossoms. The bride's veil was exquisitely embroidered and gleamed with seed pearls of great beauty and value. The pattern was imported from Paris expressly for this wedding by Mesdames Langley and Morison of this city, at which establishment the dress was made and the veil embroidered. The bridesmaids were Miss Haller, Miss Sara Finlayson, Miss Letitia Finlayson, Miss Margaret Finlayson and Miss May Tolmie. Mrs. Finlayson wore a costly garnet velvet, trimmed with pale green. At the chancel rail the Rev. Mr. Jenns, rector of St. John's, and the groom, whose best man was Mr. Andrew Ritchie, assisted by Mr. G. H. Burns, awaited the party."

DEATH ENDS CAREER

Finlayson remained active to the end of his days, prominent in the growing city that was Victoria in the early 90's, when the sealing fleet boom was on. Each day he came into town to attend to his business and he grew wealthy. Suddenly he died and the whole town was deeply shocked. The Colonist of January 21, 1892, announced: "Though an old man his appearance of sturdy health seemed to warrant a long lease of life and more especially was the news very sudden as on Wednesday he had been seen in town looking as well as ever. Mr. Finlayson, after dinner Wednesday night, spent some hours in his dining-room with his wife and family and just before his hour of retiring complained of a pain about the region of the heart. He walked slowly to his room and sitting down in an armchair, died almost immediately. He was found lying back in the chair in a natural position, a few moments afterwards, cold and still. Dr. J. D. Helmcken, who was immediately sent for, arrived in a very few minutes but was powerless to render assistance."

Sarah Finlayson

There was a big funeral a few days later, the paper reporting: "The B.C. Pioneer Society, of which Mr. Finlayson was one of the original members, turned out in full local strength, every member wearing that little silver medal on his breast indicative of the fact that he had been one of the toilers who had contributed to making life in British Columbia so pleasurable for late comers. At the family residence, Douglas Street, old friends were afforded an opportunity of taking a last look at all that was mortal of one whom they esteemed and respected. The casket was of cast steel, mounted in gold and silver, and on the breast plate was the simple inscription, 'Roderick Finlayson, died January 20, 1892, aged 74 years.' It was literally embedded in floral tributes. The pallbearers were Hon. J. S. Helmcken, Hon. J. H. Turner, Sir Matthew Begbie, A. W. Jones, W. Hamley, C. W. R. Thompson, J. D. Pemberton, Capt. Lewis, A. Munro and B. W. Pearse. From St. John's Church the cortege proceeded along Douglas Street and up Humboldt, followed by a large number of carriages and hundreds of citizens of every class and creed and the hearse finally reached the cemetery where Roderick Finlayson was laid in the grave."

Mrs. Finlayson lived on in her Douglas Street home. She knew more sorrow, for in 1894 her eldest daughter Mary died, and the next year her eldest son John died in Quebec. But Mrs. Finlayson lived to a great age and died in 1906 and shortly after the old home was torn down to make way for industrial development and with it went a link with infant Victoria.

Stop Signal

A Short Story

By COUNCIL PIERCE

I MET her at Coney Island where I—with a million others—was trying to cool off by taking a dip in the briny. I was way out and just about to turn back when I saw a red cap bobbing up and down. "Hello, Toots," I sang out. "Aren't you a long ways from home?"

She gave me the double O as I came abreast, with never a flicker of the eyes or suspicion of a smile. "I'll move over so you can get by," she said. "Green light just went on—that's the go signal." Her voice was throaty, low—like the music of a cello.

"That red cap's a stop signal for me," I cracked.

In a moment she returned my smile and it was just like the sun peeping through the clouds after a storm. She was more than pretty, and had that something folks call class. Clear grey eyes. A profile, neck and arms to make an artist rave. She was treading water, and that was all I could see. She circled me slowly and said, "What's on your mind—granting you—"

"Have one?" I laughed. "Well, say tea for two. Like tea?"

"Some kinds, Mr.—?"

"Name's Pat. Patrick Cassidy. New York and what they call the hinterland. I'm at home 'most any place."

"So I see," she said with a tiny quirk of the mouth. "Well, I'm Barbara Spring. I don't see where you got the idea my name was Toots."

"My mistake," I said, "and I apologize."

"Handsome," she said. Apology accepted." Then, "Taking it easy after a busy day in the Street?"

I frowned. "Exactly. Morgan was hard to reach today, blocked every lead; got me groggy . . . And you?"

"Oh, I got tired entertaining in my Newport villa so I slipped away and came here to mix with the common herd for a day."

We laughed, and swam around, talking a lot of nonsense and having no end of fun. The sun was just about to plunge the land into darkness, the lights were blinking along the shore. I said, "About time for that good old cup of tea."

She said, "Come on," and cut the water with a crawl that would have made many a pro envious. I'm no slouch myself, but she had me outpointed from the tap of the gong. "Meet you on the boardwalk at the head of this stairway," she said when I followed her on to the beach.

She joined me half an hour later, wearing an outfit that I knew right away had set someone back a couple of hundred smackers. "Now what?" she challenged.

"Tea for two like I said."

She smiled. "Lead on, Macduff."

"You've got the name wrong, sister. I said Cassidy, Patrick Cassidy. "I'm Irish, not Scotch."

"Sorry," she said quickly. "I'm not good at remembering names." Then, with a lilting laugh, "Okay, hop along, Cassidy."

I got a kick out of that, Hopalong Cassidy being my favorite cowboy character. "You like to read Westerns, too?" I asked.

"And how!"

I hailed a boy with a chair and we piled in. A mile up the walk we left him and barged into the ritziest place on the island. "What will you have?" I asked, looking over the menu.

"What's your poison?" she countered.

"Iced tea."

"Nothing stronger?"

"Well, long as we're cutting up I might have a little lemon in it. Don't let me cramp your style, though."

"Iced tea will do very nicely," she said.

I turned to the waiter. He had a pained look on his face. "Tea for two and see it's well iced," I ordered.

"I'd swim for a living if I were you," I said when Sourpuss had gone.

* * * * *

That seemed to please her. "Think I'm that good?"

"Seen quite a few, none better. You see, I go in for the athletic stuff myself."

"You didn't have to tell me—not with those shoulders and arms. Box fighter?"

I nodded. "For the present."

"For the present!" She leaned forward a little. "And by and by?"

I swallowed. Then for some reason or other I blurted it out: "I want to design gowns for women. Run my own establishment. You're the only one I've ever told, though."

She gasped. I knew just how ridiculous it must sound, a plug ugly wanting to do a thing like that. I grabbed a pencil, whipped out my notebook and sketched hurriedly. "That would just suit you," I said, shoving the book over to her.

She studied the drawing. "You're right, it would. To a T." She looked at me thoughtfully. "But how come? Do you mind telling me?"

"Sis. You see, Dad was an artist. He started Sis and me in early. Charcoal, pencils, water colors, oil. Neither of us showed much. Sis went in for dress designing. She had good ideas but couldn't draw well. I got to helping her. She commenced to sell her stuff. Some of the boys in High got wise what I was doing and I had a few scraps. When a promoter happened to see me in action and told me I could make a lot of dough in the fight game I listened to him. Wanted to make enough to put Sis and me into the gown game right. That's all there is to it."

She studied the sketch again. "May I have this?" she asked. I said she could, and she put the leaf in her purse. "Any fights on hand?"

"I mix it with Bottinelli, The Demon, next week. If I polish him off I may get a crack at the Champ."

"And if you get this fight with the Champ and lick him—what then?"

"A couple more fights to give some good boys a chance at the title, then I'll hang up the gloves. Open shop."

"Gowns!" (She just couldn't get it.) After a little she said, "Well, I've got to go now." She gave me her address and said I could come see her sometime. It was on Park Avenue.

"The woman you work for a good sort?" I asked.

"I like her pretty well. Though there are times—"

I nodded. "They're all that way. Think over what I said about the swim racket. You could make real dough. And there's nothing like being your own boss."

* * * * *

The Demon was no pushover, but I knew I had it on him and wasn't worried. Maybe that's why I was a little careless in the second round. Anyway, he popped a straight left to my eye, and it came to me I couldn't go see Barbara for a few days. Not with a shiner like I knew I'd have. That made me kind of sore, for I'd been figuring on taking a run up there and giving her the latest Hopalong Cassidy story to read. Some way, I wasn't getting over any punches that hurt. My manager told me to wake up when I went to my corner after the fourth round. "You're in a trance," he said.

First thing The Demon did in the fifth was to open a cut on my lip that was nearly healed. When that started to bleed I knew darned well I'd have a map that would scare kids on the street, and it got my Irish up. I smothered him with rights and lefts, and the crowd was on its feet when the gong saved Bottinelli. All he did in the sixth and seventh was hang on. But in the eighth I shoved him away and put over the old one, two. He went down and stayed down.

The next night I breezed down to the Brevoort and had dinner at a table on the sidewalk, my manager Benny with me. "They say there're a lot of these sidewalk cafes in Paris," Benny remarked.

"Yeah." I could hardly talk for the swollen lip, and my eye was puffed plenty. "I'm going over for a look-see one of these days before long."

"What for?"

"Business and pleasure."

"Pleasure and monkey-business," scoffed Benny. "Far's all that's concerned there's niftier janes right here in little old New York. Lamp the one sitting down over there to your left. That's what I mean—class.

It was Barbara, and she was wearing a dress that made me take notice, for it was the one I'd designed for her at Coney. She saw me, nodded and smiled, and I stood and bowed, then sat down again.

"You'll be getting in a jam, trying to make a girl like her."

"That girl's an old friend of mine," I said.

Benny laughed. "Old friend, my eye!" I frowned. "I said, 'old friend!'"

Benny said, "Oh, I didn't know." Then after a minute, "She was at the fight last night. Fourth row. With a party of her Park Avenue friends."

"With the woman she works for," I said. "The woman she—say, don't you know who she is?"

"You mean Barbara?"

"Sure, Babs Spring."

"Why, of course."

"The devil you do. Imagine Babs Spring working for anyone. Why, that girl's worth all of ten thousand grand."

. . . Ten million bucks! Barbara Spring. What a sap I'd been! She'd tell her friends of the prizefighter who had a yen to open a gown shop, and now they'd laugh. It would be all over town. The reporters—I felt the sweat come on my forehead.

"What's the matter with you?" demanded Benny.

"I guess it's the heat," I said. "Let's go." We got into a cab. I hadn't looked her way when we left. And I said to Benny: "I'm sick of the big burg. Let's take a vacation."

Benny didn't say anything for a bit, then, "O.K., Champ. We'll see if we can fix things for the big fight first, though."

* * * * *

Benny got busy and we went through all the preliminaries to a match for the welterweight title. A bunch of newspaper guys and sportsmen saw us off as we boarded a train for a lake up in Maine. But before we left I sent a box of orchids to Barbara with just "Good-bye. Pat" on a card.

Benny had wired up for a furnished cottage on the quiet side of the lake, and we settled down for the Summer. Across the water from us was a nest of swell Summer homes. The lake here was only half a mile wide and I swam it every night before hitting the hay.

One night, out in the middle, I floated, dreaming a bit, maybe, watching the stars. I heard a splash nearby, then a voice: "Avast there, matey, pipe the stop signal." I turned and mumbled something. There was that same red cap. "Why didn't you come to see me before you left?"

"Now, look here," I said, swimming close to her, "you darned well know I'm only a palooka while you — well, I found out you're one of the richest women in the world."

"So what?" she demanded.

"So you wouldn't really want a guy like me calling at your house."

"No?" If you're so wise, tell me why I picked this lake to come to this Summer?"

"Well, I'll bite. Why did you?"

"Listen, Pat," and now her voice sounded like the undertone of the organ in St. Michael's. "One of the disadvantages of inheriting a lot of money is that if a girl likes a man who hasn't as much as she, it's up to the girl to make the advances—if he's the right sort, I mean. The way you left the Brevoort the night after the fight I knew the man with you had told you who I am. I planned to do that myself at the right time. And when I got those orchids — and I'd have liked gardenias just as well, Pat—with that note, I knew you'd never come to see me. So I came up here to see you. Shameless hussy, aren't I?" She kept still for a while, then, "Coming?" she asked, and started for the shore.

I followed and we climbed up on a boat landing near a big place that was noisy with people laughing, singing and hollering. "Special celebration?" I asked.

"Go up and throw them out if you say the word."

She laughed. "It just isn't being done this season, Pat." By and by she said, "I see by the papers you fight the Champ in the Fall. How about the gown shop? Still keen as ever about it?"

"Just the same. Not broadcasting it, though."

"I can believe that. Whew! Think what the sports writers would say."

I squirmed a little. She was sitting on the landing beside me. I looked at her and there was something in her eyes made me stare into them for a long minute. Then her hand closed over mine. About an hour later she said, "If I say yes, Pat, you'll have to agree to one thing. No more fights. Not one."

I was in a panic. "But the championship!"

She shook her head. "Not even that. Pat, I don't want a husband with a broken nose and vegetables in place of ears. Then, you might get a blow on the head that would make you, make you—"

"Crazier than I am?"

"Well, you know what the fight game does to some of them," she defended.

* * * * *

I argued and pleaded with her, but she was stubborn. Finally I gave in. She rewarded me handsomely right then and there. "Burn all your bridges behind you," she advised.

"I'll burn more than my bridges," I said, and meant it.

I swam back, climbed into bed and in the morning I made a fire out in the yard. I was just tossing a set of old gloves on the blaze when Benny came running up. "Hey, stop!" he yelled. "What do you think you're doing?"

"I'm washed up with the fight game," I said.

He stared at me. "There," he soothed, "come on in and lie down, Pat. You must have got a touch of sun yesterday."

I shook his hand from my arm. "I'm getting married, and she doesn't want me to fight any more."

"I know, Pat. Come in the house." He took hold of my arm again.

"Leave me alone or I'll sock you," I said. "Didn't you ever hear of anybody getting married before?"

"Why, I believe you're in earnest," he said. "By Godfrey, I think you mean it."

"Certainly I mean it," and I picked up another set of gloves and tossed them on to the fire. "I've fought my last fight. Babs doesn't want me to fight again and I promised her I wouldn't."

"Babs! Babs who?"

"Babs Spring, of course."

"You're going to marry Babs Spring?"

"Sure, why not?"

"Why not, indeed!" He looked at me sharply. "When did all this take place?"

"Last night. Babs is in the big house across the lake."

Benny started walking up and down. "Now, come in and we'll talk about this. You're welcome to marry ten million bucks or anyone else—after your fight with the Champ. But if you think I'm going to have you walk out on me and take it lying down, you're crazy. You'll fight that one fight—or else!"

"Or else what?" I demanded belligerently.

"Or else I'll sue you and you'll be branded as yellow by every newspaper in the country."

"I'm not afraid of the Champ," I said, "and you know it. And I'm willing to make some kind of a settlement with you."

"We might get together, you and I, but you'd never square things with the boys of the press, Pat. What's the matter with Babs, anyway? I thought she was a pretty good sport."

"Sure, she's a good sport, but—" and I told him.

He was quiet for a little, then he said, "I can see where money wouldn't interest you, marrying all the dough in the world, but—"

I interrupted. "Get this straight, Benny. I'm not marrying Babs for her dough. Let 'em all believe what they want."

"Even that you're yellow?"

Boy, he had me there! I hadn't considered all the angles yet. Filled with love for Babs, wanting her worse than I'd ever wanted anything, getting a little taste of affection from her (her kisses were still fresh on my lips), I had rushed off determined to quit fighting on the instant. But I just couldn't be branded yellow!

Benny said, "Take it easy, kid. Think it over. I'm for you, you know that. But some things just aren't being done in the fight game—or any other game, either."

* * * * *

I thought of what Babs had said when I offered to go up and clean out her joint last night: "It just isn't being done this season, Pat." Babs had to play the game. Well, so did I.

"I'll go talk to Miss Spring," I said to Benny. "She'll see how it is and let me off for this one scrap, anyway."

"Sure she will," Benny said. "Go over now. A swim will do you good."

I got into my swim suit and struck out for the other shore. I walked up the front steps, dripping water, and rang the bell.

"Miss Spring is not at home, sir," the butler said.

"Babs," I yelled, "It's me, Pat. Come on down right away, will you?"

In a moment came Bab's voice, "I'm coming. Hold everything." Then Babs came, wrapped all round in a blue robe edged with fur — a dream walking, sure enough. "Oh, it's a dip you want," she said. "Wait till I change," and she ran back upstairs.

Out in the lake I explained things over and over again. Then I talked in words of one syllable. But it was no go. No fights. Not one. If people wanted to think I was afraid to fight, let them. And if I loved the fight game more than I loved her, O.K., that was all there was to it. She loved me and wouldn't risk having me dippy or daffy or scarred for life. But it was up to me. I could take my choice.

So I did. I said, "Bye, Toots. It's been nice meeting you," and swam away. But boy, it came tough to do it, and I didn't sleep so good. A week later the local paper told of Barbara Spring leaving for her villa at Newport, all her guests trailing along.

How I trained for the fight with the Champ was nobody's business. I was right on edge when the big night came, and I wasn't a bit nervous. There's no use telling of the fight round by round. Between the eighth and ninth spasm someone punctured my ear—it was swelled up like a balloon—and as he did it a woman down in front screamed hysterically: "Pat, if you don't finish that big palooka in the next round I'll never speak to you again."

The gong sounded, and I rushed. There was no stopping me, and though the Champ couldn't be stopped either, he was wobbly on his pins when the round ended—and the Garden had gone mad. It went madder when I dropped him for a count of eight in the tenth round, and the roar that greeted the new title holder shook the auditorium as the referee raised my hand in the round following.

Down in the dressing room Babs looked at me and shook her head. "What do you think, doctor?" she asked the man beside her.

Doc smiled. "I can fix him up good as new except for that ear. I'm afraid—"

"I don't care," she said, and bent over and kissed me right before Doc, Benny, the boys and the sports writers.

Then she whispered something to me and I caught the word "gowns" and said, "Sh-h-h!"

"All right, then," she said out loud, "Not more than one or two more fights. Promise."

The newspapermen smiled knowingly and winked as I said, "Oh, sure, I promise."

T. B. Germ Discovered by Koch in 1882

By KATHLEEN M. CLARKE

DID you take your tuberculosis test today? And as your schedule went awry because you must rush off and leave unmade beds, and dishes piled high in the sink, did you mutter discontentedly, or did you offer a prayer of thanks?

The hour you lose today may mean another 20 years of life for you. March 24 marks the anniversary of the discovery of the tuberculosis germ.

On that day in 1882, Robert Koch, a German doctor, 39 years of age, who had studied medicine at Gottingen from 1862 to 1866, described his findings to the Berlin Physiological Society.

If science and medicine can progress as far in the next 67 years as in the past, we may well hope to see this menace completely controlled. But science can do nothing without the co-operation of the layman. The housewife, school teacher, children, office workers, and ditch diggers are all likly victims.

HIT AND MISS SYSTEM

Speaking now for the province of British Columbia, Victoria in particular. Prior to 1936, tuberculosis care was a hit and miss arrangement, with inadequate diagnostic and treatment facilities. Patients from Victoria were held temporarily in old buildings at the Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals, awaiting admission to Tranquille, which was the only sanitorium of any size in the province.

Vancouver had some sanitorium facilities, but quite inadequate. The Vancouver unit and Tranquille are now modern, fully-equipped sanatoria with facilities for carrying out any type of treatment necessary in pulmonary tuberculosis.

There is no self-sufficient sanitorium on Vancouver Island, but this is a dream that it is hoped will some day come true. Mobile X-ray survey units, provided by the B.C. Tuberculosis Society (Christmas seals) cover the province.

In theory, treatment in sanitorium is not free, but in practice only one to two per cent of patients are charged anything, and then only if their financial status is such that payment can be made without hardship.

ACCOMMODATION SHORT

The population of British Columbia has risen 23 per cent without a proportionate increase in beds. According to information from a leading doctor in the tuberculosis division at Victoria, there are about 700 beds in British Columbia. This amounts to an average of 1.3 beds per death. Medical authorities state the percentage should be three beds per death.

The average waiting time for a patient after it is ascertained that he has tuberculosis is three months. In the opinion of doctors, this is far too long, and oftimes endangers the patient's chance of compiete recovery.

Approximately one-third of the deaths in British Columbia are amongst the Indian population. Said Indians amounting to one-fortieth of the entire population of British Columbia. The Indian tuberculosis problem belongs to the Federal Department of Indian Affairs.

PREVENTION IS BEST

More than ever today one needs to remember the old adage, "Prevention is better than cure." As Boris Sokoloff in his book, "The Civilised Diseases" (Howell Soskin, 1944) says, "More and more often it has become apparent that at some time almost every individual becomes infected with the germ of tuberculosis, and then this infection subsides by itself and is spontaneously cured."

If this be the case, surely every right thinking person must realise that if this dreadful germ catches us with our defences down, tuberculosis will continue to levy its alarming tribute.

After considerable reading on the subject, I have come to the conclusion that the prevention of tuberculosis is a social rather than a medical problem. Most cases result from contact with another case, but contaminated food or dust-filled air may bring into your mouth and lungs a living germ. When the tubercle bacillus comes in contact with the body's defenders, the leucocytes wall off the invaders.

If you are in good health, well rested, and receive an adequate diet, the germ will die. However, some germs may remain in a dormant state. This is called a "latent" form of the disease. And this is where we may pause and give thanks for the magnificent brain of a man named Wilhelm Konradi Roentngen who discovered X-rays in 1895.

The general use of X-rays in diagnosing tuberculosis was adopted about 1916.

Men devoted their lives to educating the people, so that today there is no such thing as a hopeless case unless it be in the mind of the patient.

LIFE AND HOPE

I remember reading of a case where a man 50 years old with one lung almost destroyed, the other infected, and with tubercle lesions in the throat, was cured sufficiently to be able to work again. His will to live and his faith in his doctor saved his life.

Unlike many infections, the body is unable to destroy the microbe in a short time. The tubercle bacillus is protected by a wax-like substance. Months of rest are needed until the lesion is "calcified."

To illustrate how far we have come in controlling tuberculosis, I quote a paragraph from the Sessional Papers, 1911, Doctor Fagan reporting: "The conditions observed in most of the dairy farms are—cowsheds overcrowded, ill-ventilated and badly lighted. The water supply in many instances is too limited and of doubtful purity. Cleanliness is a rarity, in many cases I have seen dirty milk after straining. In one case I came across six milk cans in which there were a number of dead flies, and into which the fresh milk was being delivered. At every dairy I asked for certificates. Some owners said they had them, but could not find them. In only one instance did I see a certificate. This stated the dairy was in accordance with regulations of the Provincial Board of Health. This particular dairy was one of the dirtiest I have seen."

The trend is no longer to hide, but to expose conditions which foster this menace to civilization.

The Smithsonian Volume, 1910, states: "In many regions, even entire countries, there is, for well-recognised reasons, a certain hesitation attached to pronouncing a diagnosis of pulmonary consumption, and the disease is called instead chronic catarrh of the lungs, or something similar."

In this enlightened age, each death provides a challenge to the medical profession. But as Charles Singer, M.A., M.D., L.Litt., says in his book, "A Short History of Medicine" (Clarendon Press): "Medicine cannot give immortality, but it should enable us all to live out our full lives. Death coming in due and not undue time, is shorn of all his terrors, when every man and every woman shall come to his grave in full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in, in his season (Job v, 26)."

Warns U.S. of Economic Peril

NEW YORK (UP)—The Marshall Plan is building a juggernaut that will destroy the United States through the financing of European Euro-African and Euro-Asian empires, in the view of Carlos Davilla, Chilean journalist.

Davilla, who was president of Chile for 100 days in 1932, views the world scene and the relation to it of the Western Hemisphere in his book, "We of the Americas," just published by Ziff-Davis.

Davilla argues that the lower standard of living in the areas being helped will enable their economic development—with United States finances—to eliminate the United States from its present world markets.

He urges the United States to turn to its natural markets in the Western Hemisphere and encourage development of the American nations. Else, he believes, all the nations of this hemisphere will be forced to surrender their standards of living to meet encroaching competition from Africa and Asia.

WARNS OF FUTURE

"The combination of modern European technology, capital and know-how, with the negligible costs, submissive labor, and unlimited resources of Africa, soon will be felt by the United States in all foreign markets, and perhaps even domestically," he warns.

He says the "economic revival of Western Europe took place before the Marshall Plan. The American people were not informed, but they will hear plenty about it from now on. Economically, most of Europe will come back stronger than ever, but it will come back walled by imperial continental and inter-continental regionalism."

Davilla now asks "will the day come when the Latin-American producers of coffee, cotton, quebracho, wheat, meat, vegetable oil, fibers, fertilizers and minerals will . . . forgather to cope with another emergency, when their foreign markets will have been drawn off into Euro-Asia and Euro-African pools?

Will they see the United States buying from these conglomerates, where foreign trade is a means of furthering the power of the state, cheap labor, minerals, coffee, quebracho, fibers, vegetable oils and sugar just as it is buying almost all other tropical imports before the war from Asia and Africa?

NO TRADE BALANCE

"And how will the United States sell its cotton, tobacco and manufactured goods, when its subsidised exports come to an end, to Europe which tomorrow will become, economically, Eurasia and Africa—strongly industrialised, monopolistic regions with preferential treatments, managed currencies and negligible production costs for foodstuffs and raw materials"

Davilla says there might be something to the Marxist theory "that the United States is set on a shooting war which she can win to prevent an economic war which she can't."

Davilla suggests:

"There are two ways out of this dilemma: The United States and Latin America must lower their own standards, to compensate for the centralized manipulation and cheap labor of their gigantic trade competitors, or they must proceed with the economic integration of this hemisphere into a balanced and, if necessary, self-contained unit."

Bristol's Theatre Royal Continuous Since 1766

BRISTOL.—In a cobbled street near the docks in this West Country seaport of Bristol, lies the oldest building in Britain with a continuous existence as a theatre. It is the Theatre Royal, which was opened in 1766, and except for a few years during the war has been open ever since. When the Royal was built King Street was part of fashionable Bristol; now it is a business area and the theatre is surrounded by warehouses.

Th Royal is a tiny place that seats only 650 people. It has been little changed since it was built and much of the old stage mechanism is still extant, including the old "thunder run" in the roof, down which 30-pound cannon balls were rolled to simulate thunder. The theatre was built by Bristol citizens; 48 subscribed £50 each and another £2,400 yas provided by various well-wishers of the drama. There was very great opposition from the Quaker element in Bristol, which considered that the erection of a playhouse would demoralize the town but despite their protests the Royal was opened in 1766 with a prologue specially written for the occasion by the famous actor, David Garrick.

And then its great and fashionable days began, when every actor and actress of note played there—including Kemble, Kean, Macready, Foote, Phelps, Grimaldi and the wonderful Mrs. Sarah Siddons. Mrs. Siddons played there in repertory for three years at £3 a week, until the famous Irish playwright, Mr. Sheridan, saw her and offered her an engagement at Drury Lane.

In later years the Royal fell on hard times but in 1943 it was taken over by the Council for the Encouragement of Music and the Arts—now the Arts Council—and since 1946 it has been the home of the Bristol Old Vic, an offshoot of the famous Old Vic Company in London. They stage classics, modern plays, and a pantomime at Christmas, and several of their productions have been produced in their entirety from the B.B.C.'s West Regional studios.

Half Million New Homes

About three and a quarter million people in Britain have been rehoused since 1945. New homes are being built at more than twice the rate achieved after the First World War. This is disclosed in official housing returns issued recently. The total number of new houses completed since the war is now nearly 583,000. These are made up of about 426,000, permanent and 157,000 temporary dwellings.

Britain's Stone Industry Has Shortage of Workers

LONDON (CP).—Britain's abbeys, palaces and country homes may fall in decay, with no new stone buildings built to replace them, unless more masons can be trained.

A works ministry report on "Recruitment of Masons" points up the danger.

Unless the rate of recruitment of masons can be raised, the stone industry will cease to exist in many areas. Quarries will be forced to close due to lack of demand for stone and the ancient British craft of stone-working may disappear.

The report said that if the craft does not attract enough apprentices, new buildings will be impossible and repairs to church, public and other stone buildings will be delayed.

Then "maintenance of the country's architectural treasures will be in jeopardy."

The Building Apprenticeship and Training Council, which prepared the report for the ministry, said 550 masons should be recruited annually. At the present the rate was only 128. It recommended that the Government should consider measures to encourage stone building and preservation of the craft.

Main causes for the decline were said to be increased use of alternative materials, greater simplicity in architectural design, importation of worked stone from other countries and the extended use of machinery.

Lancashire Lad Was Sceptical

LONDON (CP).—Education Minister George Tomlinson told boys in Lancashire that while it might not be true that every soldier carried a field marshal's baton in his haversack, any boy of ability might become prime minister.

"A little lad looked up at me with a wry smile," said Tomlinson, "and in a broad Lancashire accent said: 'Ah'll sell my chance for a tanner (ten cents).'"

Australia May Relieve Restrictions On Import

SYDNEY, Australia (CP).—The Federal Government is expected to relax some of the more stringent import restrictions on semi-essential goods from dollar countries.

This is indicated by a survey now being carried out by the Commonwealth Bureau of Statistics to compile a comprehensive statement of the amount and character of overseas "invisible" investments in Australia.

The bureau hopes to provide a balance sheet setting out credits reaching Australia from overseas associates of Australian companies, and the yearly expenditure in dividends and other expenses on money invested here.

These investments, which are not shown in annual trade returns are known to reduce the trade balance of the country below the figure given by the statisticians. It is hoped that some relaxation of dollar import restrictions will be possible when the survey is completed.

Australia's heavy cuts in imports from dollar countries over the past 18 months are beginning to pay dividends. A favorable trade balance with Canada and the United States is reported by the acting Commonwealth statistician, S. R. Carver, in his latest returns.

Down on the Farm

MELBOURNE, Australia (UP).—An adequate supply of whisky for farm workers might prove one method of stopping the population drift to cities from rural areas, Albert J. Reading, grazier of Callawadda, believes.

Reading appeared at a court hearing of application by a wool and produce company for a spirits merchant's licence.

Reading said he would like to get two cases of whisky a year for his hands. Labor was scarce in the country and amenities were needed, he said.

Report on Air Hygiene Suggest Spray in Office

LONDON (CP).—Present standards are so low that almost any attempt at air disinfection would be an improvement, says an experts' report entitled "Studies in Air Hygiene."

"In large offices good ventilation, good lighting and dust control are worthwhile as permanent measures," the report concludes. "Air disinfection by chemicals or ultra-violet radiation is worth adding when an epidemic is prevalent."

Sodium hypochlorite is suggested as an efficient liquid spray. Dr. D. B. Bourdillon, who directed the survey, says a large typing office should have one spray for every ten workers, and it should be used every half hour.

He notes that hand sprays are frequently used with unsuitable liquids, including formalydehyde which "is useless or dangerous, since it is only effective in concentrations which are highly irritant to the human respiratory tract."

The experts noted "alarming outbreaks" of pulmonary tuberculosis in the Royal Navy due to overcrowding. One recommendation was that vacuum cleaners be used instead of brooms which raise big clouds of dust.

The microbic content of hospital air was closely studied, and it was urged that windows in wards be opened as a regular practice after bed-makings and dressings to permit escape of infected air.

Australian Shark Menace

SYDNEY, Australia (P).—American shark repellent, a wartime discovery, needs to be five to ten times more powerful to protect Australia's menaced surf beaches, Professor F. S. Cotton, of Sydney University, has found.

Commenting on this Summer's grim shark fatalities on the Australian beaches, to which thousands flock each week-end, Cotton said he had abandoned experiments with American shark repellent because its effective radius was limited to 20 feet.

"It is therefore too costly to use on a commercial scale. Something five to ten times as powerful is needed," he said.

The repellent was issued to wartime airmen who might be forced into the sea.

Gilbert Whitley, curator of fishes at the Australian Museum, claims the Australian shark menace is much exaggerated. Admitting several fatal maulings recently, he claimed it was safer to surf on Australian beaches than to sally into Australia's city traffic. "Since the earliest days of our colonization about 250 shark attacks have been recorded off the coast. About 100 people have been killed, less than one a year," he said.

Big Pay Earners Few in Australia

SYDNEY (CP).—Only three per cent of wage-earners in Australia earned more than $3,200 during the financial year 1945-46.

Figures just released show that these 63,313 higher income earners were paid 16 per cent of all incomes paid during the year. On top of that they paid out 37.5 per cent of all income tax.

Biggest number of taxpayers were in the low income group, who earned between $640 and $1,600 a year. This group numbered 1,286,121 or 62.65 per cent of Australia's 2,052,926 taxpayers. There were 484,365 persons earning less than $640 a year.

Maori Community Pledge Puts Ban on Pastimes

WHANGAREI, N.Z. (CP).—A strange new Maori cult is thriving in a remote corner of the Bay of Islands in the far north of New Zealand.

In an unproductive scrub-covered wilderness ten miles from the nearest township, 300 Maoris have set up a communal religious settlement which aims at eliminating vice and encouraging the virtues.

Maoris who become members of the settlement must pledge themselves to refrain from gambling, swearing, drinking, fighting, playing football or going to cinemas. Smoking and dancing are allowed, but the pursuits banned represent a truly remarkable list for the Maori people, including as they do several of the modern Maori's favorite pastimes.

The sect, formally known as the Absolute Maori Established Church of Aotearoa, Waipounama and Wharekauri, was established only two years ago, but already it has made remarkable progress. It was started by a religious leader, Rapana, who broke away from a Maori sect, the Ratana Church, and attracted adherents from many parts of New Zealand as well as the Far North.

Already a large area has been laid down in crops which are worked on a communal basis. At first the people lived in ramshackle palm leaf huts, but these are being replaced with cottages. A central block housing the church, a recreation hall, dining-rooms and kitchens has been built up by the community and a park laid out around it.

The sect has established branch churches in four other settlements in the north and seems likely to spread further. After two years of voluntary living according to the rules, the Maoris seem happy and enthusiastic about their new way of life. They are convinced that the movement will grow to embrace a large proportion of the race.

An Alarm Bell Inside Watch

LONDON.—A discovery that will be of great benefit to a large number of people has been made because a watchmaker heard a cricket chirruping as he walked in the mountains of Switzerland. If such a tiny insect could make a sound clearly audible from a distance of a dozen yards why, he thought, could he not make an alarm bell that was small enough to go in a wrist watch but yet noisy enough to wake a sleeper? The upshot of his mountain walk was an alarm mechanism that works on the principle of the cricket's chirrup. The cricket makes his distinct and penetrating noise by rubbing the file-like edge of one wing against the other; the watchmaker produced the same effect by setting a light hammer to vibrate against a thin metal diaphragm. The result is that now, in a case no bigger than that containing an ordinary wrist watch, lies both the mechanism and the alarm bell.

India Interested In Health Water

NEW DELHI (CP).—Samples of water from 23 different mineral springs in Bihar have been examined and geological experts say that some closely resemble well-known European and American medicinal, table and spa waters in mineral composition and radioactive properties.

Reports from those who used the samples are stated to be encouraging. Some have reported that the waters on continued use prove efficacious for rheumatism, skin diseases, digestive disorders and leprosy.

Festival of Shakespeare

THE Festival of Shakespeare plays at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, since it was first held in 1864, has progressively developed into an international event in the theatrical world, beloved of devotees of the theatre everywhere.

The 1949 Festival plans have just been announced. The Festival will run from Saturday, April 16, to Friday, July 15, and, under the direction of Anthony Quayle, and with such famous producers as John Gielgud and Godfrey Tearle, will attempt to better the outstanding successes of last year.

Diana Wynyard, returning as the leading actress, will play Lady Macbeth in the opening production, and then in various plays throughout the season. Godfrey Tearle will be seen as Macbeth, one of the few great Shakespearean roles he has yet to play; he is also cast as Cardinal Wolsey in "Henry VIII," and will appear again as Othello—these in addition to his work as a producer. These preliminary advices of the proposed program give promise that this season will again be in the brilliant tradition of Stratford. Many Canadians will again make their way there for the festival, and agents will be well advised to make advance hotel reservations for clients as soon as possible.

Railways Observe Birthday

NATIONALIZATION of British railways is now 12 months old, and reviewing the first year, Sir Eustace Missenden, chairman of the railway executive, said recently, "We have continued to provide the public with the best Summer and Winter train services since before the war; we have reintroduced many popular travel facilities, and our freight services are being progressively accelerated and improved."

Looking to the future, he appealed to the 650,000 members of the British railways' staff as follows: "As we enter the second year of the unified British railways, let us reaffirm the objectives which I am sure we all have at heart, namely, by zealous service and constant courtesy to enhance the reputation of our calling in the eyes of the public whom we serve, and to spare no effort to make British Railways synonymous with the highest stands of technical craftsmanship and of efficiency and safety in operation. For it is by its standards of service, and not by self-advertisement, that our railways will be judged."

Two-Deck Coach

LONDON (CP).—An experimental double-decker passenger coach is to be tried out by British railways in the London area.

It has a single deck section at each end and the double-deck portion occupies the centre section. The double-desk portion has a lower clearance than usual, headroom for passengers being reduced to about the height of the present baggage rack.

Rebuild Towpaths

TEDDINGTON, Middlesex, England (CP).—Perestrians will be able to walk 130 miles along picturesque towpaths between Teddington and Cricklade when towpaths are restored.

About £50,000 ($200,000) is to be spent on restoration of towpaths out of funds provided by Thames Conservancy and local authorities, the London County Council and the Government.

American Women Have More Leisure

SYDNEY, Australia (UP).—American women "don't know they are alive," Dr. Muriel McIlrath said on return from a tour to Europe and the United States.

Dr. McIlwraith, a gynecologist, said American women were being "ruined" by labor-saving devices, and cited dish-washing machines, garbage-disposal sinks and other gadgets.

"The Americans have everything," she said. "Some of their devices make me green with envy—but they don't know they're alive. They haven't enough to do."

Briefs From Britain

LONDON.—Young civil servants lost in a London fog on their way to a promotion examination are to be given another chance.

WORTHING, Sussex, England.—Miss Emmie Rooke celebrated her 103rd birthday with a jaunt in the country.

THETFORD, Norfolk, England.—In five years only one man has been fined for being drunk and disorderly in this town of 4,000.

BOGNOR, England.—C. E. Smith lent his ferret to a friend for hunting rabbits. It escaped. A week later it walked up to Smith's back door and surrendered.

THINGOE, Suffolk, England.—Chimney-pots, barred from prefabricated houses here as "out of keeping with the countryside," now are to be added because ashes blow into the rooms.

LONDON.—A lad, caught by police shooting dice with friends, said: "Just my luck. I've just come from Sunday school and this was my first bet."

MARSHFIELD, Gloucestershire, England.—Notice in an empty house here offers the premises rent free in exchange for domestic duties.

LONDON.—Any British architect who displays his name in letters higher than two inches may be "disciplined," says the Architects' Registration Council.

PLYMOUTH, England.—For the first time since it began publication in 1860, The Western Morning News here recently changed to front-page news instead of advertisements.

MITCHAM, Surrey, England.—John Packham, 20, had "a sort of blackout" after a row with his wife's parents, walked out of the house and punched a woman he had never seen before. He was fined £5 ($20).

HINCKLEY, Leicestershire, England.—Harold Bradbury, a hairdresser, went to a local fancy dress ball dressed as a hobo. On the way he was reported to the police by passersby as a "suspicious-looking character wandering about the streets." He satisfied the police—then the judges. He won first prize.

CAMBRIDGE, England.—To brighten the local market, the town council are buying 24 stall covers with six-inch colored stripes—orange, green and crean (general stalls), black and white (fish), orange and black (bookstalls).

HAUGHTON, Cheshire, England.—Because a father refused to let his 13-year-old daughter cycle ten miles daily, Cheshire Education Authority will pay £200 ($800) a year for a taxi to take her to school (instead of £3 cycle allowance).

More Television In Britain

LONDON.—Television is becoming increasingly popular in Britain as entertainment. The number of licence holders is now just on 100,000. Assuming that each television set is used by an average of five viewers, this means that 500,000 people are enjoying visual as well as broadcast programs each day. A new transmitting centre in the Midlands should be ready before the end of this year. This will bring transmissions within the range of another 500,000 or 600,000 people.
